KILLED 77 TRAITORS—HITLER

JOHNSON'S SLAP BRINGS PROTEST BY NAZIS' ENVOY

U. S. Says He Spoke Unofficially.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—[Special.]—Washington is waiting with interest to see what happens to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson as the result of the official German protest made today against the NRA administrator's frank remarks concerning the recent bloody executions under Hitler.

In a public reply to Chargé d'Affaires Rudolph Leitner, who carried the protest to the state department, Secretary Hull contented himself by authorizing a departmental statement which merely "regretted" that Gen. Johnson's position made it possible for his remarks to be construed as official.

The next steps are up to Germany on the one hand and President Roosevelt on the other. And they raise some interesting possibilities.

Raises Many Questions.

Will the general's superiors "crack down" on the great apostle of "cracking down"? Will the general—who admitted in the same address that he had come at last to see what free speech and press really meant—be on the receiving end of a bit of his own brand of censorship?

When does an administrative official—especially one traveling officially at government expense to sell an administration policy to the public—cease to speak officially and start speaking as an individual, as Gen. Johnson said he did?

Will the Hitler government be content to let the matter drop? Or will it become another international incident like that occasioned when Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, the marine of the famous unbridled tongue, called Mussolini a bit And run driver?

Secretary Hull's Statement.

These were some of the questions being asked as the state department gave out the following official communique concerning Herr Leitner's quarter hour private talk with Secretary Hull:

"The German chargé d'affaires called at the department of state this morning and protested to the secretary of state against the remarks reported to have been made by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in a speech on July 12, 1934 relative to recent events in Germany.

"The secretary of state called the attention of Dr. Leitner to the published statement of Gen. Johnson which appeared in this morning's press to the effect that he was speaking as an individual and not for the state department or for the administration. Mr. Hull confirmed the accuracy of this explanation and said it was to be regretted that the position in the government occupied by the speaker made it possible for remarks uttered by him as an individual to be misconstrued as official."

The statement was given out just as the wires were beginning to bring in Hitler's speech telling the reichstag that the "purging" of the Nazi party had cost the lives of 77 persons.

May Have Secret Approval.

There is a considerable opinion at the capital which believes that the Roosevelt administration is not exactly sorry that the general spoke as he did. His description of his illness over the Nazi killings and his admission that he saw at last how ruthless authority could become when criticism was muzzled, may be counted as a forceful administration answer to opponents who have termed the New Deal a form of Fascism and who have called President Roosevelt and the general himself American Hitlers.

But if Gen. Johnson gets by with his explanation that he was talking as an individual and not a an official it will be somewhat unusual. Administrative officials are usually held responsible for what they say.

If today's mild state department announcement is to be the end of it Gen. Johnson's attack on the Hitler executions will certainly be construed as having approval from higher up.

Butler Affair Different.

If so it will be very different from the Butler affair. In a speech in January, 1931, at Philadelphia the marine officer recounted a story told to him of how Premier Mussolini had run down a child and sped away. The Italian government protested. Secretary of State Stimson sent an official apology to Italy. Gen. Butler was at first ordered court martialed, but was finally let off with a reprimand after he had apologized.

There have been numerous other instances where officials, mostly officers in the service, have suffered for speak-

19 HIGH CHIEFS AMONG THOSE PUT TO DEATH

Says Foes Plotted to Arrest Him.

The full text of Adolf Hitler's speech in which he defended his ruthless crushing of revolt will be found on pages 6 and 7.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

BERLIN, July 13. — With fists clenched and his slight frame shaking with emotion, Adolf Hitler, chancellor of Germany and supreme leader of the National Socialist party, tonight defended his ruthless suppression of a revolt which, he said, had cost 77 lives. Nineteen of those executed were high leaders of Hitler's organization.

His visible audience was 660 hand picked members of the reichstag, who crowded into the Kroll Opera house, the temporary reichstag building, to hear their leader give an account of the rebellion against his authority and an accounting for the blood shed in its suppression.

His invisible audience was made up of millions. His voice went into a radio microphone which carried it into every corner of the world.

Roars Defiance to Enemies.

Hitler roared his defiance at his enemies. In the next breath he pleaded with the Germans to support him.

He spoke for an hour and a half. Sentences were punctuated with frenzied cheers from the throats of the all-Nazi reichstag members. There was a particularly loud burst of applause when the chancellor shouted:

"I gave orders to shoot those who were mainly responsible for treachery. I gave further orders to burn out into the raw flesh the pest boil of our internal well poisoning and the poisoning of foreign countries. I was the supreme court of the land for 24 hours."

Hitler's figure that 77 had been killed on "bloody Saturday" [June 30] was in high contrast to the estimated number of dead. At one time the estimate of death toll was placed at close to 500.

Hitler Lists Victims.

No number had been officially given out previously. Semi-official statements had put the dead as much lower.

The fiery chancellor listed the victims in this order:

Nineteen high leaders of the Storm Troops were executed, as well as 31 Storm Troop subleaders and members and three members of Hitler's black shirted bodyguards.

Thirteen Storm Troop leaders and civilians were shot down when they attempted "to resist arrest." Three others committed suicide. Five non-Storm Troopers, but who were members of the Nazi party, were executed for complicity in the conspiracy, which Hitler said was hatched by his devoted friend of many years, Capt. Ernst Roehm, executed chief of staf of the Storm Troops, and former Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher, who was killed with his wife while "resisting arrest."

Three of Hitler's special guards were shot down for maltreatment of prisoners taken into protective custody.

Attempts to Soothe Relatives.

Addressing himself to the relatives of the slain victims, the chancellor said:

"I feel sorry for the wives and children of those who were shot, but I believe that the misfortune that came to them was only a small fraction of the misfortune that might have descended upon tens of thousands of German men and women."

Other striking sentences which drew great waves of applause were:

"If three traitors in Germany agree to meet with a foreign statesman and carry out this meeting after removing domestic help and giving orders to keep the meeting secret let such men be shot dead, even if it should be true that in a conference thus kept secret from me there was talk only about the weather, or old coins, or similar things.

Hails Nazi Achievements.

"Only he who further follows up the line of development leading to Jan. 30, 1933, can gauge the greatness of the National Socialistic achievement, for we have not only halted the course of fate but have turned it in every way to good fortune.

"Fully respecting the characteristics of our German tribes, we have strengthened the power of the state as an expression of our common will to live and have exalted it above everything else.

"We have guided our people's de-

GYPSY SEERESS FAILS TO SEE APPROACH OF FRIDAY 13TH TROUBLE

Mrs. Dina Morton, 25 years old, is a gypsy who lives in a camp at Ogden and Harlem avenues. She makes a living of sorts by telling fortunes, but she was not psychic enough to realize that yesterday was Friday the 13th and a bad day for public horoscoping.

She was walking during the afternoon in 72d street near Oakley avenue when she was recognized by Mrs. Aleida Farrell, 3155 West 62d street. Mrs. Farrell recalled how Dina had once obtained $11.35 from her by pretending to possess the power to bless money and make it multiply. So Mrs. Farrell called the police and a squad from the Chicago Lawn station took the seeress into custody.

Later another victim, Mrs. Anna Gonata, 7948 South Wood street, identified the gypsy as one who had obtained $35 from her through a similar fraud.

BYRD EXPEDITION REPORTS RECORD METEOR SHOWER

[By Mackay radio to The Chicago Tribune and the New York Times.]

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 13.—The meteor observatory of the Byrd expedition observed all last night an uncharted meteor shower that probably was the most impressive display since the celebrated Leonid shower of 1833, according to Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, senior scientist.

The swiftly expiring streaks of light traversed the sky in such numbers that two recorders had difficulty setting down the observations barked out by four observers sitting in the transparent dome of the observatory. The meteors were recorded at the enormous rate of 300 an hour for each observer. The American Meteor society lists 69 as the maximum number of meteors recorded by a single observer in one hour during a shower. The observations were all made with the naked eye.

The surprisingly high rate Dr. Poulter attributed in part to the excellent visibility. The temperature had dropped to 54 degrees below zero and the air was crystal clear. Dr. Poulter said the observatory had noticed an interesting correlation between meteor activity and temperature. When the temperature falls between 50 and 60 degrees below zero it is possible to see from two to four times more meteors than when the temperature is between zero and 20 below.

Hunt Peddler in Search for Missing Boy

New York, July 13.—[Special.]—An eccentric peddler of toilet articles, who frightened housewives in the Westchester county community of Hartsdale Manor yesterday with strange gestures and mutterings, was sought tonight as a suspect in the disappearance last night of 21 month old Robert Connor from a lonely road near his home.

The peddler was seen alone in Ardsley, four miles from Hartsdale Manor, last night and on the Tarrytown road near Ardsley this morning.

Twenty-four hours had elapsed at 6 o'clock tonight without the discovery of a promising clew to the mystery of the missing boy.

Two Suspects Freed.

Police questioned two persons, but released them. One was a man thought to answer the description of the peddler, the other a woman who spent yesterday afternoon trying to sell stockings and other articles to Hartsdale Manor housewives.

Philip J. McQuillan, Greenburgh chief of police, announced that the woman had been located in another Westchester community tonight and had convinced police she was innocent. He declined to give her name.

McQuillan said she had been suspected because a neighbor of the Connors had seen her driving rapidly past the Connor home in her automobile about the time the child was last seen.

Peddler Identifies Self.

The man was picked up in Seabright, N. J. He identified himself as John Leddy, 47, of Newark, N. J.

The apparent financial condition of the Connor family almost precludes the possibility that the child was kidnaped with a view to a large ransom. The boy's father, Charles H. Connor, was out of work for months before he obtained a position with the insurance department.

Bolt of Lightning Gives Firemen Some Home Work

TWO ARCTIC BOYS SEE 'CIVILIZATION' FOR THE FIRST TIME; THRILLED

EDMONTON, Alta., July 13.—(AP)—Radio and airplanes took a back seat today because Arthur Wellington Watson, 7, and his brother, Gordon Field Watson, 5, were seeing other wonders of the world for the first time.

Street cars, automobiles which "took cows out riding," telephones, signboards, "big bathtubs," and a hundred other things which go unnoticed by millions of other boys and girls were marvels to the arctic lads.

The brothers were flown here, 2,000 miles from their home at Coppermine on the arctic rim, where their father is a trader. They will attend school in Winnipeg. Radio and airplanes they were accustomed to, but the other things thrilled them.

HUSBAND GETS WIRE FOR 'DATE'; WIFE SUES W. U.

Newark, N. J., July 13.—[Special.]—A telegram purporting to arrange for a New York hotel rendezvous, delivered to a husband instead of the wife to whom it was addressed, cost the wife the love of her husband, according to her suit for $75,000 damages filed here today against the Western Union Telegraph company.

The complaint which Mrs. Elizabeth Y. Ford of Newark filed in the United States District court quotes the telegram and its signature.

"Am staying at the New Yorker hotel. If possible meet me Friday 7 p. m.," read the telegram, which was signed "Herbert Smith" and dated April 19 from New York City.

Mrs. Ford was in the south at the time, she said, and when the message arrived at her home her husband opened it and read it. Having read it, her complaint said, he "became suspicious and jealous and the comfort and security he formerly provided were abruptly discontinued." Mrs. Ford's complaint referred to Smith as a "business acquaintance."

Gen. Weygand, French Army Head, Ill in Hospital

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—Gen. Maxime Weygand, head of the French army, has been suffering during the last week from a slight illness. This was revealed today. For the last two days he has been in a private hospital. It was said tonight that his condition was improved.

Leaps to Death from Sky Ride Tower at Fair

Maciej Kaleta, 42 years old, 4936 Magoun street, East Chicago, leaped to his death early last evening from the glass windowed observation platform of the west Sky Ride tower at A Century of Progress Exposition.

The body, hurtling from a height of 618 feet above the earth, struck a support cable and was deflected inward, landing on the roof of the south loading platform at the 219 foot level. At this loading platform passengers board the cars that transport them on the 2,000 foot journey to the east tower of the Sky Ride on Northerly Island.

Spectacles Fall Unbroken.

One of the legs of the victim, severed when it struck the cable, fell to the ground. His spectacles, of the horn rimmed variety, struck in a grassy plot and were unbroken.

Lieut. Ernest Schondorf of the Fair police and Deputy Coroner Stephen Kolanowski, who took charge of the investigation, were unable to find any one who saw the leap. Only one person, who declined to give his name, reported seeing the body as it fell.

At the time the jump was made one guard employed by the Sky Ride was at the top of the tower. He was, however, on the topmost level used for observation purposes. The floor with the glass windows is some ten feet lower, connected with the upper platform by a stairway. This guard, Thomas Goodrich, knew nothing of the tragedy until after the discovery of the body.

Note in Victim's Coat.

Identification of Kaleta was established first through a note found in the gray coat which he left on the platform. It was in Polish and Deputy Coroner Kolanowski translated it as follows:

"My dear wife and children, I am sorry to leave you, but I am forced to go."

The note, unsigned, was addressed to M. B. Kaleta at the East Chicago address. Members of the family were absent last night, but neighbors said that Kaleta, who conducted a small shoe store, had gone to the Fair grounds during the afternoon. There are two children of the couple, a girl 13 years old and a boy 7 years old.

A relative who identified the body of Kaleta after its removal to the county morgue said that he knew of no reason for suicide.

After examining the scene Deputy Coroner Kolanowski ordered that wire screens be placed over any of the glass windows that open on the lower observation platform of the Sky Ride.

COMPANION DIES AS GIRL DRIVES CAR FROM DOCK

New York, July 13.—[Special.]—A girl who was learning to drive an automobile had an almost miraculous escape from death today when the car, accidentally placed in reverse, backed off the dock at the foot of East Seventieth street into 30 feet of swirling tide water.

The girl was rescued by two men after her companion in the car pushed her through the door as the auto fell. Carried by the tide under a coal barge, she came to the surface on the far side. The man's body had not been recovered tonight.

UNIONS TO VOTE ON WALKOUT OF 70,000 TODAY

San Francisco, Cal., July 13.—[Special.]—With the menace of a food shortage and a complete industrial tieup already being felt in the strike ridden San Francisco bay region, a labor unions committee of 600 was named tonight to take action upon a proposed general strike tomorrow morning.

The central labor council's "strategy committee," acting in behalf of about 70,000 union workers not yet on strike, met for several hours this afternoon but was unable to agree on a program for support of the striking longshoremen and maritime workers. It decided instead to delegate the committee of 600, representing all the city's 144 unions, to act.

Taking cognizance of the gravity of the situation, President Roosevelt's labor disputes board issued a warning that if the longshore and maritime strikers and employers cannot be brought together by arbitration some other solution will have to be found.

Strikers May Vote on Arbitration.

This warning was followed by an announcement that the strikers are considering submitting the question of arbitration to a vote. Employers have already agreed to this method of settlement of the labor disturbances precipitated May 9 by the walkout along the Pacific coast of members of the International Longshoremen's association.

Meantime acts of violence were reported from many quarters as the result of unrest and confusion caused by the spread of sympathy strikes. Taxicabs were absent from San Francisco streets as 2,500 drivers walked out this morning, and about 3,500 teamsters in the bay region are on strike.

Sailor Is Shot by Snipers.

A 19 year old sailor was shot by snipers on the water front as he was leaving to serve on a freighter.

A mob of alleged communists and hoodlums stormed six theaters and restaurants in Oakland. Girls employed in a burlesque showhouse fled in panic from the place at the approach of the hoodlums. Four youths were arrested and charged with inciting a riot.

Fighting broke out tonight in Wilmington between strikers and nonstrikers on Harbor boulevard. Four men were seriously injured and twelve arrested. Police were attracted to the scene by the sound of shots.

A number of garden trucks were halted outside the city by pickets, who refused to let the truckers proceed into San Francisco with their loads of fresh fruit and vegetables.

The shortage of food, as well as of gasoline and fuel, became an actual threat which sent housewives rushing to grocery stores to lay in supplies of canned goods. In many instances grocery store shelves were depleted of supplies ordinarily sufficient to last as long as a month.

Many Gas Tanks Empty.

Gasoline was scarce, with nearly all service stations reporting empty tanks and one hanging up a sign: "We have plenty of water and air—no gas."

City authorities reported no one was going hungry, but that some articles of food were nearly impossible to obtain. Restaurants unable to fill fresh meat orders offered ham.

A large chain restaurant concern, whose supply trucks were stopped, said its establishments will be forced to close—probably tomorrow.

Fresh fruits and vegetables vanished under the rush of worried housewives and commission houses announced they were "cleaned out." There were no trucks to move a limited amount in cold storage.

Milk deliveries were uninterrupted and strike leaders repeated assurances that this necessity would not be curtailed. Other dairy products were diminishing. Bread still was available, but curtailment was reported probable.

Appeal Made to Mayor.

The Apartment House Owners and Managers' association made a direct appeal to Mayor Angelo J. Rossi for delivery of oil for heating purposes. Cold baths were reported becoming more a matter of necessity than choice.

"If the garbage situation isn't cleared up," Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer, said, "San Francisco faces an epidemic of rats." He also mentioned bubonic and other plagues that might result.

The city health officer, following the illness of a family of 12, which he attributed to stale food, warned the public to cook everything thoroughly and to use tomato, grapefruit, pineapple, and other juices generously to offset the lack of fresh vegetables.

Meat shortages were reported from the zoo, the city prison and county jail, and other institutions. Hospitals were being supplied through agreement with the strikers.

Will Not Guard Bridges.

Hundreds of persons were reported in an exodus from San Francisco to escape the threat of a famine and further violence. Their departure was said to have been hastened by the report of railway officials that a band of communists is heading here from Seattle to destroy all highway and railroad facilities.

State officials, however, said they were making no plans for guarding highway bridges because they were too large to be destroyed easily.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer, said the "very health of the city is in danger" if the situation is not relieved in a short time. Fifteen cases of dysentery were reported in a Leavenworth street apartment house.

It was estimated there is sufficient meat on hand to last residents of this city for five days, but wholesale butchers already have walked out and retail meat cutters have voted to stop wielding their cleavers tomorrow night.

Stores Limit Sales.

A number of stores were limiting sales as demands for their rapidly decreasing stock increased throughout the day with no possibility of replenishments in sight.

A gasoline shortage which threatened to paralyze all automobile trafic caused oil companies to organize an emergency committee to attempt to cope with the situation.

Up to the present time nearly 100,000 workers in San Francisco and the bay cities of Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda have pledged themselves to walk out in sympathy with the 27,000 striking maritime workers if their strategy committees say the word.

Building Trades Meet.

Among those who met today to discuss strike plans were representatives of 20,000 members of the Building trades council.

The number of strikers who have already walked out in a sympathy protest for the immediate settlement of the water front strike reached 6,370 with the addition of the cab drivers. Approximately 5,000 more union butchers, laundrymen, and retail deliverymen will join them tomorrow night.

The general strike movement also gained considerable support in other cities. Eight unions in Portland have now signified their intention of striking while a number of unions in Los Angeles have discussed a similar proposal.

As a result of the prolonged disturbance more than $1,000,000 worth of strike riot and civil commotion insurance has been written in the last week, it was estimated. It was predicted that the rates for this type of insurance will be trebled in Pacific coast cities if violence is not immediately quelled.

Governor Warns Strikers.

Sacramento, Cal., July 13.—(AP)—Acting Governor Frank Merriam said today if strikers do not make provision for uninterrupted transportation of necessary food and medical supplies into San Francisco and the bay region "it will become necessary for independent action to be taken."

"There must be no shortage of food in and around San Francisco because of strike conditions," the governor said.

Mediation Fails in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 13.—(AP)—Fruitless attempts of federal mediators to open negotiations between Minneapolis truck drivers, ready to strike for higher wages and broader union representation, and employers left the weeks' long deadlock undisturbed today.

Three days away from the scheduled start of the strike—at midnight Monday—the regional labor board itself and the drivers' union were criticized by the employers' advisory group for going "beyond agreed terms" and misinterpretations.

Charges of "dodging the issue" from the union heads, and "deliberate" misstatements from the employers flew fast, while the labor board, awaiting further conferences with Floyd Olson, failed to bring the disputants together.

POWERFUL BOMB FOUND PLANTED ON PARIS STREET

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—Either the "Three Judges of Hell" or a competing bomber struck a new note of terrorism today. A powerful infernal machine was found at the base of a lamp post.

The bomb, which recalled the campaign of terrorism by "The Three Judges," contained five pounds of powerful explosive. Wires connected a battery to a cheap clock set to make contact. If the bomb had exploded pieces of the lampost would have been hurled in all directions. The explosive in the infernal machine was described as equaling two "75" shells, famous during the war.

Workmen found the bomb as they opened the base of the lamppost to clean it.

TIGERS TO STALK MEAT, DEAD OR ALIVE, ON COAST

San Francisco, Cal., July 13.—(AP)—A parade of hungry lions and tigers in search of meat was promised here today as strike conditions cut off the food supply of Fleischhacker zoo.

Announcing he had been denied a permit by striking unions for delivery of meat to the zoo, George Bistany, superintendent, declared the animals at the zoo eat 400 pounds of meat a day.

"I'm going to get it for them, too," he said. "They're going to parade to butchertown on trucks. If any one wants to stop them, all right, but they're going to get meat, dead or alive."

Switchmen Face 'Hazard,' Conference Here Holds

A recommendation that switchmen should not be required to work under present conditions in the strike of 27,000 longshoremen on the Pacific coast, as an "extraordinary hazard" exists, was adopted last night by the International Association of General Chairmen, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and approved by A. F. Whitney, brotherhood president. The recommendation asserted that in an attempt to get business some managements were unduly pressing their men to take risks.

2 SLAIN, 3 SHOT IN RELIEF RIOTS AT CLEVELAND

Agitators Are Blamed for Outbreak.

Cleveland, O., July 13.—[Special.]—A man and a woman were shot dead and a policeman and two other persons were seriously wounded today in a bloody riot staged at the Cuyahoga county relief administration offices in the busy downtown area. The disorder spread rapidly to relief stations and grocery stores in other sections of the city.

The dead:
Unidentified Negress.
The wounded:
Patrolman Thomas Gibbons, shot in hip.
Andrew Massisak, 42, shot in leg.

Thousands of pedestrians were attracted by the gunfire and crowded around relief offices at 2100 East 40th street. Within a few minutes trafic was snarled for many blocks in all directions as motorists halted out of curiosity or were stopped by the sirens of ambulances.

Four More Riots Started.

Less than an hour after the downtown battle had ended four more riots had broken out at relief stations and grocery stores where food is dispensed on county orders. Two women charity workers were beaten. Police broke up the disturbances and arrested about a dozen persons.

Police officials expressed the belief that the spreading riot indicated a concerted movement on the part of agitators to harass the relief agencies in the city. Chief of Police George Matowitz issued orders to all policemen to remain on duty until further notice.

The rioting in the downtown relief offices started when some one in the milling crowd which jammed the place seized a revolver from the holster of Policeman James Veseley and started firing. Frantic persons within range of the spitting gun made a mad dash for the exits and within ten minutes the room was cleared of all except the dead and wounded and a guard of policemen.

Women Crawl Under Desks.

Thirty women office workers employed in the offices scampered under desks or fled to outer rooms of the administration building just as the firing started.

Patrolman Veseley, who was a member of a riot squad detailed to the offices to preserve order, told of the sudden violence that followed the storming of the offices' doors by the bellowing crowd.

"When the mob rushed in I became separated from other members of the squad," the policeman said. "Suddenly a man grabbed me around the neck. Before I realized what he was doing he grabbed my gun from its holster.

"Then he whirled and fired at Policeman Gibbons. He discharged several shots as Gibbons fired back. I saw two or three people go down right near me. Our lieutenant was pushing his way toward the man with the gun, but he was too late."

Wounded Policeman's Story.

When the shooting was over the wounded and dying all lay within a few feet of where Veseley had lost his gun. Policeman Gibbons was stretched out full length, another man had pitched on his face beside him and the other victims lay moaning or dead near by.

"The first I knew that the crowd was becoming more violent than they usually are at relief headquarters was when they began to yell threats and then stormed the doors," said Policeman Gibbons when he was taken to a hospital.

"In a moment they were inside and milling around, yelling and shouting. In the midst of the noise a man near me pulled a gun and started firing. I drew my gun and fired back. I don't know whether I hit him or not.

"When it was all over I saw a man and woman who appeared to be crouching on the floor. I guess they had been hit, for they were moaning."

The police said they could identify some of the mob that participated in the rioting as members of the council of the unemployed with communistic sympathies.

LEGION DEMANDS U. S. DEPORTATION OF NONCITIZENS

Article on War Topic Is Condemned.

Three resolutions passed by the Cook County council of the American Legion at its meeting in the city council chambers on July 5 were made public yesterday. One of the resolutions urges the deportation of all residents of the United States who are not citizens and have not made efforts to become naturalized.

This resolution is aimed at immigrants who "have had sufficient opportunity to, but have wilfully neglected and refused to become citizens of the United States, although many are occupying lucrative positions." These people should immediately be removed from the country, the resolution states.

Condemn Epworth War Article.

A second resolution condemns an article entitled "A Decision Must Be Made" appearing in the March 3 issue of the Epworth Herald. In this article, signed by Winifred L. Chappell, the statement was made that in the event of war the youth of America should go to the battlefields or munition factories for the purpose of "sabotaging war preparations and war and spoiling war materials and machines."

The legion resolution declares that the article is seditious and tends to inflame and poison the minds of the country's youth.

Attacks Musicians' Union.

The third resolution attacks the Chicago Musicians' union for its action on Memorial day in allegedly preventing drum and bugle corps of legion posts from broadcasting because the members of the corps did not belong to the union. According to the resolution, the corps were to have broadcast from the Court of States at the World's Fair but were restrained by the union.

"This action on the union's part is severely condemned," the resolution reads, "not only as an act derogatory to the American Legion, but as an unpatriotic act, an act which the legion here challenges not in a spirit of antagonism to labor or labor organizations, but rather in the spirit of true Americanism."

HUNT FOUR SALOON BANDITS.

The West North avenue police yesterday were searching for four men who held up Frank Boras, 2426 Rice street, in a tavern at 2732 West Chicago avenue and took $135 from him.

Mount Carmel, Ill., July 13.—(AP)—Two brothers and a boy companion drowned today when they stepped into a deep hole while swimming in the Wabash river.

SLAYING OF GIRL CONVICT COSTS PRISON HEAD JOB

Forces Governor to Ask Resignation.

Little Rock, Ark., July 13.—[Special.]—Death of a girl convict of 22, who, during her turbulent lifetime, murdered two men and escaped four times from prison, led today to the removal of A. G. Stedman as superintendent of the penitentiary.

Helen Spence Eaton became a burning issue in the gubernatorial campaign, which will close with the Democratic primary Aug. 14.

Shot in the back of the head by a "trusty" guard 24 hours after her escape Tuesday from the state farm for women at Jacksonville, she was the fourteenth convict to die at the hands of trusties, or posses composed largely of trusties, since May 23, 1933, at the prison farms at Tucker and Jacksonville.

Sets Politics in Motion.

By her death she has accomplished what powerful political forces tried in vain to do for more than a year—the ousting of Supt. Stedman. Even the killing of the girl might not have brought this about but for the current campaign.

When news that Helen was killed reached the office of Gov. Futrell Wednesday afternoon his secretaries and advisers were visibly disturbed over the possibilities of the affair figuring in the political campaign.

Futrell has as opponent Howard Reed, who was state controler under the incumbent's predecessor, Harvey Parnell, and made the race against Futrell in 1932 against Parnell's wishes. As a result, Reed was dismissed as controler immediately after the votes in the primary were counted two years ago.

Supt. Stedman's resignation has been called for repeatedly since he was appointed by Futrell early in 1933, but until Helen Spence Eaton was killed, the governor's closest friends refused to take up the fight against the superintendent.

Use "Trusties" as Guards.

Long before Stedman was installed as superintendent, Arkansas relied upon "trusty" guards to keep order at its three prison farms—at Tucker [for white men], at Jacksonville [for women], and at Cummins [for Negroes]. Social workers have criticized the system many times, and investigations have been conducted, but never with any substantial results.

Once before Stedman was on the way out, with a majority of the board ready to discharge him, but the governor called attention to a provision in the law giving him sole authority to remove the superintendent. A member of the board resigned because the governor would not force Stedman to quit.

The governor then appointed Walter Helms of Texarkana, who subsequently was elected chairman of the board. Last night the chairman went to the prison farm at Tucker to ask for Stedman's resignation. He didn't get it.

At 2 o'clock this morning Chairman Helms telephoned associates on the board, advising them to meet with him and Stedman at the capitol today. Removal of Stedman and the appointment of S. L. Todhunter, former warden of the penitentiary, to succeed him as superintendent resulted from this meeting.

Those who have sought Stedman's discharge have stressed the number of homicides for which "trusty" guards have been responsible under the present administration. Stedman and his aids have usually attributed the killings to attempts on the part of prisoners to escape, but there are some who are skeptical.

AIR PASSENGER SERVICE TO N. O. BEGINS JULY 17

Officials of Pacific Seaboard Airlines, which are now flying mail over a route between Chicago and New Orleans, announced yesterday they will be prepared to begin carrying passengers on July 17. The company has completed thirty days of preliminary operations and emergency landing fields have been constructed along the route in accordance with department of commerce instructions.

Carleton Putnam, president of the company, announcing the airline will operate four place Bellanca planes, said: "Connecting the industrial and distributing areas of Illinois and Missouri with the cotton, timber, and sugar country of the Mississippi south, it provides schedules approximate in all respects to those previously flown over the midcontinent route, and it proposes to expand its operations both as to speed and spaciousness of equipment rapidly.

ROOSEVELT GOES FISHING NEAR OLD PIRATE HIDEOUT

Halts Warship Off Pacific Island.

COCOS ISLAND, Pacific Ocean, July 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, headed for the Hawaiian islands aboard the cruiser Houston, paused today at uninhabited Cocos island, an old pirate rendezvous, and immediately started to fish.

He left the cruiser in a launch, which set out over quiet water to find a likely fishing spot. The President's sons, Franklin and John, and Capt. Brown, the executive's naval aid, went along on the fishing expedition.

The Houston and its convoy, the New Orleans, dropped anchors on the northwest side of the little island, a mere dot in the Pacific with a circumference of about 13 miles and lying about 500 miles west of the Panama canal.

The President planned to remain here over night. The layover led naval officers and others in the presidential party to consider a hunting expedition to the shore. It was reported that game of various kinds is plentiful.

The date of the President's arrival at Hilo, Hawaii, today was set for July 25. He will arrive at Honolulu the next day for a two day visit.

ACTRESS SUES BRITISH PEER FOR LOST LOVE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 13.—A suit for alleged breach of promise, filed by Miss Angela Joyce, actress, against Lord Revelstoke, was entered for trial today.

Miss Joyce, who four years ago was chosen "Miss England" for an international beauty competition in the United States, has appeared both on the stage and in the films in this country and in Hollywood.

Lord Revelstoke, who is 23 years of age, succeeded to the title in January. On March 1 he married Miss Flora Fermor-Hesketh. The action will be tried by a special jury. It is unlikely that the trial will begin until the end of the year.

WOMAN STAVISKY APPEALS TERM; GETS EXTRA YEAR

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—Mme. Marthe Hanau, "financial wizard" whose methods a court decided amounted to swindling, was sentenced to an extra year in jail today when her appeal from a two-year sentence was decided.

The court of appeals, acting on the case after a three year court battle, sentenced her to three years on charges growing out of her publication of Gazette de Franc, organ of the enterprises in which she undertook to make large profits for investors of small sums.

WIFE SUES FOR DIVORCE FROM CYRUS S. EATON

Charges Neglect by Ex-Utility Magnate.

Akron, O., July 13.—(AP)—Cyrus S. Eaton, who rose to strength in the financial world with his operations in steel and utilities before the depression, is sued for divorce and alimony in a petition filed here June 16 by his wife, Margaret House Eaton.

The action, which charges gross neglect, did not come to light until today. Employés at his 200 acre estate near here said Eaton now is in New York.

Although famous for his financial industrial deals, Eaton was considering entering the Baptist ministry in 1907 when he first met his wife. They were married the following year. They are parents of seven children, the eldest 24, the youngest 8. The divorce petition asks provision for their custody and support.

Eaton was a multi-millionaire as recently as 1929, when he reached the apex of his power. In the two following years he engaged in a Titanic legal battle with officials of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company over their plans to merge with the Bethlehem Steel corporation. He defeated the merger, but the costs of the battle and losses in the depression virtually wiped out his fortune. Since then he has maintained his country home at Northfield, near here, and has been attempting to recoup his financial losses.

PROBE LAUNCHED INTO FLOGGING OF DAIRYMEN

State's Attorney Acts After 5 Are Beaten.

Five dairy company employes were still under doctors' care yesterday, from a merciless flogging administered by chains in the hands of hoodlums, while Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, was launching an investigation.

It was learned that attempts had been made recently by the Milk Wagon Drivers' union to unionize employes at the Blue Ribbon Diary, Inc., 3659 Harrison street, where the flogging took place, but union officials were vigorous in denying their men were implicated.

One of Floggers Tipsy.

"We don't know yet who is responsible," said Capt. Gilbert. "We were told at least one of the two armed assailants of the diary workers was intoxicated. Perhaps this is just the work of two individual drunken hoodlums.

"Nevertheless we are questioning every one who might possibly be implicated. We are telling them that such brutal attacks as this will not be tolerated, and it will be to their interests to help stop them."

Steve Sumner, an official of the milk wagon drivers' union, said that the Blue Ribbon diary had been approached about two weeks ago on the subject of unionization.

No Enmity, Says Union Official.

"There was no trouble whatever," Sumner said. "The dairy company people seemed agreeable to the matter, but we put off definite action for a time at their request. There was no enmity and no quarrel."

Henry Bresler, 25 years old, of 3256 Maypole avenue, part owner of the dairy company, said he had been approached by a man "representing himself as a union agent."

"He demanded that our men be unionized," Bresler said, "and I told him we would join as soon as two of our dairies had signed up. I have never opposed the union, but joining at the present time would mean we would have to increase the price of milk—impractical under present conditions.

"Agent" Makes Threat.

"But this supposed agent told me: 'You'd better join or we won't be responsible for what may happen.'"

Bresler said he had no definite knowledge as to whether the man who approached him actually was connected with a union or not.

INDICT HOODLUM FOR ATTACK ON STATE WITNESS

Carl Bullaro, 2727 Lexington street, young hoodlum who attacked a state witness who refused to be intimidated in a burglary case, yesterday was reported named in a true bill voted by the grand jury.

Richard Johnston, 45 year old war veteran of 739 South California avenue, who was beaten by Bullaro and two other hoodlums because of his testimony in the burglary case, yesterday appeared before the grand jury to testify against his assailants. Bullaro was charged with intimidating a state witness, but two others, James Stanley, 3149 Polk street, and Tony Pellegrino, 2840 Taylor street, were released after questioning for lack of evidence linking them with the assault.

Johnston, the veteran who says "these neighborhood rats can't scare me," caused the arrest of Leo Tiolkowski, 706 South Carolina avenue; Charles Nocoletti, 622 North St. Louis avenue; Matty Codulo, 3102 Flournoy street, and Ralph Giombetta, 2909 Adams street, when he surprised them trying to rob a fishing tackle store. After winning the true bill against Bullaro yesterday Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty had the burglary case set for trial before Chief Justice Finnegan on Monday.

STEEL WAGE PACT REACHED WITH INDEPENDENTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 13.—(AP)—An accord on the basis of pay for mill workers in several branches of the steel industry was reached tonight by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and the Western Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers' association.

The agreement varies little from agreements drawn between the union and independent operators in other years. It makes the customary provision that wage scales shall be governed by conditions in the industry the rate of pay to be adjusted according to the selling prices of steel.

Michael F. Tighe, 76 year old president, said the contracts, which were signed with seven independents associated with the manufacturers' group were "satisfactory and favorable." Elias Jenkins of Youngstown, secretary of the operators, asserted the four days of conferences and the agreements "were in every way amicable."

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 30; recovered, 26; stripped, 2 [from police records for the twenty-four hours ending at midnight Thursday].

Judge Joseph A. Graber in the Auto court yesterday sentenced Joseph Tworek, 18 years old, 1323 North Irving avenue, to one year in the Bridewell and fined him $10 for attempted auto larceny. Tworek was arrested July 11 by bellhops from the Devonshire hotel, 18 East Ohio street, who surprised him and another youth in the act of stealing a car from in front of the hotel. Howard Alexander of Houston, Tex., owner of the automobile, appeared to prosecute Tworek.

PARENTS OF TWIN BOYS

Bing Crosby, radio singer and actor, and his wife, the former Dixie Lee, who yesterday became the parents of twin boys. Both babies are "doing splendidly," it was reported.

In Incubator

Hollywood, Cal., July 13.—[Special.]—Bing Crosby has two more reasons to croon, for twin sons were born today to Dixie Lee, actress wife of the singing actor at Cedars of Lebanon hospital. Mrs. Crosby, who hadn't expected her babies for a month, was taken to the hospital last night. The babies, who are in the hospital incubator, were said to be small but satisfactorily healthy. The Crosbys have one other child, Gary Evan, 13 months.

KENTUCKY 'MOON' STILL SHINES FOR BLUEGRASS FOLK

Stills Grow in Number and Size.

Cincinnati, O., July 13.—(AP)—"Pale Kentucky moon" is "shining" more than ever.

Not the moon of poets and lovers—but the kind that trickles from copper coils, in mountain fastnesses—and cities—of the blue grass. Compared to prohibition days, the stills appear to be of the "bigger and better" variety, according to figures disclosed here by headquarters of district No. 6, alcohol tax unit of the department of justice.

The district comprises Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Michigan.

The figures for the district as a whole would indicate that repeal of dry statutes has not hampered the activities of those who manufacture moonshine.

Stills Are Larger.

Seizures recorded here indicate stills are in greater number, and larger, than ever before, but instances of fatalities and wounds to enforcement officers have dropped virtually to zero in recent time.

Kentucky, traditionally famous for its "liquor, fast horses, and beautiful women," apparently is maintaining its "leadership" even in the field of illicitly manufactured "hard stuff," figures show.

Because of recent merger of treasury and department of justice branches of tax enforcement and administration activities, record available at Cincinnati headquarters of the present alcohol tax unit, are incomplete. The majority of the records of the previous force have been sent to Washington, F. L. Boyd, supervisor in charge of the district, said.

But figures of two typical months of the post-repeal period, and those of one month before repeal, would indicate that Kentucky is outdone by none in the district.

259 Seizures in Month.

of 173 stills seized from May 10 [date of the merger] to the end of that month, Kentucky provided 57, Tennessee, also a traditional home of moonshine "likker" was second with 53; Michigan third, with 43, and Ohio fourth, with 25. For the month as a whole, unclassified by states, there were 259 seizures.

In June, also, Kentucky continued to lead the way, with 60 stills confiscated. Tennessee yielded 51, Michigan 41, and Ohio 19.

Federal officers said the records showed that in a typical pre-repeal month [March, 1933] the average capacity of stills seized, was 112 gallons, while the report of May, 1934, indicated an average capacity of 198 gallons.

U. S. Agents "Crack Down."

Federal enforcement agencies have "cracked down" even harder since repeal, the records show.

In March, 1933, selected as a typical month of the pre-repeal era, the average fine, for the district, was $135, and the average jail sentence imposed was 280 days.

In May, 1934, the average fine had jumped from $272—more than 100 per cent—and the average jail term was 483 days.

DEATH CLAIMS GIRL VICTIM OF HIT-RUN DRIVER

Dorothy Sistak, 7 years old, died at the county hospital yesterday of injuries incurred July 8 when she was struck by a hit and run driver as she played in front of her home at 3136 South 48th court, Cicero.

The death of the Sistak girl and one other person yesterday, increased the Cook county motor traffic toll to 644 since Jan. 1. The other victim:

George Krupzyski, 14 years old, 1524 McHenry street. Died at the Martha Washington hospital of injuries suffered Thursday when he fell from the trailer of a truck driven by Alvin Kohl of Edgar, Wis., in front of 2278 Elston avenue.

John Balsaitis, 21 years old, 4307 Archer avenue, was booked on two charges of manslaughter by the New City police yesterday after deaths of two persons who had been hit by Thursday of two persons who had been hit by his car. He will be arraigned in the Felony court Monday morning. The victims were Andrew Mandelowski, 55 years old, 5212 South Kedzie avenue, and Vokel Kuzmenka, 54 years old, 5250 South Albany avenue.

JINX DAY? LOTS OF RASH CHICAGO FOLK IGNORE IT

It's Dull for One Man, So He Marries.

A black cat walked under a ladder and Friday the 13th was ushered in yesterday. But despite such inauspicious augury there were many in the city who flouted the thirteenth jinx.

Bravest of the brave were Samuel Schwartz, 41 years old, 5841 Winthrop avenue, known as the "strawberry king" of Minocqua, Wis., and Miss Eleanor I. Brothers, 24 years old, 922 Glendale place. They were the 13th couple to take out a marriage license at the county building bureau, and then hurried into the marriage court, a few yards away, where Judge Charles B. Adams of Canton made them one.

Season Dull; He Weds.

"The strawberry season is dull right now," said Schwartz, "so I thought it would be a good time to get married."

There was another wedding at the Midget Village in the Fair. The bride was Grace Guadagno, 25 years old, 49 inches high, and the groom was Harvey B. Williams, 26 years old, 48 inches high. Neither is superstitious. The ceremony was performed by Judge Alfred O. Erickson of the Municipal court, who towered above the principals and a majority of the guests, representing the village, which turned out en masse for the event.

At the beginning it looked as if the page and flower girl would steal the show. They were Capt. W. Werner, 21 inches tall, and Margaret Ann Robinson, 18 inches tall.

Twenty-six members of the Anti-Superstition society—twice thirteen, you know—met yesterday for their annual jinx flouting luncheon, and performed such rites as would make the superstitious quake. But nothing happened. At exactly 13 minutes past the noon hour, they sat down to luncheon in the Brook Hill farm exhibit at the World's Fair.

Decries Superstition's Evils.

Twenty-six mirrors, each one calculated to bring seven years' bad luck, were shattered. Salt was spilled with abandon. Three lights from a single match were common.

Nathaniel Leverone, president of the society and secretary of the Chicago Crime commission, spoke on the absurdities of evil portents. George Rossetter, former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, known as "keeper of the salt," decried such superstitions that affect civic and economic life.

It appeared that the Friday the Thirteenth jinx was dispelled when Barney Oldfield, master driver and speed artist, won the Chrysler Anti-Superstition race in car No. 13. His 1904 Maxwell was the first and only car out of the thirteen to finish the mile and a quarter race. He was acclaimed winner.

Superstitions about room 13 and the 13th floor in the large hotels varied. The Drake, Morrison, Sherman, and Great Northern hotels have no floor numbered 13. A. P. Anderson, assistant manager of the Stevens hotel, however, said room 1313 was considered the luckiest in the house. An elderly woman, once a guest there, inherited a large fortune a few days after she left, he said.

No Fear of Room 1313.

At the Palmer house it was said that room 1313 usually is occupied. Thirteen meetings were scheduled at the hotel yesterday.

Others who scouted the jinx day were Martha, Frances, and John Jr. Prusinski, 3817 Lowell avenue, triplets, who came into the world 17 years ago yesterday. All three, who are students at the Carl Schurz High school, asserted the jinx day had brought them good fortune. They were entertained at a birthday luncheon in Marshall Field's tearoom by Dr. Petra M. Dahl, who was in attendance at their birth.

Abe Marco, president of the Marco Liquor company, 157 North Wabash avenue, received a letter in the mail yesterday, accompanied by a "jinx" $2 bill, from a man whose conscience bothered him. The letter writer said he had walked out of the liquor company twenty-six years ago with a quart of whisky without paying for it.

WOMAN ROBBED BY 2 YOUTHS.

Mrs. Alice Branner, manager of an apartment building at 4710 Woodlawn avenue, was robbed of $250 yesterday by two well-dressed young gunmen who accosted her in her office.

HALSTED STREET DOORWAY SELLING HALTED BY COURT

Customer pulling, that venerable art of wheedling the sidewalk trade in much the manner of the "spider and the fly," has broken out again among the vociferous shopkeepers of Halsted street. It reached the pitch where officers of the Halsted-Roosevelt Business Men's association yesterday asked and received from Judge William V. Brothers a temporary injunction enjoining eight firms from the practice.

The degree of the cajoling was the principal point at issue during the hearing. Attorney Harry Okin, for the association, declared it was present in all its oldtime insistency. Combating him was Attorney Edward Halligan, who insisted a merchant had a perfect right to stand in the entry way of his establishment, off the street, and propound the excellence of his wares to passers-by. Judge Brothers held with the plaintiff but Halligan indicated he would appeal.

Max Shore, president of the association, said the "pullers" were especially active between Roosevelt road and 14th street. "We felt," he said, "that the shopper or the passer-by has the right to walk or shop on any street without being molested or solicited in any way on the public sidewalks."

MAYOR DELAYS APPROVING 3 A. M. SALOON CLOSING

Mayor Kelly said yesterday he was still undecided as to whether he would sign the amended ordinance, passed Wednesday by the city council, providing that saloons might remain open until 3 a. m., instead of until 2 a. m., on Sundays.

"There is some merit in the idea," the mayor said, "but I have until the next regular council meeting—Sept. 12—to decide on the matter, and I want to consider all angles of it.

"We must remember that Chicago is a big city, and that we are entertaining thousands of visitors to the Fair, who want to have fun. Many of them wish to stay out later than 2 a. m., particularly if they attend a theater, then wish a late supper and some dancing.

"But I will study the question and ask for reports as to conditions before I take any action."

WALLACE EXPLAINS WHY NEW DEAL HAS LOST IN MIDDLE WEST

Washington, D. C., July 13.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace told reporters today he believed any apparent decline in popularity of the administration in the midwest was due to the fact that "the corn belt has received very little in benefit payments."

The secretary said that on a recent trip to Madison, Wis., to speak before the Institute of Coöperatives he had "found the administration more popular than I had anticipated."

He compared the sentiment of the corn belt during the past year "to that which might have occurred if the south had continued with six per cent cotton during the past year."

The people of the middle west "lean Republican instinctively until the pain is too great," he added.

"Under a Democratic administration I don't know what they would relapse to."

RAIN FORECAST TODAY; HOT SUN PARCHES WEST

Electrical Storms and Hail Strike State.

Showers and thunderstorms, according to the official forecast, will occur in the Chicago area today and possibly tomorrow. It was also indicated that the temperature will be somewhat higher than that of yesterday, when a maximum of 82 was registered at 10:15 a. m.

This moderate mark contrasted sharply with extremely high readings in sunny Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Missouri and the Rocky Mountain states. At Concordia, Kas., the high was 114, establishing an all time record at that point. It was 108 at Kansas City, Mo., 106 at Wichita, Kas., and 100 at Omaha, Neb.

Lightning and Hail.

In the east central states temperatures generally were more moderate, although in a number of cities the 90 mark was exceeded.

Severe electrical storms swept over central Illinois yesterday and caused considerable damage. Near Pana six horses belonging to W. I. Curry, all standing under a tree during a shower, were struck and killed by a bolt of lightning. Several buildings at Rock Island were struck by lightning and a hailstorm damaged crops on a three mile front in Kane county.

There was precipitation in fair volume over parts of the middle west. The fall at Fort Wayne, Ind., was nearly an inch. Detroit had .44 inch and Springfield, Ill. .48 inch. Davenport, Ia., reported 1.10 inches.

Missouri Stock Dying.

While the effects of the long spring drouth have been minimized in favored regions that had sufficient rains in June and early June, according to Wallace Crossley, state relief director for Missouri, cattle are dying in the fields of his state for want of pasturage and water. He urged that great care be given to the conservation of all the stock water that is left.

A dam at Narraticon lake, near Swedesboro, N. J., was washed out in a heavy storm yesterday. Rains in eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and southern New Jersey were accompanied by lightning which killed three persons.

Omaha, Council Bluffs Train, Bus Operators Given Raise

Omaha, Neb., July 13.—(AP)—Omaha and Council Bluffs tram and bus operators today obtained an increase in wages of three cents an hour, retroactive to last April 16, under a finding of an arbitration board appointed after a recent four day street car strike here. The rate of pay will be raised from 52 to 55 cents an hour, Fred H. Hamilton, president of the street railway company, issued a statement saying the company felt the increase should not have been granted, but would comply with the board's findings.

COURT IRRITATED AT MANY DELAYS; SITS IN KITCHEN

Invalid's Son-in-Law Is Held to Grand Jury.

Eight times the case of Steve Plecki, a former undertaker, charged with stealing $1,300 from his mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Cikosswski, 87 years old, with whom he lived at 4527 South Seeley avenue, was continued in the Felony court because the aged woman was too ill to testify.

When Plecki's attorney, Walter Prendergast, moved for the ninth continuance yesterday morning, Judge Alfred O. Erickson announced that if Mrs. Cikosswski was unable to come to court, the court would go to Mrs. Cikosswski.

At 1:15 p. m. the Felony court, consisting of the judge, two bailiffs, an interpreter, assistant state's attorney, and other principals, wormed through an excited knot of neighbors down a passage to a flat at the back of the lot. Within a few minutes the Felony court was resumed in a cramped kitchen with the kitchen table for the judge's bench, and a straight kitchen chair for the witness stand.

Wears Apron on Stand.

Mrs. Cikosswski, wearing a flowered gingham apron, was helped from her bed to the improvised witness stand. After half an hour's testimony, Plecki was held to the grand jury on bonds of $5,000. He was given until Monday to make bond.

Through an interpreter, Mrs. Cikosswski testified that she had buried $1,200, her life's savings, in a glass jar in the dirt floor of the basement. On March 28 she said she sent Steve down to the basement to chop wood. Then she had a hunch, she added, and discovered the money was missing. The money had been kept in a bank, she testified, until banks began failing.

Steve, who is 37 years old, told a different story:

"I did chop wood and I did find the money, but I didn't steal it. I had told the old lady I would clean up the basement and make a summer kitchen.

Tells of Finding Cash.

"I chopped wood and then started clearing out things. My ankle turned in a soft spot in the dirt. There was a jar buried there that looked as if it ought to be thrown out, too. I examined it and there was a roll of bills inside.

"I went right out and paid some bills. I had a few drinks and fell asleep on a newsstand at West 51st street and South Ashland avenue. When I awoke I had only $30 left. I don't know what became of it. I didn't mean to steal it."

Still another story was offered by Steve's sister-in-law, Mrs. Frances Goralski, who testified that Steve had spent the money together with some of his own on a round of drinking sprees. Mrs. Goralski is a sister of Plecki's wife, Helen.

Judge Erickson raised Plecki's bond, which had been set at $2,000 at the time of his arrest in April. The $2,000 bond was posted at that time by his father.

QUINTS EXCEED 16 LBS.; MOTHER BACK AT WORK

CORBEIL, Ont., July 13.—(AP)—The forty-six day old Dionne quintuplets continued their gains in weight today, each of the five little girls picking up since yesterday.

The total weight of the babies reached 16 pounds 3½ ounces, after the day's gain of 3 ounces was recorded.

Mrs. Ovila Dionne, 25 year old mother of the "quints," was able to do light housework today, having shown satisfactory improvement from her weakened condition.

BRITAIN BLESSES FRENCH PLAN TO 'ENFORCE' PEACE

Mussolini Also Approves Security Pact Project.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 13.—Blessings on an eastern European security pact, but no new commitments from Great Britain.

This is the gist of a statement made to the house of commons today by Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon. He was reporting on the recent visit to London of Louis Barthou, Frence foreign minister. Barthou came, Sir John said, to tell Britain what he had been doing on his recent tour around Europe, and to enlist British approval of the French scheme for an eastern Locarno pact including Russia, Germany, Poland, the Baltic states, and Czechoslovakia.

This would involve the entrance of Russia and the return of Germany to the league of nations.

Mussolini Backs Policy.

With all of these objects, Simon said, Britain was entirely sympathetic, but where it drew the line was linking the eastern Locarno pact with the western treaty in any way which might involve Britain in further commitments to fight on the continent.

Simon read a cablegram from Premier Mussolini of Italy in which il duce expressed the same point of view and aligned Italy in close agreement with Britain.

Simon declared that in pursuance of his agreement with France, he already had approached Germany and Poland, notifying them that Britain would welcome both Germany and Russia to the league, and would approve any regional agreement which would guarantee present frontiers and eliminate the probability of war.

Replies to Arms Criticism.

Replying to recent criticisms by liberals and laborites of recent ministerial declarations about plans for increased British air and naval forces, Simon said it was the duty of the ministers responsible for the safety of the country to have plans ready for security in case of a breakdown of the disarmament negotiations. He declared those plans would be pushed on, but he assured the house that no rearmament would be begun until it was clear that other means of preserving peace had failed.

The surprise feature of the debate was the statement of Winston Churchill, who had been expected to attack the government for following a policy of too much pacificism. He blessed the government policy, and declared he approved of the efforts to get Germany and Russia into the league, no matter how much he disliked the economic and political philosophy of the people who are governing Russia. He said he believed Russia is genuine in its protestations of a desire for peace.

Simon's statement also was approved by Sir Herbert Samuel for the Liberals and Maj. C. R. Atlee for the Laborites.

GERMANY IS STUNNED

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, —July 13.—Fear of political isolation, which has been a German nightmare ever since the close of the world war, laid itself like a tightening iron band around the heart of Germany today when it was learned that England favors the French system of eastern European security pacts as proposed by Foreign Minister Barthou.

The British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, it was learned today, called on Chancellor Hitler yesterday and urged Germany to return to the league of nations and to join the proposed pacts. The German propaganda ministry for weeks has been ridiculing Barthou's "pactomania" and the public is all the more stunned by the revelation that France has won England over.

"This system of treaties means the establishment of a French hegemony over Europe, with the approval of Russia and England," says the Berliner Tagellatt.

"There can be no question of German participation in these plans," says the Nazi newspaper, Der Deutsche. The Boersen Zeitung finds the British attitude incomprehensible.

"In order not to be disturbed in her smug satisfaction, Britain declares herself satisfied with a series of pacts," says the Boersen Zeitung, "which will make France, with the strongest army in Europe, the military dictator, chief of police and supreme controler of this continent."

POLAND COOL TO PLAN

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, July 13.—The Polish-German pact of friendship bore its first fruits tonight when Polish foreign office officials announced that the Warsaw government's attitude toward France's projected eastern Locarno pact had not yet been settled, and that Poland considers the pact unimportant. Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, who yesterday held a long conversation with the British ambassador concerning the pact, left nonchalantly tonight for a week-end at Gdynia.

The proposed pact would include the Baltic states and Russia, in addition to Poland and Germany. Polish officials said they could not understand why Poland's ally, Rumania, is not included.

The Polish officials also remarked that since they already have signed nonagression pacts with both Russia and Germany, why should an additional pact be necessary?

FRANCE EXPLAINS PLAN

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—Official circles tonight pictured France as regarding the "New Locarno" proposal as a coöperative effort in behalf of peace which Chancellor Hitler of Germany cannot ignore.

Great Britain's wholehearted support is counted on to put the proposal through, and Foreign Minister Barthou already has begun work on it. He conferred with the Polish ambassador, Chlapowski, today.

The project, which the French prefer to call "the pact of the north," has two high points, in the view of officials here.

First, France, by guaranteeing the pact although not a signatory, would be obliged to send troops to aid Germany if that country were attacked.

Second, France, if attacked, would be assured of soviet Russia's vast military aid through a supplementary agreement.

Pledge of Mutual Assistance.

In its simplest terms the pact is a general pledge of mutual assistance against an aggressor.

Like the Locarno pact, it would become operative when the league of nations council determines the aggressor, but actually it probably would be instantly operative when the signatories determine there had been an aggressor.

France's guarantee would amount to a promise of military aid against an aggressor, without any compensatory aid for her in a similar case. In compensation, France would have Russia's guarantee of the Locarno pact.

Germany's obligations would be limited to those of the signers of the agreement.

The French were pleasantly surprised at the quick approval of Premier Mussolini of Italy, having feared that there would be resentment of French leadership in that country.

ASKS POLICE TO HUNT SON.

Chicago police were asked yesterday to help hunt Richard Jenkins, 14 years old, 2019 Pensacola avenue, who disappeared with another boy Thursday from Williams Bay, Wis. where he had been visiting. The boy's father, Julius Jenkins, said his son might be on his way to California on a bicycle.

TAXPAYER MUST 'DIG' FOR BIBLICAL CODEX BOUGHT BY MacDONALD

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 13.—The British taxpayer must find £41,440 (about $207,200) to refund the government's advance to the soviet authorities for the codex sinaiticus, which Prime Minister MacDonald, without consulting parliament, promised would be acquired for the nation and is now in the British museum.

Despite world-wide canvassing by the British museum among bibliophiles and pulpit appeals in every English church, public subscriptions totaling only £51,560 ($257,800) have been received toward the total cost of $500,000. The museum in addition gave £7,000 ($35,000).

A "supplementary estimate" for the balance was issued today for presentation in the house of commons. Owing to MacDonald's vacation in Canada, it is unlikely that he will be present in the house when a vote is taken on this much criticized expenditure.

DOLLFUSS OPENS WAR TO CLEAN UP BOMB THROWERS

Aims Blow Against Nazis in Salzburg.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, July 13.—Maj. Emil Fey, Chancellor Dollfuss' chief commissioner for the extermination of Nazi bomb throwers in Austria, today prepared his campaign against the terrorists.

Following his decree last night fixing the time limit at five days for every terrorist to turn in explosives of any kind to government officials, with the death penalty for those who disobey, Maj. Fey laid plans for cleaning up the provincial town of Salzburg, on the Bavarian border. Salzburg is now a hotbed of Nazi terrorism. Picturesque festivals important to the Austrian tourist industry begin there at the end of this month, and reports have come to Fey that supplies of explosives are being smuggled from Germany for big scale bombings to be perpetrated on the opening day.

The Italian press, newspapers reaching here today revealed, is charging that the Austrian bombings are being fomented and paid for by French agents in an effort to cause an explosion in central Europe and keep relations between Berlin and Rome in turmoil.

Four Nazis Go on Trial.

Besides the drastic penalties to be inflicted by the special military tribunal set up last night to try Nazi bomb throwers, the Austrian government will also take punitive measures against political opponents in other ways, such as withdrawing licenses from doctors, lawyers, notary publics, druggists and others known to be working against it.

Four young Nazis accused of bomb throwing will go on trial tomorrow, and it is possible that under the new punitive measures they may be given death sentences. The four men are accused of damaging an electric light works with explosives, and of nearly wrecking the house of Maj. Joseph Seller, mayor of Ernstbrunn, in lower Austria.

Under the new punitive rules they should get death, but they may escape because their acts were committed in June, or before the new penalty was provided.

Relations between Dollfuss and the Hitler government in Germany apparently have not been improved by the Austrian chancellor's withdrawal of Stefan Tauschitz as minister in Berlin and naming no one to replace him. Tauschitz was recalled to become undersecretary for foreign affairs in the Dollfuss cabinet. Dr. Kurt von Reith, German minister to Vienna, today decided to take immediately a "vacation" which he previously had planned for August. German circles here say he will not return until there is a new Austrian minister in Berlin.

Bomb Victim Dies.

VIENNA, July 13.—(AP)—The death of a woman victim of a bombing for which seven Nazi suspects are in jail placed the seven in the shadow of the gallows today—if the bombing can be fastened on them.

Frau Hermine Graubna of Graz, one of four members of a travel party injured in a bomb explosion at Salzburg yesterday, died last night.

Meanwhile the strenuous campaign of Maj. Emil Fey against Austrian Nazis produced a concrete result with the arrest of Edouard Fischer, Salzburg inspector of police. A woman employé of the director of public security in Salzburg province also was arrested in connection with the recent Salzburg bombing which blew up police headquarters there.

The woman was charged with actually participating in the bombing while Fischer was accused of shielding one of the bombers. Both also were accused of espionage.

Terrorism continued today when a hand grenade was thrown into the house of a district leader of the Fascist heimwehr in Folfsberg, Carinthia. He was critically injured and his home was wrecked. Members of his family escaped.

RAINBOW UNIT MEETS AT DETROIT; MIAMI BIDS FOR 1935 SESSION

Detroit, Mich., July 13.—(AP)—Members of the Rainbow division, one of the American expeditionary force's most famous units, devoted themselves largely to the entertainment features of today's program of their sixteenth annual reunion here, and Saturday will convene for a session, in which officers will be selected and plans for next year's reunion completed.

The veterans today attended the Fair Grounds races, and in the evening enjoyed a steamer excursion on Lake St. Clair. Members of the division auxiliary visited Henry Ford's Greenfield village.

ASSEMBLY GROUP SEEKS TO REDUCE COSTS OF RELIEF

Familiarizing itself with the work of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, a legislative investigation committee prepared yesterday to begin hearings on relief complaints next Wednesday. The legislators sat with the commission in its regular meeting at 1319 South Michigan avenue and began what promised to be a laborious task of studying figures.

"Our particular interest," said Senator Louis O. Williams [Dem., Clinton], chairman of the committee, "will be to determine if relief costs cannot be cut. They are mounting steadily."

There were no "star chamber" hearings yesterday, such as featured two meetings of the legislators and the relief commissioners on Thursday.

Of principal interest to the legislators at the meeting yesterday was discussion of a request from relief officials of Jo Daviess county that the Illinois commission take over the work of administering its county relief funds.

Corporation Counsel Sexton of Chicago and State Finance Director K. L. Ames Jr. both said that if the request was granted a precedent would be established which might result eventually in all of the 101 downstate counties unloading their administrative work upon the commission.

Youth Convicted in $1.80 Kidnaping of Woman

Bonifay, Fla., July 13.—(AP)—Dewey Keith, 20, was convicted today for the $1.80 kidnaping of Mrs. J. L. Phelps, 77, last May 17. The verdict carried a recommendation for mercy. Dewey's brother, Millard Keith, and Barnard Retherford were convicted of the same crime July 4, but in their cases the jury did not recommend mercy, and they face a death penalty under Florida's new "Lindbergh law."

U. OF C. TO TRY ITS NEW PLAN IN HIGH SCHOOL

Study Responsibility Will Be Put Up to Pupils.

The University of Chicago this fall will expand its new plan of college education into the high school field, Dr. Chauncey S. Boucher, dean of the college, told the Institute for Administrative Officers of High Institutions yesterday at the institute's closing session on the university campus.

Experiments conducted by the university have demonstrated the feasibility of extending the plan, which in 1931 startled educators with its provisions for freedom for students, to still younger pupils, and this will be attempted as soon as a system of comprehensive high school examinations has been devised, Dr. Boucher disclosed. All other plans for the change are complete, he said.

Four Year College Planned.

The new system, which will create a four year college out of the present lower college division in the university and the upper two grades of the university high school, will permit the high school pupils to work without classroom attendance requirements, periodic examinations, or grades. They will be allowed to complete the entire four year course as rapidly as they wish, and will be required only to pass comprehensive examinations.

"This will effectively bridge the gap between secondary and higher education," Dr. Boucher said. "It will provide the survey courses necessary to general education, and it will keep capable students working up to capacity at all times. Separate two year junior colleges are not satisfactory."

The new system, Dr. Boucher said, will permit a capable student to complete his education through junior college, ordinarily requiring 14 years, in 12 years, and efficiently prepare him for higher university work. Duplication of high school and college courses and costs will be eliminated, he said.

Some Educators Doubtful.

As was the case when the University of Chicago first announced its new educational program, the high school plan did not meet with complete approval of the educators who heard it described. Dr. John W. Harbeson, principal of the Pasadena, Cal., junior college, who had earlier outlined the success of a four year junior college program at Pasadena, objected to the granting of too much freedom to high school pupils.

"We won't know how effectively the plan will work until it has been tried," Dr. Boucher admitted. "The same criticism met our first plan, but college freshmen accepted their responsibilities under it."

Dr. George A. Works, University of Chicago examiner, closed the conference by summarizing the work of the institute and calling for an attack on out-moded educational standards.

Jack Oakie in Jail Five Hours After Trafic Arrest

San Bernardino, Cal., July 13.—(AP)—Jack Oakie, movie actor, was arrested by a trafic policeman today, placed in jail for five hours despite his strenuous protests, and fined $100 on charges of reckless driving and intoxication. Oakie was hurrying to Hollywood from Big Bear lake to join the yachting party of Richard Arlen, another actor.

JURY INDICTS 5 MORE IN DRIVE TO END ARSON RINGS

19 Held in $1,000,000 Plot Denied Delay.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Norman Soper, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Frank Zaucha, larceny of an automobile, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; John Fontano, Sam Franco, Jack Costello, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Walter P. Steffen.

Prosecution of arson rings broken up in recent weeks by State's Attorney Courtney went ahead on two fronts yesterday. Five men were reported named in true bills voted by the grand jury, charging them with arson in connection with a fire May 16 last year which destroyed an apartment building and adjacent cottage at 2921 Wentworth avenue, owned by Michael Silovich.

At the same time Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court refused to continue until fall the trial of eighteen men and a woman indicted as members of a one million dollar arson ring. Instead he ordered all motions to be disposed of by July 25, after which early trial dates will be set for this summer.

$10,000 Bonds for Each.

Those reported named in true bills are Valentine Notari, 1533 West 68th street, alleged "arson solicitor," also under indictment in the one million dollar arson ring; Abe Satrin and Sam Cohen, public insurance adjusters, who are reported to have dissolved their partnership ten days ago; Salvatore Roman, alleged incendiary, and Silovich. Satrin, Cohen, and Roman are fugitives. Bonds of $10,000 were reported set for each defendant.

Silovich is said to have signed an immunity waiver and testified before the grand jury. His story, in effect, according to prosecutors, was that Notari solicited him to collect insurance on his property through burning it, since none of the tenants in the building were paying rent. Arrangements were made to get them out before the fire, and accordingly forcible detainer suits were instituted a month before the fire, and all were ousted. At the same time Notari persuaded Silovich to take out an additional $2,500 policy bringing the total insurance carried to $4,000.

Story of Alleged Arson.

On the day of the fire, it is charged, Roman sprinkled gasoline throughout the building and the cottage, scattered papers everywhere, and set the two structures afire.

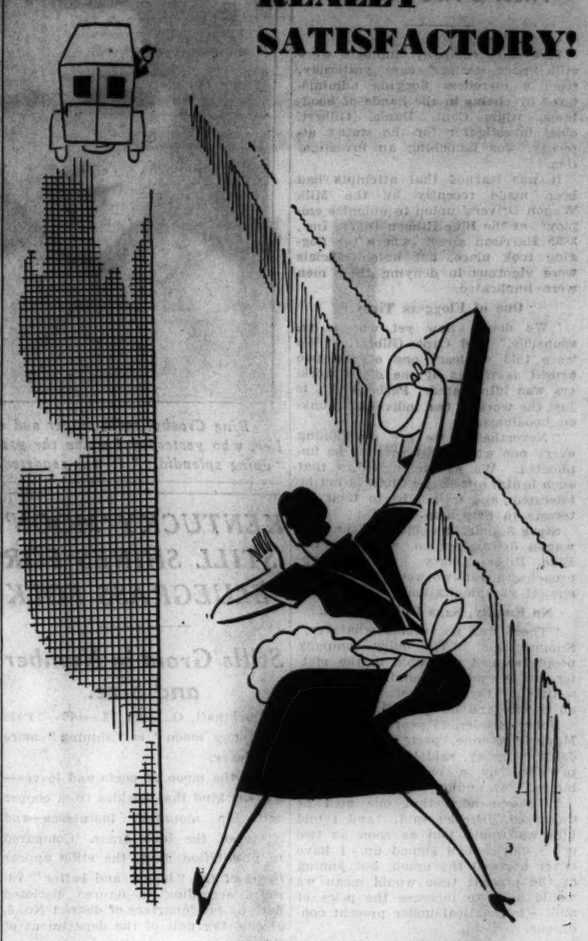
Notari received $150 for his services, it is charged. Silovich complained in his testimony before the jury, it was reported, that his co-conspirators had double crossed him. The two adjusters finally settled with him for $1,040, and then proceeded to reduce this sum to $640 by deductions which they said were for "fixing" fire chiefs and attorneys, he said.

Judge Miller informed those of the nineteen defendants who were not represented by one of the three defense attorneys, James M. Burke, Samuel Hoffman, and Abe Marowitz, that they must retain counsel by July 25 or be represented by the public defender.

Farmer and Wife Held in Debtors' Cell for $180

Rockford, Ill., July 13.—[Special.]—Tony Schlauter, farmer, and his wife, Mary, were held in debtors' cells in the Winnebago county jail today for failure to pay a $180 judgment obtained against them recently on a labor claim. Andrew Porkus, who swore out the warant for their arrest, charged they concealed their assets when he sought to levy upon a justice court execution issued when judgment was entered.

Substitutes ARE SELDOM REALLY SATISFACTORY!



When you order certain articles from the store and they send you others instead, it is only human nature to feel that you did not get your money's worth.

No one really likes substitutes! They are seldom satisfactory. No matter what you want or want to do . . . there is nothing like getting the real thing!

Because the Tribune is Chicago's first newspaper . . . first in number of readers and influence among them . . . there is no substitute for a Tribune want ad.

The Tribune want ad section is Chicago's established market place. More people . . . and more people with money to buy . . . read it than read any other want ad medium.

FAIR CELEBRATES BIRTH OF FRENCH FREEDOM TODAY

Diplomats and Officials to Join Festivities.

BY EARL MULLIN.

One hundred and forty-five years ago today the people of Paris rose in revolt and seized the Bastille, the old state prison, and in a large measure won freedom for France. Today the stirring strains of the Marseillaise, national anthem of France, will sound throughout the World's Fair grounds as Bastille day is observed with music, speeches by diplomatic dignitaries, and celebrations by Franco-American societies.

The court of states and the Pavilion Francais on Northerly Island will be chief scenes of activity throughout the day as A Century of Progress Exposition joins with France to observe the celebration of freedom.

Trace French Culture Here.

Much of the day's speech making and pageantry will deal with the impression made by the French on the history and culture of the Great Lakes region. Taking part in the ceremony, in addition to consulate representatives, Chicago and exposition officials will be the Franco-American societies, including the Alliance Française, the Cercle Français, and the Société des Uns.

At 5 p. m., a chorus of 65 voices will open the formal program. The ceremonies will also feature entertainment and dances from the Tunisian and Oasis villages at the Fair, numbers by the French Chorale, and selections by Princess Nina Gedeyani, soprano, and Louis Rousseau of the Opera Comique in Paris.

Also honored at the Fair today will be Mary Pickford, former movie actress. Her entertainment program starts at 11 a. m., and concludes when she has received the salute of the 48th Highlanders at the trooping of the color in the evening.

Troops to Escort Mary.

Miss Pickford will arrive at the Fair with Miss Helen Dawes, daughter of the Fair president, and Mrs. N. A. Owings, president of the Chicago Junior league. Following a reception she will tour the grounds with the Black horse troop as escort.

At 2 p. m., Miss Pickford will give a radio talk, giving her impressions of the Fair, and at 3 p. m., she will make a personal appearance at the Lagoon theater.

Tomorrow Italy will hold the limelight at the Fair with the celebration of Italian-American day. The two highlights of the day's events will be the unveiling and dedication of a 35 foot marble column unearthed from the ruins of Ostia and presented to the city of Chicago by Premier Mussolini, and the address of Gen. Italo Balbo by radio from Rome.

The day will commemorate the flight of 24 sea planes from Italy to Chicago during the 1933 exposition. Gen. Balbo's speech will be broadcast over both National Radio chains during the dedicatory ceremonies. U. S. Senator James Hamilton Lewis will accept the memorial on behalf of the city and state.

Expect Big Attendance.

It is expected that more than 50,000 Italian-Americans will visit the Fair during the day to take part in the ceremonies or to view the unveiling. The exercises will begin at 3 p. m. with the broadcast at 3:30 p. m.

With the special programs of the week-end officials are hopeful attendance will set a new record. Preparations were being made last night for the reception of the four millionth visitor today. The honor guest will be given a prominent part in the festivities of Bastile day.

Indicative of the crowds to be expected over the week-end were optimistic reports by railroads, bus lines and other travel agencies. The New York Central lines reported reservations for a party of 100 Elks from New England. Another large party of visitors from southern cities is expected over the Big Four.

Despite elaborate precautions to prevent visitors being inconvenienced by rain, threatening skies of yesterday held the attendance down to some extent. At midnight 55,207 paid admissions had been recorded.

YOUNG SLAYER PAYS WITH LIFE IN GAS CHAMBER

Florence, Ariz., July 13.—(AP)—George J. Shaughnessy, 19, of Albany, N. Y., walked calmly into Arizona's lethal gas chamber here today and paid with his life for the murder of Lon Blankenship, Tucson automobile dealer.

The youth, clad in shorts, moved briskly up the 12 steps to the execution chamber, where he was blindfolded and strapped to a chair.

Fifteen cyanide pellets were dropped into a chemical solution near the chair, a faint, gray mist enveloped him, and eight minutes and 30 seconds later physicians pronounced him dead.

Although his face remained calm, physicians said the youth was near collapse as he seated himself in the chair.

Plan Beach Fireplaces for Wiener Roast Parties

J. Frank Lyman, general superintendent of the Lincoln park system, announced yesterday that fireplaces will be erected on the Montrose and Diversey beaches for the use of wiener roasters and beach parties. They will be in service July 21. Bathers may also now check their street clothing without charge in the bathhouses at Montrose, Diversey, and North avenue beaches.

France Dances in Streets in Bastille Day Celebration

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—Dancing began in festooned streets throughout France today, unhampered by Friday the 13th complications and occasional showers, in the annual three day celebration of the fall of the Bastille. Bands played in every village square. Military reviews, fireworks, and dedications of war monuments compose official observances tomorrow.

TWO JAPANESE PRINCES IN CITY; ONE A MERCHANT

Two princes of Japan were visitors in Chicago yesterday. One of them was Fumimaro Konoye, president of the upper house of the Japanese parliament which corresponds roughly to the United States senate. The other prince was Shotaro Shimomura, said to be the wealthiest merchant in the Japanese nation.

Although not a member of the imperial family of Japan, Prince Konoye's title is bestowed upon him as a part of his office. Shimomura's title is entirely honorary, but he was described as "Japan's merchant prince" by D. M. Yates, first vice president of Marshall Field & Co., who was host at a luncheon held in the English room of the loop store.

Honored by Countrymen.

Prince Konoye is returning to Japan after having visited Washington and a number of eastern cities. He will remain in Chicago today and attend a luncheon and dinner in his honor given by Japanese families of the city.

Tomorrow he will attend a luncheon given by Acting Consul Kenji Nakauchi and leave for San Francisco on the Overland Limited. He is sailing July 18.

The prince announced yesterday he had no public statement to make. He said he would spend a few hours at A Century of Progress Exposition during the afternoon today.

Studying Western Methods.

Shimomura's visit is strictly for business purposes. He is studying occidental methods of advertising and displaying merchandise, having completed only a few months ago the complete remodeling of a chain of department stores which he owns in all the large cities of Japan. He stated proudly that his stores are air conditioned, equipped with moving stairways and western show cases of glass.

Shimomura is vice president of the Rotary club of Japan. He is on a round-the-world trip to inspect modern department stores.

Another distinguished Japanese visitor in Chicago yesterday was N. Sato, his country's ambassador to France. With Mme. Sato, their daughters, Mitsu and Fusa, and a friend, Mme. Eiji Wajini, the ambassador visited A Century of Progress Exposition. He was greeted by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Fair.

NEW CITY HALL SWITCHBOARD IS PUT IN SERVICE

A new dial telephone system that is expected to save the city $27,000 a year went into operation in the city hall yesterday when Mayor Kelly threw a switch. The new system is centered in a switchboard in room 1009 of the city hall instead of in the old city hall switchboard which was in the telephone company's main offices.

All incoming calls will be handled by the operators, but all occupants of the building wishing to call either inside or outside will dial. The new switchboard also eliminates departmental switchboards. The operators who manipulated them will be used on the central board. The telephone company employed from 40 to 60 girls on the city hall's switchboard, but the city will get along with about half this number. Miss Margaret Shevlin, who formerly had the switchboard in the controler's office, is the chief operator.

The old system cost the city $83,893 a year, while the estimated cost of the new one is $56,814. Mayor Kelly, in speaking to the girls on the board, requested a continuation of the courtesy policy in dealing with the public. When you call the city hall the operator will still say: "City hall, at your service." The number is still Randolph 8000.

50C BIKE LICENSE PLAN FINDS FOES IN CITY COUNCIL

Several members of the city council spoke yesterday in opposition to a proposed ordinance which would place a license fee of 50 cents on bicycles. The ordinance, which was offered by Ald. John Toman [23d] at the last meeting of the council, is pending now before the finance committee.

"I'm absolutely against it," said Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th]. "The bicycle is the poor man's means of transportation, and I don't want to tax it. We should do as in Copenhagen where lanes are set aside for the bike riders' use."

Others spoke in the same vein.

In submitting his ordinance, Ald. Toman asserted that cyclists are becoming so numerous as to make necessary special safety measures.

FAMED MASTERS' WORKS ADDED TO FAIR ART SHOW

Five famous paintings which once hung in museums in Moscow were on display yesterday in the World's Fair exhibition at the Art institute.

Three of the paintings—Rembrandt's "Joseph and Potiphar's Wife," Watteau's "Le Mezzetin," and Teniers's "Music Lesson"—are for sale. The other two—Cezanne's "Portrait of Mme. Cezanne in the Conservatory" and Van Gogh's "La Café de Nuit"—were loaned to the institute by an anonymous collector.

FAIR WELCOMES RUSS ENVOY AND GOOD WILL PLANE

Alexander Troyanovsky, Russian ambassador to the United States, and a Sikorsky biplane carrying a crew of six American flyers who are to take off for Moscow from here tomorrow morning on a "recognition trade flight" to stimulate American business with the soviets, arrived in Chicago at noon yesterday.

Ambassador Troyanovsky who came to Chicago from Washington to attend ceremonies incidental to the departure of the airplane upon its long journey, went immediately to the World's Fair after his arrival on the Capitol Limited. He was accompanied by his wife and son, Oleg, and a retinue of secretaries.

At the Fair he was given a salute of 19 guns and the honor of reviewing the Black Horse Troop and detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines who were assembled at the 14th street entrance. A marine band, in deference to the ambassador, played the Soviet anthem, "The Internationale," as the party arrived.

Plane Salutes Ambassador.

At the moment when the ambassador was seating himself in the trustees' lounge where he and his party were guests at a luncheon given by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Fair, the drone of heavy motors was heard over the administration building.

Out of the haze in the east appeared the huge Sikorsky which has a wing spread of 101 feet and is powered by twin motors which deliver 1,500 horse power.

After circling the Fair grounds once the ship glided to a perfect landing in the Chicago yacht harbor off Grant park. It was taxied to its moorings by Lieutenant Commander William H. Alexander, chief pilot, and was tied up inside the berakwater just north of Navy pier.

Backers Make Trip.

A motor launch picked up Richard B. Scandrett Jr. and J. Anthony Panuch, both of New York, members of the syndicate of American business men sponsoring the good will flight. They were passengers on the plane on the journey from New York. The plane was forced down Thursday at St. Williams, Ont., and spent the night there.

The two were taken ashore and driven to the Fair, where they arrived in time to attend the ambassador's luncheon. The two men with Lieutenant Commander Alexander, and five other members of the crew, were guests of honor with Ambassador Troyanovsky at a banquet given at the Army and Navy club.

War Threat Remains.

Addressing the gathering of army, naval, and civic officials, Ambassador Troyanovsky said: "The danger of war still exists. I will allow myself, however, to express the conviction that the situation in Europe as well as in Asia is a little less tense.

"Our government is against war. At the same time we of the soviet union are not pacifists. We realize that humanity has not yet reached that stage of civilization where the lion and the lamb can lie down together without discomfort to the lamb. We have no desire to play the lamb.

"We do not covet a single foot of foreign territory and we will not permit a foot of our own territory to be stolen by a hostile invader."

During his speech at luncheon Ambassador Troyanovsky expressed his sorrow that his country had been unable to participate in the Fair because American recognition of the union had come too late.

SHORT MEASURE CASE IS DROPPED; FIRM VINDICATED

The city's case against the Consumers' Petroleum company, which is charged with having sold short measure fuel oil, came to an abrupt end yesterday when it was admitted before Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland that the city sealer's office had erred in checking the company's tanks.

As a matter of fact, Corporation Counsel Sexton said later it was discovered that the company was actually giving more fuel than contracted for, instead of less.

Several days ago the case was continued to yesterday on a motion of Barnet Hodes, state tax commissioner, who is acting as attorney for the Consumer's company, which is located at 208 West Washington street. Hodes stated he wished to introduce new evidence.

Before he could do so, City Prosecutor Michael L. Rosinia said that the city wished to move for a nonsuit. Later Mr. Sexton filed an affidavit signed by two employes of the city sealer's office which set forth that the first check had been made by hand. The company, however, secured a scientific "calibrator" machine, which was tested by the city sealer's office and the error discovered.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Only thirteen states are unrepresented so far by registrants at THE TRIBUNE Public Service office on the north plaza of the Hall of Science. Residents of thirty-five states and three foreign countries have signed the guest register.

Electrical day, with a half holiday given electrical workers throughout Chicago, will be observed Wednesday. All members of the Electric Association of Chicago have signified their intention of visiting the Fair on that day and participating in the events. Among the features scheduled are demonstrations by exhibitors in the Electrical group at 4 p. m. Tickets for adults at 35 cents and for children at half this rate may be obtained from the Electric association.

Thirty-five high school students from Mount Morris, Mich., arrived in Chicago yesterday by bus to get some practical geography lessons at the Fair. The group, staying at the Bismarck hotel, will remain in Chicago two days.

Amateur singers and entertainers who believe they have radio talent will be given a chance to show their wares July 18, with contracts a possibility for prospective stars. Winners will be presented with loving cups. The contests will be held at 4 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. for 30 days in the north terrace of the Hall of Science. Winners will be judged by volume of applause.

The Zephyr, the Burlington railroad streamlined train, will be on exhibition at the Fair for the summer beginning tomorrow. The train will be on the tracks south of the Travel and Transport building.

THREE SIDEWALK CAFES TO RECEIVE PERMITS MONDAY

The south park district on Monday will issue permits for the opening of three sidewalk cafés on Michigan avenue, William J. Bell, acting superintendent of the district, said yesterday. A temporary permit for the cafés has been signed by Mayor Kelly and Philip S. Graver, south park commissioners, and it is expected that the signature of Commissioner Michael L. Igoe, also required, will be obtained today, Mr. Bell said.

Three applications for permits to operate sidewalk cafés have been filed with the park district—by the managements of the Stevens hotel, the Blackstone hotel, and a fish bar at 32 South Michigan avenue. These operators reported they expect to open the cafés late next week.

The south park permits will be temporary grants, effective until an ordinance authorizing the operation of the cafés is passed at the meeting of the park commissioners on Wednesday. The ordinance will then be submitted to the Chicago park district board for final approval.

The girl's old brother, Peter, 16, had tried twice to shoot pigeons with the rifle, but it would not fire. He left it in the yard and John picked it up and it was immediately discharged, striking his sister in the head. Frank I. Chancellor Says All Who Are Traitors Must Go.

Here's Text of Hitler's Speech Defending Execution of Foes

Deputies, men of the German reichstag! By order of the reich's government the reichstag's president, Goering, called you together today to afford me the opportunity to explain to the people before this competent forum of the nation the events which may live in our history as a sad and a warning memory for all times.

From the accumulation of material causes and personal guilt, from the human inadequacy and the human defects, there arose for our young reich a crisis which could only too easily have led to truly annihilating results for the near future.

Review of Events.

To elucidate before you and the nation their origin and how they were conquered is the purpose of my address. I shall be ruthlessly frank. I shall only observe such restrictions as are imposed for reasons of state interest and, on the other hand, by feelings of shame.

When, on the 30th of January, Marshal President von Hindenburg charged me with the leadership of the newly formed government, the National Socialistic party took over a state that had entered politically and economically into complete decay. All political forces of the previous displaced régime bore their share of guilt for this decay.

Since the abdication of the kaiser and the German princes the German people were delivered into the hands of men who, as representatives of the past party system, had deliberately provoked or weakly tolerated this decay. Beginning with the Marxist revolutionaries, passing through the center to bourgeois nationalism, all parties and their leaders were set to prove their ability to rule Germany.

Claims Predecessors Failed.

Endless coalitions placed them in a position to put their political craftsmanship and economic capacities to a test. They all failed miserably. Therefore the act of the 30th of January was not an act of overtaking one government by another, but the final liquidation, longed for by the nation, of an unbearable situation.

To explain this is necessary because, as developments have shown, some people have forgotten they once had ample opportunity to demonstrate their political capabilities.

No one in Germany can reproach the National Socialist movement with having barred the way or cut off promising political forces. Inscrutable fate condemned our nation for fifteen years to serve as an object of experiment and trial for these politicians. For those around us, especially ill-wishers, it may have been interesting and enjoyable to follow these experiments; for the German people they were painful and humiliating.

"Decrepit Era" Removed.

Look back and let pass before the mind's eye those who succeeded each other as reichschancellor. In what country were the scales of Providence more often busy and the contents often found wanting? We National Socialists have the right to forbid ourselves being classed with such as these. On Jan. 30, 1933, it was not a new government being formed for the nth time, but an old decrepit era removed by new rule.

This historical act of liquidation of the past saddest period in the life of our nation was legalized by the German people itself. For we have not, like the men of November, 1918, usurped power, but obtained it lawfully. We have not, like disrooted anarchists, made revolution, but have overthrown the régime of revolt as executants of the nation's will. We did not conceive our task to secure power with bayonets, but to find and anchor it in the hearts of our people.

If today I read in certain foreign papers that I am filled these times with serious anxieties, especially economic, I can only reply, Yes. But anxiety afflicts me not these times alone but has afflicted me ever. If formerly it was anxiety for an innocent people defending itself in war forced upon it, after the collapse it was far greater anxiety about the future which made us revolutionaries.

Feels Burden of Cares.

And when, after fifteen years of struggle, we finally secured leadership of the nation, tormenting cares did not cease—nay, beset us even harder.

Believe me, I never in my life felt anxiety about my own fate, but I am bound to confess that since the field marshal's confidence placed me where I am I feel severely the burden of cares which the present and the future placed upon us all, for we did not take over on the 30th of January an orderly, solvent state, but a political and economic chaos which was then regarded and described by my critics of today as beyond help.

We, however, dared to battle against this decay in all spheres. From care burdened days and nights we ever drew strength for new decisions. Whatever our nagging opponents may say, they cannot pretend that we capitulated before problems nor deny that we courageously tried to solve them and in many cases have solved them.

Praises Nazi Régime.

The result of a year and a half of National Socialist government lies plainly before us. Its importance cannot be measured by comparison with conditions prior to Jan. 30, 1933; fairness requires that our results be judged by what would have happened if we had not conquered. Only he who further follows up the line of development leading to Jan. 30, 1933, can gauge the greatness of the National Socialist achievement, for we have not only halted the course of fate but have turned it in every way to good fortune.

When I as chancellor entered the Wilhelmstrasse the power of the state had become a futile fantom. The spirit of revolt and disobedience was rampant in the German states and communes. Specters of the saddest disobedience of the past rose alarmingly before us. Particularism and separatism proclaimed themselves impudently as the new German idea of state.

From impotence at home sprang a humiliating position toward the rest of the world. It had become something shameful to confess oneself a German. The spirit of insubordination and inner revolt we have eradicated and exterminated in a few months.

Calls Reich Political Unit.

Fully respecting the characteristics of our German tribes, we have strengthened the power of the state to be supervisor of new communes will to live and have exalted it above everything else. The German reich is no longer a geographical idea but a political unit. We have guided our people's development into channels believed impossible two years ago. In the same way as we firmly secured unity, and thereby the reich's future at home, so have we stood up for the nation's rights abroad.

It did not suffice us, however, to conquer political disintegration of the German people but it seemed more important to us to avert threatening national political dissolution. Hardly had a semester of the National Socialist government passed when the curse of former political life, namely, party dismemberment, was mastered.

Month by month the German nation moved farther away from those now scarcely credible times and their products. I need not say here—because every German feels and knows it—the bare thought of return of this party jumble is ludicrous and absurd.

Speaks of Unemployment.

The great political cleansing process of the nation was followed by an economic one not less great. What has been accomplished in this realm during the last eighteen months is testified to by the fact, which cannot be denied, that four and a half million unemployed in scarcely one and a half years were led into useful production. Simple as this fact is, yet the worries were, and are, great that have their roots in the fight against unemployment.

It is an embittered war that we were waging for more than one and a half years. It cannot be judged by proceeding from what was one wrong but must proceed from the fact that results have already today been achieved that our critics would not have deemed possible.

In this connection I must make one general observation: We have been faced with questions that were not answered before us, in many cases we couldn't build upon experiences of others in times past. We had so often to go out of our own way that naturally it is easy afterward to find fault with this or that mistake.

Tells of Accomplishments.

I consider it, however, a higher accomplishment to have courage in any case to seek the way out of misery rather than remain in misery from fear possibly to go the wrong way.

We all know that for a government really concerned about leading there can be no time without worry, constantly new problems must be mastered, new questions solved, new tasks fulfilled. In liberating four and a half millions from unemployment and making a different standard of life possible for them we strengthened their power of consumption which thereby, in increased measure, consumed foreign raw materials.

We are aware of such difficulties and can assure the German people this one thing: We shall solve them. If our trade balance, through economic barriers in foreign markets or through political boycott, becomes a passive one, we shall, through our own ability and thanks to the genius of our inventors and chemists, find ways of making ourselves independent of those raw materials which we ourselves are in a position to manufacture or find substitutes for.

Confident of Solving Problems.

All these problems we will solve with unbounded determination, impelled by the concern to help our people in their fight for existence. There is hardly a field of our national political, economic, and other life upon which we did not act as pioneers. The best proof for the correctness of this assertion is the attitude of the German people themselves.

In all walks of life the people expressed faith in the new régime. Manifestations of our former political confusion have been removed, not because we destroyed them but because the German people ejected them from their hearts.

And I am bound to confess here now that our labors would have been—nay, must have been—in vain if the German people had not given us its confidence and faithful coöperation. It is the 41½ million men and women of all classes who not only outwardly replied "yes" but who inwardly became converts to the new régime.

Praises Faith of Germans.

In them rests the main cause of our success. Without their believing faith, their endless patience, their self-sacrificing surrender, the German recovery would never have been achieved.

They are the bearers of the nation's regeneration and so our best representatives. They are truly the German people. From the old and true valiant champions of our movement to the newly won millions of workers they constitute the sound element of the nation. They have all remained inwardly true and decent. Millions today have a hard daily struggle for a crust, hundreds of thousands of miners hardly earn the bare necessaries of life. Hundreds of thousands were willing to share their situations with others poorer still.

And still they live in faith and confidence in the new state. From millions of needy and hard working folk we had to ask sacrifices to help other classes and they have given them. The whole German peoples community found among our poorest sons its most exalted glorification. Millions of women love this new state, make sacrifices, work and pray for it. With natural instinct they sense its mission for preservation of our people for whose sake they have in their children given living pledges.

"New Life Opened Up."

Hundreds of thousands of our former bourgeoise society are seeking their way towards the people. To countless multitudes new life has been opened up—fairer prospects worth striving and battling for. Whoever has the good fortune to get in among these people will be seized and buoyed up by this wave of boundless faith, unshakable confidence with which they all cling to the new Germany.

True, against this positive world of Germandom, incorporating the real worth of our people, there is a small negative group who have no share in Germany's recovery resurgence. They are, firstly the small stratum of those international subversives who, as apostles of philosophical, political, and economic communism, systematically disintegrate peoples, disturb order and seek to bring about chaos. We see evidences of this international conspiracy around us. Up and down the country run the flames of revolt among peoples.

Street tumult and fights on barricades, mass terror, and individualistic seditious propaganda today disturb almost all countries of the world.

In Germany, too, some few of these fools and intellects still sky spots and again to embark upon their destructive activity. Since vanquishing the communist party we still have experienced one attempt after another, albeit every one becomes weaker, to found communist organizations of more or less anarchistic character and to let them go to work.

Their method is ever the same. In describing the present state as unbearable and praising the communistic state of the future, they thereby, in effect, merely wage war for help; for the results of their victory in a country like Germany could not otherwise than be damaging.

Practical illustration of their ability and the effect of their domination has, however, already become so clear to the German people that the overwhelming majority, especially German laborers, have seen through these Jewish-international benefactors of mankind and inwardly have overcome them.

Says Foes Will Be Eradicated.

The national socialist state will domestically, if necessary, in a hundred years of war eradicate even the last remnants of this poisoning of the people and making fools of them.

The second group of dissatisfied consists of those political leaders who sensed that, with Jan. 30, their future was ended, but who cannot reconcile themselves, irrevocably, to this fact. The more that time wraps their own inability in the merciful mantle of forgetfulness, the more they believe themselves entitled slowly to bring themselves again to the attention of the people.

Inasmuch as their ability was not limited by time but is a naturally inherited one, they cannot even today prove their worth by positive and useful labor, but see their purpose in life fulfilled by criticism which is as dissimulating as it is mendacious. Our people have no part in their machinations. The national socialist state cannot seriously either be threatened or in any manner be injured by them.

The third group of destructive elements comes from those revolutionaries who in 1918 were shaken in their former relation to the state and became dislocated and thereby lost every inner relationship to a regulated human order of society. They became revolutionaries who worshiped revolution and would like to see a continuous state of revolution.

Recalls "Terrible Tragedy."

We all once suffered from a terrible tragedy that we, as obedient and dutiful soldiers, suddenly found ourselves confronted by revolt of mutineers who managed to put themselves in possession of the state. Each of us had once been raised in respect for laws and respect for authority, obedience toward command and order issued by it and in inner devotion toward those who represented the state.

The revolution of deserters and mutineers then compelled us to liberate ourselves spiritually from these ideas. We could not respect these new usurpers. Honor and conscience compelled us to refuse obedience to them. Love for the nation and for the fatherland made it incumbent upon us to fight them. The amorality of their laws extinguished in us the feeling for the necessity of obeying them and we thus became revolutionary. But even as revolutionaries we would not have separated ourselves from the obligation to apply most natural laws of sovereign right of nation to ourselves and to respect them.

We did not want to violate the German people's will and right of self-determination, but only to dispel violators of the nation. And as we finally, authorized by the nation's confidence, drew consequences from our 14 years' fight, we did not mean for unbridled instincts to vent themselves in a chaos but wanted to found a new and better order of things.

Aim of Nazi Revolution.

For us the revolution which smashed the second Germany was nothing other than the mighty birth which ushered the third reich into life. We wanted again to create a state whereto every German can cling in love, wanted to found a régime whereto every one can look up in respect, to discover laws that correspond to the nation's morals, to strengthen an authority to which every man submits in willing obedience.

Revolution for us is no permanent condition. If the natural development of our nation is violently arrested then an act of violence may again restore freedom of natural development. There can be no condition of permanent revolution. There cannot be a fruitful development through periodically recurring revolts.

Among the countless documents which I was obliged to read during the last week I also found a diary of a man who in 1918 was thrown into a course of resistance to the laws and who now lives in a world wherein law per se seems to incite to resistance. A moving document! Unceasing conspiring and never ending plotting! A glimpse at the mentality of humans who, without knowing it, have found their last confession of faith in nihilism!

Hatred Against Authority.

Unable really to cooperate in work with anybody, willing to oppose themselves to every form of order, filled with hatred against every authority, their restlessness can only find satisfaction in continuous work, both in thought and conspirative deed for destroying whatever at a given moment exists.

Many thereof during the early period of our fight ran up with us against the state of the past. Most of them, however, were, because of their inmost lack of discipline, led away from the disciplined National Socialist movement in the course of our fight.

The last remnant seemed eliminated after Jan. 30. Connection with the National Socialist movement was dissolved from the moment when the latter as the state became the object of their pathological aversion. They are in principle hostile to all authority and consquently cannot be converted.

Achievements Stir Hate.

Achievements which seem to consolidate the new German state arouse their greater hatred. All of these oppositionists have one principle in common—they do not see before them the German people but only the hated institution of order. They do not want to help, their one great wish is that the government's labor to save the people may fail.

They are, therefore, never ready to concede the blessings of a measure, but, as a matter of principle, always deny any success and seek to pick out every possible fault and weakness. This third group of pathological enemies of the state is dangerous, because, in every attempted revolt, they constitute a nucleus of followers until such time as a new order of things begins to crystalize from the chaos of clashing forces.

I must now, however, think also of the fourth group, which sometimes, perhaps without wanting to do so, nevertheless exerts a truly destructive activity. It consists of those people who belong to a relatively small section of society and who, having nothing to do, find time and occasion for verbal reporting concerning everything that is likely to bring change, as interesting as it is important, to a life of theirs which otherwise is completely unimportant.

Calles Drones a Menace.

For, while the overwhelming part of the nation must earn its daily bread in hard work, there are, nevertheless, in various strata of life some people whose only activity consists in doing nothing and then recuperating again from doing nothing.

The more pitiful the life of such a drone the more eagerly it laps up whatever might give interesting content to this void. Personal and political trash is here eagerly caught up and passed on even more eagerly.

Inasmuch as these people, on account of their doing nothing, possess no living relationship to the masses of millions in the nation, their life is limited to the circumference of their own life's circle. All idle twaddle that loses its way into this circle is bandied back and forth as though reflected by two hollow mirrors.

They believe, because their own ego is filled by unimportance, that they will always find acknowledgment by men of their own ilk, that the whole world about them is affected by it. They mistake interpretations of their circle for interpretations of the rest of humanity. They imagine to themselves that their apprehensions are worries of the whole nation. In reality this little aggregation of drones is nothing but a state within a state without any living contact with the life feelings, hopes, and worries of other people.

Germ Carriers of Unrest.

They, however, are a menace because they, in fact, are germ carriers of unrest, insecurity rumors, allegations, lies, suspicion, and apprehension, thus leading to the creation of gradual nervousness, the extent of which becomes hard to discern among the people.

They carry on their nefarious trade in Germany the same as in every other nation. For them the National Socialist revolution was exactly as interesting a theme for gossip as a vice versa fight of Nazi enemies against the National Socialist state. One thing, however, is clear: work for our people's reconstruction, and thus work for our people, is possible only if the German people follows its leadership in domestic tranquility, order, discipline and, above all, if it has confidence in its leadership.

For only confidence and faith in the new state made it possible to tackle and solve the great problems which earlier times left us. If the National Socialist régime, from the beginning on, had to reckon with these various groups and did so, nevertheless an atmosphere came into being in the course of several months which one could no longer nonchalantly ignore.

Aroused by Chatter.

Chatter, scattered at first, about a new revolution or new upheaval or new uprising gradually became so intense that only irresponsible state leadership could have ignored it. One simply could not disregard everything as stupid chatter that was pouring in in hundreds and finally thousands of oral and written reports. Only three months ago party leadership was convinced it was a case only of irresponsible chatter of political reactionaries, Marxists, anarchists, or all possible sorts of loafers for which all documentary evidence was lacking.

In the middle of March I ordered preparations to be made for a new propaganda wave. It was to make the German people immune against the attempt to poison us anew. Simultaneously, however, I gave orders to several party service departments to trace the ever recurrent rumors of new revolution and, if possible, find the sources for these rumors.

It was revealed that in the ranks of several high Storm Troop leaders tendencies had become evident that must give rise to the most serious apprehensions. At first there were only general evidences whose inner connections were not apparent at first sight.

Firstly, against my definite order and against the declaration made to me by former Chief of Staf Roehm, the Storm Troops had been filled up to the extent bound by imperial inner homogeneity of this unique organization.

Secondly, training for the National Socialist outlook on life was in the higher service ranks getting more and more into the background.

Thirdly, naturally the relationship between the party and the Storm Troops was beginning to loosen up gradually. More or less systematic effort could be discerned tending to draw the Storm Troop organization from the mission with which I intrusted it and subordinate it to other purposes or interests.

Assails Storm Troop Promotions.

Fourthly, promotions among Storm Troop leaders proved, when examined into, that a completely one-sided standard of purely external knowledge, or even only of an alleged intellectual ability, had been employed.

A large number of the oldest and most faithful Storm Troop men were pushed more and more into the background when leaders were named or positions filled, whereas 1933 recruits, a generation not particularly respected in the movement, were given preference in a manner impossible to understand. Sometimes it was sufficient to belong to the party for only a few months—yes, belong to the Storm Troops only—to secure promotion into higher Storm Troop rank such as old Storm Troop leaders could not attain after years.

Fifthly, the appearance and attitude of these Storm Troop leaders, who to a large part were not rooted at all in our movement, was as un-Nazilike as it was at times absolutely revolting. It was impossible to overlook the fact that these circles especially were a source for causing disquiet in our movement, in that their lack of practical National Socialism sought camouflage in very ill-advised new revolutionary demands.

Learns of "Insubordination."

I called the attention of Staf Commander Roehm to these and a series of other abuses without any noticeable sign of remedy or even the slightest response to my demand for explanations. In the months of April and May these complaints increased uninterruptedly. During these months I for the first time received reports, supplemented by documentary evidence, about conferences being held by individual higher Storm Troop leaders which could be labeled nothing else than "gross insubordination."

For the first time it was unmistakably proved in several cases that in these conferences references were made to the necessity of a new revolution and that leaders had received orders to prepare for such a new revolution spiritually and materially.

Chief of Staf Roehm tried to deny the reality of all these happenings and declared them to be veiled attacks upon the Storm Troops. When in individual cases evidence of those involved was brought, these witnesses suffered the severest maltreatment, although they mostly came from the ranks of old Storm Troopers.

As early as the end of April the leadership of the party, as well as a number of organs of the state affected, realized clearly that certain groups of higher Storm Troop leaders were deliberately contributing toward alienating Storm Troopers from party as well as from other institutions of the state, or that at least they did not prevent this alienation.

Promised to Punish Guilty.

All attempts to secure a remedy along the normal course of service remained without result. Chief of Staf Roehm again and again personally promised me to examine these cases and remove or discipline those guilty. Visible change, however, did not take place.

Some responsibile persons were arrested. I always stressed that an authoritary régime entails especially high responsibilities. When blind obedience to leadership is demanded from the people the leadership must show itself worthy by achievement and exceptionally good conduct. Faults and errors may happen in isolated cases. They must be eradicated. Bad conduct, drunken excesses, and interference with decent peaceable folk are unworthy of leaders, not National Socialistic, and in the highest degree detestable.

I therefore always insisted that higher demands be made on Nazi leaders with regard to their conduct and public behavior than upon other compatriots. He who desires to win higher respect must meet these requirements with higher achievements.

No Lenience for Nazis.

The most primitive thing that can be demanded of him is that he set no disgraceful example by his life before the world. For this reason I expect also that Nazis, because of such failings, shall not be judged more mildly or punished less severely than other compatriots, but I expect that a leader who so forgets himself shall be punished more severely than an anonymous man in a similar case. And here I want to hear of no difference between leaders of the political organizations on the formations of our Storm Troops, Special Guards, Hitler Youth, etc.

Determination of the National Socialist state leadership to put an end to such excesses by individual unworthy elements who merely bring shame to the party and the Storm Troops led to very pronounced counteraction on the part of the chief of staf.

Old National Socialist fighters, some of whom had struggled 15 years for the victory movements and now as high officials of state and in leading positions in our state represented our movement, were called to account for proceeding against such unworthy elements. That is, Chief of Staf Roehm attempted to have these oldest fighters in the party disciplined by a court of honor which was composed partly of the youngest party members or even of men not belonging to the party.

Doubted Roehm's Loyalty.

These differences led to a very earnest conversation between the chief of staf and myself, in the course of which for the first time doubts arose in my mind concerning the loyalty of this man after I had rejected every such thought for many months, even after I had previously for years protected this man with my person in unshakable faithful comradeship, warnings now began gradually to fill me with apprehension which, with the best of will, I was unable to rid myself of. These warnings were especially uttered by my deputy in party leadership, Rudolf Hess.

Since May there could no longer be any doubt that Chief of Staf Roehm had engaged in ambitious plans which, if carried into effect, could only lead to the most serious convulsions.

If I, during these months, hesitated again and again to make a final decision it was for two reasons. Firstly, I could not readily reconcile myself to the thought that a relationship which I believed was built on loyalty should turn out a delusion. Secondly, I still had a secret hope that the movement and my Storm Troopers might be spared the shame of such a conflict and that harm might be avoided without the severest clash. But by the end of May increasingly grave facts were brought to light.

Broke Laws of Decency.

Chief of Staf Roehm began to estrange himself from the party not only inwardly but also in his entire outward life. All principles through which we had become great lost their meaning. Life which the chief of staf, and with him a certain circle, began to lead was unbearable for every National Socialist conception.

It was not only terrible that he, himself, and the circle devoted to him broke all laws of decency and simplicity, but it was even worse that this poison now began to spread in ever enlargening circles. Worst of all, however, was that gradually, owing to a certain inclination common to these men, there began to develop a sect within the Storm Troops which constituted a nucleus for plot not only against normal conceptions of healthy people but also against the security of the state.

Examination undertaken in May into promotions in several definite Storm Troop regions led to the terrible realization that men had been promoted into Storm Troop positions without reference to National Socialist or Storm Troop merits merely because they belonged to the circle of these men with abnormal inclinations.

Found Orders Sabotaged.

Certain events well known to you, as for instance those connected with Standard Bearer Schmidt in Breslau, revealed a picture of conditions that had to be regarded as unbearable. My orders to take measures against these conditions were obeyed theoretically but sabotaged actually. Gradually there developed three groups of leadership of the Storm Troops; one group of elements held together by common abnormality who, capable of every kind of action, were blindly in the hands of Chief of Staf Roehm.

These were principally Storm Troop Leaders Ernst of Berlin, Heines of Silesia, Hayn of Saxony, and Heydebreck of Pomerania.

Besides these there was a second group of Storm Troop leaders not really identified with these circles but who felt in soldierly duty bound to obey Chief of Staf Roehm.

Over against these there was a third group of leaders who did not conceal their inner repulsion and aversion, some of whom for that reason had been removed from responsible posts while others had been deliberately cast aside and in many instances simply ignored. Heading these old Storm Troop leaders which were in disfavor owing to their innate decency were the present Chief of Staf Lutze and Special Guard Leader Himmler.

Mysterious "Herr von A——"

Without ever informing me and without my even as much as having an inkling of it, Chief of Staf Roehm enters into relations with Gen. von Schleicher through the mediation of a thoroughly corrupt mountebank, Herr von A——.

Gen. von Schleicher was the man who gave outward expression to the innermost wish of Chief of Staf Roehm. It was he who concretely put language and defended the conception that, firstly, the present German régime was untenable; that, secondly, above all the reichswehr and all patriotic societies must be concentrated in one hand; that, thirdly, that the only man destined to this task could be none other than Chief of Staf Roehm; that, fourthly, Herr von Papen must be removed and he [Von Schleicher] would be ready to take the position of vice chancellor. Beyond that, several essential changes must be made in the reich cabinet.

As always happens in such cases, they now began a search for men for a new government, always under the assumption that I myself would at least for the immediate future be retained in my position.

Reason for His Opposition.

Fulfillment of these proposals by Gen. von Schleicher had necessarily to meet opposition on my part which could never be overcome as regards point two. It would never have been possible for me either factually or humanly to give consent to a change in the reichswehr ministry and fill the post by Chief of Staf Roehm.

Firstly, as regards factual reasons: For fourteen years I unchangingly have given assurance that fighting organizations of the party are political institutions which have nothing to do with the army.

In my eyes it would have meant disavowal of this attitude of mine and of the policy followed fourteen years now to call the leader to command the army. Even in November, 1923, I suggested an officer as head of the army and not the man who then was my leader of the Storm Troops—Capt. Goering.

In the second place, it would have been humanly impossible for me to ever entertain Gen. von Schleicher's proposal. When I became aware of these intentions my impression of Roehm's intrinsic value was already such that before my conscience and for the sake of the army's honor I could under no circumstances permit him to occupy that position.

Praise for Hindenburg.

Before all else, the chief head of the army is the field marshal reich president. As chancellor I had taken my oath before him. His person is to us all inviolable. My promise to him to keep the army as a nonpolitical instrument of the reich is binding to me from the innermost conviction and because my pledged word such an action would also have been humanly impossible for me with regard to the reich defense minister.

"I am and we all are happy to see in him a man of honor from head to foot. He has reconciled the army from its innermost heart with the revolutionaries of yesterday and has connected it up with the state's leadership of today. With truest loyalty he has confessed allegiance to the principle for which I myself will fight to my last breath.

There is within the state but one arms bearer, the defensive force [reichswehr] and there is but one bearer of political will: This is the National Socialist party. Every idea of agreeing to the plan of Gen. von Schleicher on my part would have not only been infidelity toward the field marshal general and the reichswehr minister, but also infidelity toward the army. For just as Gen. von Blomberg, as defense minister in the National Socialist state, does his duty in the highest sense of the word, so also do the rest of the officers and soldiers do theirs.

Obligations of Loyalty.

I cannot demand of them that individually they join our movement, but none of them has lost his position of duty toward the National Socialist state. It follows that I could also, not without the most impelling reasons, permit the men to be removed who Jan. 30, together with me, pledged themselves to save the reich and the people. There are obligations of loyalty which one may not and should not violate. I believe that, above all, the man who in his name has brought the nation together must under no circumstances act unfaithfully, else both inwardly and outwardly all trust in faith and honor would have to disappear.

Since Roehm himself felt uncertain over whether overtures in the sense indicated would meet with resistance on my part, the first plan was laid to force such developments. Large scale preparations had been made.

Firstly, psychological conditions for the outbreak of a second revolution were to be created systematically. To this end Storm Troop propaganda centers were used to spread among Storm Troopers the report that the reichswehr planned dissolution of the Storm Troops, and afterward an added report was circulated that I personally had unfortunately been induced to agree to this plan. A grievous and infamous lie!

Roehm Called Grafter.

Secondly, the Storm Troops would have to anticipate this attack and in the second revolution remove reactionary elements on the one hand and resisters within the party on the other, while the supreme power of the state would have to be intrusted to the leadership of the Storm Troops.

Thirdly, for this purpose the Storm Troopers were within the briefest time to make all the necessary preparation. Chief of Staf Roehm succeeded in diverting amounts running into millions through camouflaging—that is, by putting out the lie, among other things, that he wished to carry out social relief measures for the Storm Troops. Twelve million marks was collected for this purpose.

Fourthly, to carry out the most decisive coups ruthlessly, there were formed sworn terror groups, entitled "staf guards," who were put under oath and were to enter into action with one definite purpose. While many a good old Storm Troop man had undergone all sorts of privations for ten years in the service of the movement, here were paid mercenaries whose real character and purpose could not be illustrated better than by their truly terrible criminal records.

Trusted Men Take Back Seat.

Thus trusty old Storm Troop leaders and men were to take a back seat in favor of these politically untrained elements who were fit for the kind of action planned.

At certain conferences of leaders, as well as during vacation trips, Storm Troop leaders who were to be depended upon were gradually brought together and individually dealt with. That means that while leaders of the inner set were carefully preparing the real action the second circle of Storm Troop leaders were only given information in general terms to the effect that the second revolution was before the door, that this revolution had no other aim than restoring freedom of action to me, and that therefore the new and in this case bloody uprising "the night of the long knives"—as it was gruesomely described—was corresponding to my own wishes.

Foreign Political Game.

The necessity for the Storm Troop organization to proceed on its own was justified by claiming lack of ability on my part to make the decision, which would be remedied only if the fact were created (for me). It is to be supposed that under these untruthful pretexts the foreign political preparation for this action was placed in the hands of Herr von Detten. Gen. von Schleicher partly conducted the foreign political game personally and partly he had his courier, Gen. von Bredow, translate it into practical politics.

Gregor Strasser was invited in. In the beginning of June I made a last attempt by inviting Chief of Staf Roehm to come to me once more for a conference of nearly five hours, which dragged on until midnight.

I informed him I had gained the impression from countless rumors and numerous attestations and declarations of old faithful party members and Storm Troop leaders that conscienceless elements were preparing a national bolshevist action that could bring nothing but untold misfortune to Germany. I told him further that rumors had come to my ears concerning an intention to include the army within the circle of these plans.

Hitler's Final Plea.

I assured Chief of Staf Roehm that the claim that the Storm Troop organization was to be dissolved was a filthy lie; that I could not even express myself concerning the lie; that I myself had in mind to undertake measures against the Storm Troops, but that I would personally immediately velopment into channels believed impossible two years ago. In the same way as we firmly secured unity, and thereby the reich's future at home, so have we stood up for the nation's rights abroad.

"I consider it a higher accomplishment to have courage in any case to seek the way out of misery rather than remain in misery from fear, possibly to go the wrong way.

Ready for Isolation.

"If our trade balance, through economic barriers in foreign markets or through political boycott, becomes a passive one, we shall, through our own ability and thanks to the genius of our inventors and chemists, find ways of making ourselves independent of those raw materials which we ourselves are in a position to manufacture or find substitutes for."

Bedlam broke out when Hitler had concluded his "appeal to the world." Members of the reichstag stood up, extended their right arms, and shouted "Heil Hitler!"

The chancellor himself was exhausted by his efforts. He dropped to his chair and buried his face in his hands.

Trusted leaders rushed up to congratulate him. Wearily he stood up to accept their acclaim.

It was all over. He had made his appeal and on the surface he apparently had won his case. Outwardly the German people, as represented in the reichstag, were still his enthusiastic followers.

The members of the reichstag in their brown uniforms made a stirring spectacle. Black helmeted Black Hussars stood like statues alongside the chancellor. More Black Hussars tramped the lobby. In front of the opera house the field police were lined up.

The ministerial seats were filled. One person was conspicuous by his absence. He was Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, who, during the tragic events of the mutiny's suppression, had been placed under custody.

Few civilians were in the audience.

Hugenberg at Session.

Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the Nationalists and ardent monarchist, was present. He was clad in a Prince Albert coat. Prince August Wilhelm, the former kaiser's son, sat nearby in a Storm Trooper's uniform. He flaunted the bright red band of the staf of Karl Ernst, who was executed for treason, on his cap.

Von Papen's close friend, Minister of Labor Franz Seldte, turned up in a Storm Trooper's uniform. His left hand was encased in a glove. It had been injured.

The diplomatic box was comparatively empty. The American, French and English ambassadors abstained from attending. Orme Wilson, first secretary of the American embassy, was present.

Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's iron fist, concluded the events of the day by expressing to the chancellor the thanks of the reichstag for Hitler's action against the mutineers. As president of the reichstag, Goering arose and said:

"The reichstag thanks the chancellor for his saving the nation from chaos and civil war. Foreign nations and the foreign press, believing the atrocity stories, might ask any German what is his standpoint toward the leader.

Goering Acclaims Hitler.

"They would receive the unanimous answer:

"'We all approve of what is done by our chancellor.'

"After all, loyalty is the basis of today's Germany. Everybody who shakes this foundation will hear the fate of the disloyal leaders who were shot."

The audience again shouted, "Heil Hitler" and Hugenberg who had sat immobile during the address and the ensuing cheers arose and extended his right hand in the Hitler salute.

FRANCE DENIES ENVOY TO BERLIN WAS IN NAZI PLOT

PARIS, July 13.—(AP)—The French foreign office, commenting on an apparent allusion by Chancellor Hitler to a report that the French ambassador to Berlin, Andre Francois-Poncet, met several persons plotting the Nazi revolt, emphatically denied that the ambassador ever had anything to do with Ernst Roehm and Kurt von Schleicher.

The idea that Francois-Poncet had even a remote connection with any one plotting a German rebellion is "absurd," a foreign office spokesman said.

French officials refused to regard Hitler's reference to a meeting between Roehm and Von Schleicher, both of whom were executed, and a "foreign statesman" as having any reference whatever to the French ambassador. The French pointed out that Francois-Poncet himself had been assured by the German foreign office that a report that a foreign power had advance information of the Roehm plot in no way referred to France.

SENATOR LEWIS WARNS OF WAR; LEAVES FOR EAST

Warning that "hostility between nations" may result in "military threat" was sounded by United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Illinois Democrat, in a prepared statement released last night.

The senator's statement said "dominant issues" of the coming political campaign had not been sounded by either party and predicted that world events by October would "push off the screen" the present political picture.

Senator Lewis left by train last night for the east where he plans a series of speeches. He indicated he was filling appointments to enable Postmaster General Farley to fill a speaking engagement in Illinois and the midwest.

FOREIGN WRITERS IN GERMANY REFUTE NAZI FALSE NEWS CHARGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 13.—The Foreign Press association met in Berlin today in an extraordinary session called to deal with the recent attack against the world press by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment. Dr. Goebbels in his attack charged foreign correspondents with having sent our false reports of the recent events in Germany and applied insulting terms to foreign newspapers.

By an overwhelming majority the members of the Foreign Press association, representing 23 countries, adopted a resolution stating: "The world's public opinion has already answered Dr. Goebbels." It was stressed that members of the association are complying with their professional duty and their high traditional standards, and that they have endeavored and are endeavoring to do full justice to the truth.

One of the prerequisites for establishing the truth, the resolution said, was to be found in authentic, reliable, and speedy information, which many correspondents declared was withheld by official quarters when they queried for specific concrete cases, except on June 30, the day of the Nazi party's "purge," when Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering of Prussia gave straightforward replies to investigating journalists.

BERLIN, July 13.—The Journal of the Catholic Diocese of Berlin, which appeared today with a front page photograph of Dr. Eric Klausener, chairman of the Catholic Action society, who was shot by black uniformed Hitler guards on June 30, carried the bishop of Berlin's "final greeting" to the Catholic leader.

"With profound sympathy and in profound sorrow," the greeting said, "the bishop of Berlin and his priests stand before the mortal remains of the man who has written his name in golden letters in the history of Catholicism in Berlin and who has been so suddenly taken from us.

"The terrible tragedy that has accompanied the close of the life of this true Catholic and German oppresses all those who knew him and all those who were witnesses of his work and who are profoundly grateful to him.

"But even in this mysterious darkness starlight still finds entrance. We know that those who are true children of Christ must also enter into the shadow of his cross and accept terrestrial wages of loyalty to Christ.

"Even in the moment when we stood shaken before the little pile of ashes that was left to us the light of eternity rested upon us, the light of day and the knowledge that a righteous life cannot be destroyed, but only newly formed and glorified.

"We have been parted from our beloved dead, but remain, nevertheless, one with him, united in the love of Christ, to whose honor and glory he who has passed away devoted his last words."

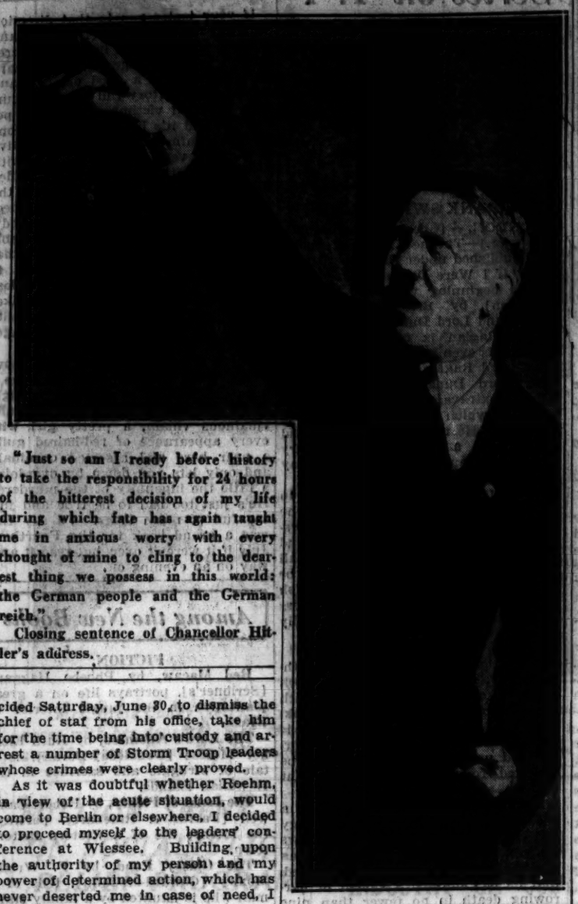
Tells Why Seventy-seven Were Slain



"Just so am I ready before history to take the responsibility for 24 hours of the bitterest decision of my life during which fate has again taught me in anxious worry with every thought of mine to cling to the dearest thing we possess in this world: the German people and the German reich."

thwart every attempt to have chaos come upon Germany, and that anybody who attacks the state must count me among his enemies.'

I adjured him for the last time voluntarily to abandon this madness, and instead lend his authority to prevent a development which in any eventuality could only end in disaster. Again I raised the severest objection against accumulating impossible excesses and demanded that these elements be completely eradicated, so that the honor of the Storm Troops, of millions of decent party comrades, and of hundreds of thousands of old combatants should not be jeopardized by a handful of low class individuals.

Roehm left me with the assurance that these rumors were partly untrue, partly exaggerated, and that he would do everything possible to put things right. The result of our conversation, however, turned out to be that Roehm, realizing he in no circumstances could count on me for his scheme, now started preparations to eliminate me personally.

Picked Man to Arrest Hitler.

For this purpose the larger circle of Storm Troop leaders who had been drawn upon were informed I myself was quite agreeable to the undertaking envisaged by them, but that I personally must not know anything about it. They also were informed that I had a wish at the outbreak of the uprising to be taken into custody 24 or 48 hours in order to be relieved by the accomplished fact of unpleasant embarrassment that would result for me from the foreign political point of view in case this did not happen to me.

This declaration finds its last illustration in the fact that meanwhile, as a precautionary measure, the man had been hired who was to carry out my later removal. Standard Bearer Uhl confessed only a few hours before his death his unwillingness to carry out such an order.

The first plan for a counter revolution was based upon the idea of sending the Storm Troops on a vacation. During this time tumults of undefinable extent were to break out in the absence of organizations upon which hands could be laid and on the pattern of conditions in August, 1932.

"Planned Armed Attack."

These were to compel me to call the chief of staf, who alone would be in a position to restore order, and intrust him with supreme power. After it became unmistakably clear, meanwhile, that that sort of readiness could be expected from me under no circumstance, this plan was cast aside and direct action taken under advisement.

It was to start in Berlin with a sudden surprise attack on the government buildings, I to be arrested, and then allow further action to develop as being done under my orders. Plotters calculated that orders given in my name to the Storm Troops throughout the reich would not only bring the whole Storm Troop organization on the scene but that all other forces of the state called into operation against them would automatically break up.

Plotted "Bloody Fight."

Roehm, Ernst, Heines, Hayn [Storm Troop leaders], and others have stated before witnesses they planned a bloody fight lasting several days with those against them. The question who would pay for it all was waved aside with crazy recklessness and the suggestion that bloody terror would furnish the means somehow or other.

There is one further thought which I must discuss here, namely, whether every successful revolution does not carry its own justification. Chief of Staf Roehm and his element explained the necessity of this revolution on the ground that pure National Socialism would achieve a victory justified only by revolution. At this place, and for those who live at present and those who live after us, I must, however, declare that these men no longer had any right to rest their faith on National Socialism as "weltanschauung" [word used by the Nazis to refer to their political and social credo].

Their lives had become as miserable as lives of those whom we overcame and whose places we had taken in 1933.

Information from Abroad.

The attitude and bearing of these men had made it impossible for me to invite them to my home or enter the Berlin house of the chief of staf even a single time. What would have become of Germany in the event of victory of this sect is hard to imagine. The greatness of the danger was really proved by information that now had reached Germany from abroad.

English and French newspapers began more and more frequently to speak of the coming revolution in Germany, ever more items revealed the fact that plotters had undertaken to work upon foreign countries along the lines that in Germany the revolution of real National Socialists was impending and that the existing régime was no longer able to act.

Gen. von Bredow, who as foreign political agent of Gen. von Schleicher looked after these connections, worked in accordance with the activity of those reactionary circles who, possibly without being directly connected with the plot, permitted themselves to be misused as ready subterranean go-betweens with foreign countries. I therefore determined at the end of June to put a stop to this impossible development and, too, to act before the blood of tens of thousands of innocents was to seal the catastrophe.

Decides to Strike.

As the danger and tension upon all was fast becoming unbearable and as certain party centers and state offices had to take defensive measures as was their duty, the peculiar lengthening of the service before the Storm Troop vacation seemed a questionable proceeding to me, and I therefore decided Saturday, June 30, to dismiss the chief of staf from his office, take him for the time being into custody and arrest a number of Storm Troop leaders whose crimes were clearly proved.

As it was doubtful whether Roehm, in view of the acute situation, would come to Berlin or elsewhere, I decided to proceed myself to the leaders' conference at Wiessee. Building upon the authority of my person and my power of determined action, which has never deserted me in case of need, I intended to dismiss the chief of staf at 12 o'clock midday, arrest the chief culprits among the Storm Troop leaders and recall the others to their duty by urgent appeal.

In the course of June 29 I received such threatening news concerning their last preparations for action that I was compelled at noon to break off my visit to the labor camps at Westphalia in order to be ready in any case. At 1 a. m. I received two alarming news reports of the most urgent kind from Berlin and Munich.

Firstly, that a state of alarm had been ordered for Berlin for 4 p. m., that for the transportation of the real shock formations a requisition of motor lorries had been ordered and was already in progress and that at 5 p. m. action was to begin by seizing government buildings.

Group Leader Ernst had for this reason not gone to Wiessee, but had remained behind in order personally to conduct the action in Berlin.

Secondly, the alarming of the Storm Troops in Munich had already been ordered for 9 p. m. The Storm Troop formations were not permitted to go home, but were sent to their alarm quarters. That was mutiny, for the commander of the Storm Troops is myself and nobody else.

Under these circumstances there could for me be but one resolve. If disaster was to be averted action had to be taken with lightning like rapidity. Only a merciless bloody stroke could perhaps smother the spreading revolt. Better that a hundred mutineers, conspirators, and plotters perish than 10,000 harmless Storm Troop men, 10,000 equally harmless citizens on the other side, should pour out their blood.

Ernst Called Criminal.

For if the criminal Ernst's action had been allowed to start in Berlin the consequences would have been unthinkable.

How the play with my name worked was shown by the alarming fact that these mutineers succeeded in Berlin by using my name to obtain from unsuspecting police officers four armored cars. Heines and Hayn had made police officers of Saxony and Silesia waver by calling them to decide between Storm Troops and anti-Hitlerites in the coming clash. Thus it became clear to me that only one man could and should face the chief of staf. He broke his faith with me and I alone could call him to account.

At 1 a. m. I received the last alarming dispatches. At 2 a. m. I flew to Munich. Meanwhile Premier Goering had already received orders from me in advance. In the event of action for purification his part was to take analogous measures in Berlin and Prussia. With an iron fist he beat back the attack upon the national socialist state before it fairly got started.

The necessity of this lightning-like action carried in its wake the fact that at this decisive hour only a very few men were at my disposal. In the presence of Minister of Propaganda Goebbels and the new chief of staf action of which you know was then carried through and concluded in Munich. If even a few days before I was still ready to be lenient I could at this hour no longer make any concession. Mutineers are broken, but iron laws remain eternally the same. If some one questions me why we did not invoke an ordinary court to deal with the men I can only tell him:

In this hour I was responsible for the fate of the German nation, thereby the supreme court of the German people during these twenty-four hours consisted of myself.

Divisions which engage in mutiny have at all times been called to order by decimating them. There is only one state which made no use of its articles of war and this state paid the penalty of collapse: Germany.

Admits Ordering Killings.

"I was not willing to deliver the young reich to the fate of the old. I issued the order to suit those mainly guilty of this treason and I issued the further order to burn out down to the raw flesh the boils of our domestic well poisoning and the poisoning of foreign countries. I issued the further order immediately to kill with the weapon any mutineer who might make an attempt of resisting his arrest.

The nation must know that its existence—and this is guaranteed by internal order and security—may be threatened by nobody without punishment. And every one is to know for all future times that if he raises his hand for attack against the state certain death will be his lot. And every National Socialist must knew that no rank or no position removes him from personal responsibility and with it from his punishment. I have pursued thousands of our former opponents on account of their corruption.

I would blame myself if I were now to tolerate similar manifestations in our midst. No people, no government are to be blamed if creatures such as we knew in Germany by the name of Kutisker, etc., or as the French people have learned to know them in Stavisky, and as we experienced them again today, bob up in order to commit sin against the interests of the nation.

Warning to Traitors.

Every people, however, is guilty if it does not find strength to destroy such harmful creatures. If I am confronted with the opinion that only the due process of law could have balanced guilt and extirpation exactly I issue a solemn protest against such viewpoint.

Whoever arises against Germany, is engaged in treason.

Whoever commits treason shall not be punished according to the volume and extent of his act but according to the animus displayed. Whoever ventures to stir up mutiny in this country by breaking loyalty, faith and sacred promises can expect nothing but to become its first victim.

I do not propose to shoot small offenders and let big ones off. I have not to investigate whether any of these plotters, trouble makers and poisoners of wells of public opinion in Germany and abroad, was treated too roughly—I have only to watch that Germany's fate shall be made bearable.

Pities Families of Victims.

A foreign journalist, a guest of this country, protests in the name of wives and children of the executed men and looks to them for retribution. I can only answer that gentleman: Wives and children have always been innocent victims of criminal men. I pity them, too, but I believe that suffering inflicted upon them through the fault of their men is only a tiny fraction of the woe that would have befallen tens of thousands of German women had this plan succeeded.

A foreign diplomat declared his meeting with Von Schleicher and Roehm was, of course, of an entirely harmless nature. I do not have to discuss that with anybody. Opinion as to what is harmless and what is not will never agree in the realm of politics. If, however, three traitors in Germany agreed to meet a foreign statesman and carry this agreement out and themselves designate it as "service" and if they keep the servants away and give strictest orders to keep the meeting secret as far as I am concerned, then I let such men be killed even if it should be true that in the course of a conference that was thus kept from me the participants allegedly spoke about nothing other than weather, old coins or similar things.

Dead Listed at 77.

The punishment for these crimes was severe and hard. Nineteen higher Storm Troop leaders, 31 Storm Troop leaders and Storm Troop members were shot; likewise three special guard leaders as participants in the plot and 13 Storm Troop leaders and civilians who attempted resistance of their arrest and had to give up their lives.

Three others ended by suicide. Five non-Storm Troop members, but party members were shot for complicity. Finally, there were shot three special guard members who had made themselves guilty of disgraceful maltreatment of prisoners taken into protective custody. In order to prevent political passions and indignation at further complicity from venting itself in lynchings, the strictest orders were issued Sunday, July 1. After the danger had been removed and the revolt could be considered as having broken down, we refrained from any further revenge.

"Sacrifices Not in Vain."

With this order, normal conditions were restored the night of July 1. A number of deeds of violence that are not in any way connected with this action will be turned over to normal courts for trial.

However heavy the sacrifices may be they have not been in vain because they lead once and for all to the conviction that every attempt at high or state treason will be broken irrespective of the persons. I hope confidently that if fate should at any hour call me from my place my successor will not act differently and in case he, too, must abandon the field, the third one after us will be ready to safeguard the security of our people and nation with no less determination.

If, during the two weeks which lie behind us, part of the foreign press, instead of objective and just reporting, flooded the world with untrue and inaccurate contentions as news, I cannot permit objection to be made that other news was not to be had.

In most cases nothing but brief telephone calls to authorities would have been necessary in order immediately to clear up the unfounded nature of most of these contentions. If it was specially disseminated that members of the reich's cabinet had been among the victims or plotters, it would not have been difficult to determine that the opposite was true.

Von Papen Is Cleared.

The contention that Vice Chancellor von Papen, Minister Seldte, or other gentlemen of the reich's cabinet had any connection with the mutineers is most sharply discounted by the fact that one of the first intentions, among others of the mutineers, was that of murdering these men. Of whole cloth, also, is all the news concerning participation of any German princes or about their persecution.

If, finally, an English paper latterly reports I suffered a nervous collapse, the truth could have been readily ascertained by a brief inquiry. I can only assure these anxious reporters I never collapsed during or after the war, but it is true that this time I have been afflicted by the severest collapse of faith and loyalty I ever placed in a man for whom I had answered—aye, and for whom I had sacrificed myself.

Let me affirm at once that my confidence in the movement, and especially the special guard, has never wavered. And now confidence in the Storm Troops also has been restored to me. Thrice had the Storm Troops the misfortune to possess leaders—the last time even the chief of staf, whom they believed they had to obey and who deceived them—to whom I gave my confidence and who betrayed me. I also had thrice occasion to observe that at the moment of betrayal the traitor was left alone, shunned by all.

Lauds Storm Troopers' Loyalty.

Faithless as was the behavior of this little group of leaders, equally great was the loyalty of these two National Socialist organizations in the decisive hour to me.

If the special guards during these days fulfill their highest duty with the feeling of being inwardly wounded, it is also true that the attitude of millions of loyal Storm Troop men and Storm Troop leaders was not less decent.

Standing outside this community of treason they never for a second wavered in interpretation of their duty. This gives me the conviction that the new chief of staf of the Storm Troops, to whom I am bound by ties of an old common experience in the fight, will at last succeed in rejuvenating the organizations in accordance with my guiding principles and make them even stronger members of our movement.

For I shall never consent to have something destroyed that will not only for all time remain indissolubly bound up with the struggles and victory of the National Socialist movement but that also has unmeasured merit for giving form of a new reich.

The Storm Troop organization has preserved in these most trying days its inner loyalty. It has thereby for the third time proved it is mine, just the same as I can prove any time that I belong to my Storm Troop men.

In a few weeks time Brown Shirts will again dominate the streets of German towns and make clear to all that the National Socialistic Germany has regained a stronger life by overcoming a severe time of stress.

Pardon for Old Opponents.

When in March last year our young revolution roared over Germany my greatest endeavor was that as little blood as possible should be shed. To millions of my former opponents I have offered for the new state and in the name of the National Socialist party a general pardon. Millions have since joined us and are faithfully cooperating in the work of reconstructing the reich.

I had hoped it would not be necessary once more to defend this state with a weapon in hand. Now that fate laid this test upon us after all, we all want to pledge ourselves all the more fanatically to cling to what was won by hard struggle and with so much blood of our best men, and what today again has to be held through the blood of German compatriots.

Just as one and a half years ago I offered reconciliation to our opponents of that time, so, too, I should like today to offer forgetfulness from this moment for all who were in part guilty for this act of insanity.

A Plea for Peace.

May they all beat their own breasts and in remembrance of this distressing chapter of our new German history devote themselves in all their power to repairing the damage done. May they recognize more surely than before the great task fate has set before us and that it is not solved through civil war and bloodshed.

May they all feel themselves responsible for the most precious gift that can exist for the German people: order within and domestic peace.

Just so am I ready before history to take the responsibility for 24 hours of the bitterest decision of my life during which fate has again taught me in anxious worry with every thought of mine to cling to the dearest thing we possess in this world: the German people and the German reich.

3 CHARGES FAIL, BUT 'DRUNKEN DRIVING' TAKES

Lawyers in Safety Court Stir Up Hubbub.

A situation in which three successive charges were preferred against a defendant before there was found a final one, of driving while intoxicated, which seemed to coincide with the testimony in the case, arose yesterday before Municipal Judge Edward S. Scheffler in the new Safety court.

The case was that of Steve Matson, 2918 North Kostner avenue, whose automobile collided early yesterday at Sacramento and Irving Park boulevards with that of George Andrews, 4003 Fullerton avenue. With Matson were his wife, Anna, and Dr. John H. Jarvin, who lives at the Kostner avenue address.

Originally Matson had been charged with reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident, and his wife and Dr. Jarvin with disorderly conduct.

Two Accusations Fail.

They were represented by a vociferous lawyer, and the hearing developed into a tumultuous row, in which the lawyer, Andrews, and Assistant State's Attorney Samuel Papanek engaged.

When it was testified that Matson had given his name, somewhat reluctantly, to Andrews before he drove away at the approach of a patrol wagon, and that no one had been injured in the crash, Judge Scheffler held that there was no legal ground for either of the original charges against him.

Prosecutor Papanek then had a new complaint, charging speeding, made out against Matson. That, too, was dismissed after Andrews and the defense lawyer had spent some minutes yelling at each other.

Policeman Peter J. Snyder of the Albany Park station, who arrested the Matsons and Dr. Jarvin, testified, however, that all three smelled of liquor and had used abusive language.

Draft New Complaint.

"Then why didn't you arrest Matson for driving while intoxicated?" demanded Judge Scheffler. "That is a much more serious offense than the others charged."

Snyder said that he had made out an arrest slip on that charge, but that the police clerk at the station had failed to enter the charge in the warant. Judge Scheffler then ordered a new complaint drafted, making the driving while intoxicated charge against Matson, and set it for hearing July 31.

Judge Scheffler sentenced Gilbert Fierros, 23 years old, 4458 South Ashland avenue, to 30 days in the Bridewell and fined him $100 for leaving the scene of an accident.

Gust Olson, 30 years old, 2221 Pioneer road, Evanston, was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail yesterday, when he appeared on two charges of driving while intoxicated before Municipal Judge James Corcoran in Evanston.

Investigate Fixing Charge.

Judge Michael G. Kasper is to hold a hearing in chambers this morning on charges that two clerks in the old Trafic court helped to "fix" on Thursday the case of Glenn S. Bowstead, 4432 Magnolia avenue, a public accountant, accused of passing a stop sign and of speeding.

Richard Frohlich, chief deputy clerk, suspended the two men, James Minisso and Walter Sheller, yesterday pending investigation, and questioned others.

Inspects Rare Crops

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

July 13, 1934.

DR. EARL G. SIEVEKING, soil and crop specialist of the Funk farms at Bloomington, Ill., is being rewarded for his effort in searching the world for rare crops and finding new homes for them in the United States. During the last few days he has been making a careful study to determine the progress made by the fifty or more varieties and strains of rare crops on the Tribune Experimental farm.

These crops are all strangers to farmers in Kendall county where the farm is located and to other farmers in northern Illinois. Dr. Sieveking is well pleased with the growth and development of the crops, particularly because they are thriving despite the dry weather handicap. When the first inspection of the crops was made by Clarence Thurow, manager of the farm, on June 13 some of these crops had just broken through the ground and the perennial lespedeza seeds had not even sprouted.

Today all of the crops are up. What the future holds for these rare plants no one can tell thus far in advance. When Dr. Sieveking entered the field where the test plots are located he walked straight to the two foreigners which he calls Harbin and Korean lespedeza. This rare crop hunter was anxious to know how these two immigrants were faring in new soil and under strange weather conditions.

Both the Harbin and Korean are annuals. The plants will die this fall, the seeds will fall to the ground and after spending the winter in the open they will come up in the spring. At Urbana, Ill., Harbin matures so early that the seeds come up in the fall and the plants are winter killed. Dr. Seiveking is hopeful that the plants in the Tribune farm test plots will mature late enough this fall so that the seed will remain dormant in the soil and not come up until next spring. Korean matures late. The season at the experimental farm may be too short for the plants to produce seeds that will fully ripen before frost.

These two lespedeza strains have made a satisfactory growth so far. The plants are being grown in rows and are beginning to spread over the ground. Lespedeza, a legume, is referred to by botanists as bush clover. Millions of acres of Korean lespedeza are grown in Kentucky, southern Illinois, Indiana, and Missouri, and if it withstands the test at the Tribune farm it may be added to the northern Illinois farmers' list of crops.

Harbin is so rare in the United States that the seed sells at $15 a pound. If the Harbin now growing on the farm's test plots reaches maturity the seeds will be carefully harvested and cared for as if they were tiny nuggets of gold.

The two perennial lespedeza strains, Sericea Nos. 04730 and 12087, have made the poorest showing of any of the rare crops. But Dr. Sieveking says that the seeds were not planted early enough. They were further handicapped by being planted in a dry and dusty seed bed. The seeds were slow to start and the plants have just broken through the ground during the last week. Before the recent rains men at the farm had decided the seed would not sprout and allowed weeds to take the plot. This morning they were whetting their sickles, getting ready to mow down the weeds in an effort to save the young and tender plants. No. 04730 is hardier than the other Sericea strain and withstands the winters much better in central Illinois. The severe test for these two strains will come at the farm this winter.

The five rows of Dwarf Essex rape in the test plots have made an excellent showing despite the dry weather conditions earlier in the season. The crop already is big enough to be pastured down with pigs or sheep. The common practice of broadcasting rape results is a great waste of feed, according to Dr. Seiveking. The rape is being grown in rows at the farm, leaving a series of pig paths between the rows. This makes it possible for the pigs to walk in the paths while they are feeding instead of tramping the rape leaves into the ground where they become worthless.

Boise, Idaho, July 13.—(AP)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's statement at Waterloo, Ia., that Senator William E. Borah "won't be able to say anything of a critical nature" about the NRA "that we shall not have corrected before he gets it uttered" was termed the "best news of the year" by the Idaho legislator today.

"Nothing would please me more than to see Gen. Johnson employ his great fighting ability against monopoly which is boring from within the NRA and is destroying and thwarting the efforts of the general to bring about restoration," Borah said in a statement. "So long as monopoly can fix prices it is impossible for the farmer or the workingman to make progress in recovery.

"It is true there has been some increase in the prices of farm products. But it has been more than wiped out by the unjust and exorbitant prices which he is compeled to pay for the things he must have.

"It is correction along these lines which I think the people are entitled to. And I can state with great sincerity that I am delighted with Gen. Johnson's attitude. I will furnish him with the facts."

JOHNSON'S SLAP BRINGS PROTEST BY NAZI'S ENVOY

Hull Replies He Spoke Unofficially.

ing out of turn. Admiral William S. Sims, one of the navy's most successful "kickers," was twice reprimanded, once under President Taft for a "hands across the sea" speech in England, again for a speech before the English Speaking union in London in 1921, when he again stressed the bond between England and the United States and described the Irish Sinn Feiners as traitors during the war.

Admiral Is Disciplined.

Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, another constructive but outspoken commentator on naval organization, was placed on inactive duty for many months because of articles in which he criticized the naval administration under Secretary Wilbur.

Brig. Gen. William D. Mitchell was court martialed for jumping over the official traces concerning the air service and forced to resign rather than be suspended for five years. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former army chief of staf, was recalled from an inspection trip because he had criticized army housing, but was able to explain that he had been misquoted.

JOHNSON STANDS PAT

Omaha, Neb., July 13.—[Special.]—Sitting in his undershirt before an electric fan in his hotel room here today, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, reasserted that he has no intention of backing down from his denunciation of the Hitler "purge" in his address at Waterloo, Ia., yesterday and expects no rebuke from the state department.

Informed that Dr. Rudolf Leitner, chargé d'affaires of the German embassy, had called upon the state department in Washington for an official explanation of his Waterloo address, Johnson reiterated that he would stand by his guns.

"I won't take anything back, for I mean't everything I said," the general declared, referring to his arraignment of the German government which he was told had created a furor at Washington.

"I don't expect to be called down by the state department," he said, "because I was speaking as an individual, not for the state department or the administration.

"It is true that nothing has impressed me so much since the war as these events in Germany. To me they indicate that when people depart from constitutional rights they enter into uncertainty."

The general remained here over night after arriving in an army plane en route to Portland, Ore. He expressed his intention of stopping briefly at San Francisco to confer with his assistant, Edward F. McGrady, on the longshoremen's strike.

CHARGES LANGER PLANS TO RULE BACKED BY GUARD

Warns Against 'De Facto' Government.

Bismarck, N. D., July 13.—(AP)—A "de facto" government backed by the North Dakota National Guard, Attorney H. G. Fuller told the Supreme court today, is planned by Gov. William Langer if he is removed from office by court order.

Recalling Gov. Langer's frequent use of the Guardsmen in enforcing his decrees, the attorney for Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson, who seeks the governor has appealed his conviction on in support of his motion to remove Langer.

Takes No Direct Action.

No direct action was taken by the court, although the request of H. A. Bronson, associate counsel for Langer, that he be allowed to file briefs until Monday noon, was granted.

Olson claims the governor was disqualified for office by his recent conviction on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States government by soliciting political contributions from federal relief workers. The governor has apealed his conviction on which he was sentenced to serve 18 months in a federal penitentiary and pay a $10,000 fine.

Urges Quick Decision.

Fuller further contended that a special session of the state legislature, called by Langer yesterday to consider charges against him, would be asked to appropriate money to pay the Guard in event it was called to maintain him in office. He added a quick decision by the court was essential.

START NEW MOVE TO PREVENT AUTO WORKERS' STRIKE

The Chicago regional labor board in an attempt to avert a walkout set for Monday by the Automobile Mechanics' union, local No. 701, of the International Association of Machinists, yesterday called a conference between 109 automobile dealers and the union officials for this morning.

Insistence on recognition of the mechanics' union is the chief cause of the difficulty with the car dealers, though the union officials complain that the $15 a week minimum requirement under the NRA retail auto dealers' code has remained the maximum in many cases. Opposing demands of the union is the Chicago Auto Trades association, which recently was temporarily enjoined by a Circuit court order from interfering with its members' attempts to deal with the union individually.

Boy's Arm Is Amputated in Fight to Save His Life

Dr. Karl A. Meyer, chief surgeon of the county hospital, last night amputated the right arm of Leonard Papryzki, 7 years old, 2214 North Seeley avenue, in an effort to save the life of the boy, victim of gangrene poisoning. The boy fractured the arm in a fall one week ago. The infection set in afterward. Parents of the boy consented to the operation only after they were convinced that amputation was the sole hope of saving his life.

FINED AS GIRL'S ANNOYER.

Accused of molesting several little girls in the Ridge theater, 1550 Devon avenue, John O'Donnell, 24 years old, 3058 Normal avenue, was fined $25 and placed on six months' probation yesterday by Judge Alfred O. Erickson.

Walsh Is New Star in Irish Literary Sky

Will Be Some Solace to Byrne Mourners.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

TO those who felt that the literary sun rose in Donn Byrne and that it set forever with his death, Maurice Walsh was the discovery of a planet. A new romantic adventure from his pen, "The Road to Nowhere" [Stokes] was published this week to brighten Irish eyes. It is the story of Rogan Stuart, a Scots-Irishman whose wife, on her way to join her lover, was drowned at sea with the child of her husband's heart, and how his road to nowhere led to . . . well, you know where it would lead in a good Irish tale.

The lover plays a secondary part by wanting to marry an American-Irish beauty and coming up against the braw fist of Rogan, rechristened Rogue McCoy. There is much of the gay and care-little life of the tinkers in Mr. Walsh's pages, much of the flowery brogue of the countryside, a mild mystery and romance and adventure breezing through them.

Most of Mr. Byrne's admirers will find Mr. Walsh a welcome inheritor of their idol's mantle. His most discriminating critics will miss in Mr. Walsh's pages the rare and exquisite beauty of which, at those supreme moments, Donn Byrne was capable with his pen. Maurice Walsh is better than Donn Byrne at his worst, as good as Donn Byrne at his ordinary, but no successor of the genius of the author of "Messer Marco Polo."

The Extraordinary in Autobiographies.

An autobiography extraordinary and baffling is "Magpie" [Little Brown]. Its author, Lois Vidal, was the daughter of an English clergyman who suffered some mental and physical weakness which brought death to him in an institution for the mentally unadjusted. Her childhood and youth were spent in the pleasant ways of decent poverty. She had a good education, many friends, obviously a winning way and the future seemed one of hope and honor until she, too, became neurasthenic.

She did war work with zest and success. She had adventures of the emotions, but was apparently no more at the strain of the leash of convention than most other girls of her period and class. But the strain was apparent in constant recurrences of the flu and in the mental degradation of despair. She needed work to live and she could not work.

She became apparently actively neurasthenic. She began having adventures, often of the most incredible proportions, with men. But somehow there seemed always to be women who came to her rescue. She lived literally from hand to mouth, with the hand so limp in its physical grasp as to have loosed all hold on ordinary conventional life. She was a despair of her proper but penniless relatives. She went to Canada where her adventures were even more incredible than in London.

Illness, rescues by disinterested cavaliers, gullible friends landed her back in England and for years she was apparently one of those strange women that one sees at night on the London streets, never actually shabby, uprooted, neither prostitutes nor flower venders who make you: blood run cold. In between times she was "in service," but never for more than "three days or three weeks." Adventure was in her blood, insipient insanity was in her blood, established home life was in her blood, yearning for beauty . . . and the battle ground was a shambles.

The publishers quote the London Times as saying: "It is doubtful whether a book quite like Miss Vidal's has ever been written before or could ever be written again," thus gently reminding the reader that he will find in it many things which will startle him. What startles this reader more than anything else is the fact that the author remembers day by day and night by night every one of her adventures, even to the word for word conversations which took place when she was on the verge of hysteria, starvation, death and destruction. Such a memory is almost more incredible than many of the adventures which it recalls.

London, however, has accepted the book as an amazing and gripping fact and has apparently cast no doubts upon the author's veracity. If it is the whole truth and nothing but the truth it is indeed one of the most amazing human documents ever set to paper. It is written in a style which gives perfect credence to the cry of hysteria in its pages.

New Hedin Book Out on Monday.

Sven Hedin broke into the news columns this week with his capture by Mongolian bandits just in time to be good publicity for "A Conquest of Tibet" [Dutton] which will be published officially on Monday. In his record of their trek to Lhassa Sven Hedin tells graphically of being set upon by a band of Mongolian robbers among other thrilling incidents. The author has turned illustrator also in this volume with, at times, amazing vividness.

More Novels of Nazi Regime.

"Blood and Tears" [Appleton] by Balder Olden is the latest of the novels about Nazi Germany which seem to have become as prevalent as their background in the news columns. It was published on Monday and tells the tragic story of persecution. "In a Nazi Garden" [Vanguard] by Lona Mosk is another . . . the idyll of an American newspaper woman and a German lawyer made tragic by her Jewish blood. But the most impressive of all the books lately about Nazi Germany is "The Berlin Diaries" [Morrow] edited by Dr. Helmut Klotz which are said to be the private journals of a member of the German ministry of war revealing the secret intrigues and political barratry of 1932-'33. There, if you wish to find it, is something to twist your insides.

Jeffery Farnol Hits Again in Adventure Yarn of Sea

Jeffery Farnol has turned again to the sea in "Winds of Chance" [Little-Brown], and, as in his earlier maritime tales, has scored a sound success. He has written a long and thrilling romance and adventure yarn beginning in England and crossing the Atlantic to a mysterious city of the Incas. The heroine tells the story which, as in many of Farnol's tales, starts slowly. But it soon gets into high and the latter part of the book is as smashing a bit of romantic adventure as a thrill seeker could ask for.

Britishers Get Series on 'If I Were Dictator'

Lord Dunsany Uses Subject for Ridicule.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—The new series of books published under the general title "If I Were Dictator" has made a good beginning with two volumes [Methuen] by British peers—Lord Raglan and Lord Dunsany.

Lord Raglan is in earnest; Lord Dunsany is even more in earnest. But while Lord Raglan keeps to the level road, Lord Dunsany darts at once into an extravaganza of ridicule and nonsense which is as shrewd as it is diverting. He reaches his serious end by way of a destruction of every kind of solemnity, and his work may be said to instruct by laughter.

Other men who will contribute to this series include Robert Lynd, the literary editor of the London News-Chronicle, and Vernon Bartlett, and while no doubt the theme will pall quickly enough these books will be well worth reading by those who wish to note the rapid present day progress of political ideas and their equally rapid decay under criticism.

I mentioned recently among forthcoming autobiographies the book which Roy Campbell, the South African poet, was writing. This book, "Broken Record" [Boriswood], is now published, and it is fully as vigorous and unconventional as was to be expected from this bold and irreverent writer.

It is too hastily written to be a good book, but it is full of energy and condensed narrative which shows what a bean feast the author has made of his life. He says, indeed, that he has suffered a violent or harrowing death in no fewer than nine novels or tales written by friends or acquaintances, and as he is evidently a person who does not shun danger, fights, and other quarrelsome encounters, his continued existence in the real world is a matter for congratulation. The book should be read. It is the work of a character.

Miss Phyllis Paul's first novel, "We Are Spoiled," seemed to me [as I am glad to see that it seemed to many other reviewers] to be a most exciting discovery for those who are interested in new talent. It was odd, beautiful, and original. It could not have a wide popularity because of its oddness, but it attracted critical attention, and I think Miss Paul will undoubtedly, if she continues to produce such good work, attain a distinguished reputation.

She is very young indeed, in her very early twenties, and her experience of ordinary life is small. She lives in the country and knows no literary folk. So much the better.

And she has now written a second novel, "The Children Triumphant" [Secker], which is quite as good as "We Are Spoiled," and quite as odd, beautiful, and original. It is not for everybody. It is for those interested in the personal vision of a child of great talent whose literary gift is remarkable and who is unaffected by current literary fashion.

American Scholar Has Amusing Story on 'Yarning in 1850s'

In the summer number of the American Scholar, the Phi Beta Kappa quarterly, there is an article by Paul Fatout on "Yarning in the 1850s" that is not only illuminating but very amusing.

"The success of Harriet Beecher Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' in 1852," he writes, "when one hundred thousand copies were sold in eight weeks, probably caused many a woman to attempt a novel."

Sara Willis Parton's "Ruth Hall" sold fifty thousand copies in eight weeks in 1854 and Maria Cummins' "The Lamplighter," Susan Warner's "The Wide, Wide World," and the novels of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, he says, "must have been glittering examples spurring on platoons of hopeful aspirants."

And then Mr. Fatout [who is assistant professor of English at Purdue university] analyses and synthesizes the novels of the period when "the scribbling women and the accompanying male sissies of the feminine decade contribute a museum piece."

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

If your tastes run in that direction you will find plenty of crime and any amount of detection in "The Secret of Jangles" [Lippincott], by Leonard R. Gribble. It's a good old Scotland Yard mystery story full of plots, murders, innocent victims, and doomed policemen and it's built to specifications for the conformation-to-type detective fan. And very well built, too, with Inspector Anthony Slade being baffled like anything, but always getting the essential hunch or picking up the negligible clew just around the dead end's corner. He is one of those likable sleuths who has appeared in other thrilling cases and will continue to appear until detective stories lose their hold upon a public which likes expertism coupled with improbability within the 300 clearly printed pages of a fast moving yarn.

There aren't so many of these nowadays, when even murder has gone a little intellectual, so this one is highly recommended. It sports a really villainous villain, a pretty girl with every appearance of red-haired guilt, a near hero and assorted criminals, and only lets you down by overdoing a little the ingenuity of the murderer. He's just too bad to be true and just too full of mean ideas. I'd say this was a grand book for the Fourth of July if it weren't over, but read it anyway on an evening off.

Evelyn Waugh Takes You on Satisfying Journey in Tropics

Not a thrill nor a real adventure can be found between the covers of "Ninety-two Days," by Evelyn Waugh [Farrar & Rinehart], a tropical jaunt through British Guiana. And yet it's one of the most satisfying travel tales imaginable. One jogs leisurely through this apparently uninteresting South American colony in company with the genial and imperturbable young Englishman and wishes the journey were longer.

Mr. Waugh is one of the most delightful of travel companions. He possesses an almost unbelievable calm in the face of annoyances that would stir the ordinary globe trotter to a towering rage; he has a dry and keen sense of humor and a remarkable ability to tell of trifling things in a casual way that charms as well as interests.

Hollywood Extra Takes Stand.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 13.—[Special.]—June De Long, gilded haired, blue eyed motion picture extra, spent the day as chief state's witness in the "Hollywood morals" trial of David Allen and Gloria Marsh. She told a story of a "wild party" at her rooms.

She was aggressively challenged by Jerry Geisler, head defense council, in portions of her testimon which referred to the sudden appearance of Mrs. Pearl Owings in a doorway of her apartment while, she said, she and Miss Marsh, unclad, were with Allen. The witness insisted there had been no prearrangement to have Allen and Miss Marsh surprised with her. She declared she had fled from Los Angeles the night of April 26 because of threats of police action which began as soon as Allen saw Mrs. Owings appear in the apartment.

The witness gave her real name as Ann Snyder, but by agreement with both counsel she will be known as June De Long throughout the trial.

Miss Marsh is scheduled to stay off the stand. Mrs. Owings is the only other eyewitness. The corroborating word of two witnesses is necessary in the case. As a result, Prosecutor Arthur Veitch laid emphasis on a line of questioning requiring sensational admissions.

The witness covered the period of her acquaintance with the casting director, who, she said, suggested a "party" in her home when she first applied for movie work.

Stating she had first met Allen when she registered at Central Casting office for extra work in December, 1931, she said Allen had twice visited her rooms prior to April 26, 1934, each time asking that she have another girl come to the apartment at the same time.

"On April 26 I went to Allen's office again and he asked if I brought my girl friend along," Miss Long testified. "I said no, but went to the corner drug store and tried to phone a girl I had in mind, but couldn't get her and went home. I had barely reached my apartment at 11th street and Western avenue when a rap at the door showed Mr. Allen."

Gets Another Girl.

Questioned by Deputy District Attorney Arthur Veitch:

Q.—What happened? A.—He sat on the davenport and we talked about studios and movie work and he said, "Don't you know any other girls?" and I phoned several numbers, but got no one. I told him I didn't see why he had so many excuses about not giving me work, and he said I wasn't a red head or tall enough. Then the phone rang and it was Gloria, whom I had called up, and she said she'd come over.

Q.—Did she come? A.—Yes, and I introduced Mr. Allen to her.

Q.—What happened. A.—Gloria and I went into the dressing room and got undressed and came back. Mr. Allen locked the front door.

The testimony then led up to the appearance of Mrs. Owings in the doorway of the room.

"Mr. Allen jumped up and shouted 'Frameup!' and I looked up and saw my girl friend in the doorway." Miss De Long testified.

Threatens to Call Police.

"Mr. Allen said he was going to call police. Gloria and I were badly frightened, and dressed. When we came back Allen and Mrs. Owings were disputing. I begged him not to call police. Mr. Allen asked if Gloria could leave, and she left."

At this point Charles Ostrom, attorney for Miss Marsh, secured a ruling by Superior Judge Rey Schauer that further testimony as to what occurred in absence of the Marsh girl would not be binding regarding her.

At 10:30 o'clock that night two men with police badges visited her, and she packed and started from Hollywood to San Francisco that night, the witness said. She drove back to Hollywood later upon receiving a long distance call from Mrs. Owings, and was conductcd to conferences with Carl Kegley, attorney for reform organizations, and with a grand jury official.

The intentness with which Hollywood film officials and movie followers in general have been following the trial was demonstrated by the continued appearance in the courtroom of observers from women's clubs, local organizations, and movie groups.

CONVICT 9 IN N. Y. FOR MURDER OF AN ARCHBISHOP

New York, July 14 [Saturday].—(AP)—A General Sessions jury convicted nine Armenian defendants early today of the slaying of Archbishop Leon Tourain last Christmas eve in the Holy Cross Armenian church. The jury deliberated 11 hours.

Mateos Leylegian, leader of the group, and Nishan Sarkisian were convicted of murder in the first degree, which carries a mandatory death sentence, and the others were found guilty of first degree manslaughter. The penalty for first degree manslaughter is from ten years to life.

In bringing in a verdict against all nine of the defendants the jury doubtlessly believed that the archbishop's death was the result of a conspiracy engaged in by these members of the Tashnag, an Armenian revolutionary society.

They were opposed to the prelate's political opinions and were against the present soviet régime in Armenia.

The seven convicted of manslaughter were Osgan Yarganian, Martin Mozian, Harry Sarafin, John Mirijanian, Mihrans Adigian, and Chanes Andreassian and Tchalikian.

MILLION SPENT ON SOCIALISTIC RELIEF PROGRAM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—[Special.]—A million dollars has been spent by the Federal Relief administration in order to foster 195 tiny socialistic communities throughout the country, inquiry disclosed today.

Approximately half a million people are estimated to be living under these "cooperative" arrangements whereby goods and services are exchanged on a communistic basis. The communities are scattered over eighteen states.

Organized Among Needy.

Organized among the unemployed or needy, the socialistic experiments provide for the interchange of products and work among the members on a noncash, nonprofit basis. The relief administration advances the groups money for necessary supplies and equipment which they cannot obtain otherwise.

Within the last week the socialistic plan has blossomed luxuriantly. The Ohio relief administration is proposing to take over closed factories and operate them with taxpayers' money. The products will be distributed on a nonprofit basis among the unemployed, competing with the private industries which now furnish the relief forces with necessary materials at low prices.

Propose Capital Center.

At the same time here in the nation's capital itself the District of Columbia commissioners, all appointed by President Roosevelt, are proposing to set up one of the socialistic "self-help" centers. A commissary through which farm and home products are exchanged is to be established and probably a central sewing room where the unemployed will make clothes to be distributed to other members of the group on a barter basis.

The Ohio proposal is the first serious attempt to put the government into a socialistic system of manufacturing. Thus far most of the socialistic communities have been organized among destitute or needy farmers where food and services are exchanged by the use of book credits, barter, or scrip instead of money.

Fear Political Effect.

Although they have seriously considered throwing the unemployed into the idle factories of the nation and socializing business by operating these factories with tax money on a nonprofit basis for the manufacturing of supplies for persons on relief rolls, the brain trusters of the relief administration have not yet dared do so. Fearing the political effect of such a move they have fought shy of it and have not yet approved the Ohio plan.

Meanwhile, however, the coöperative groups in rural areas have spread swiftly. Six months ago, at the close of 1933, there were only 29 of them. The latest check showed 195, a sevenfold growth in six months.

Witnesses said that the two men quarreled over a card game in the saloon and went outside to settle the issue.

BLAMES PARALYSIS OF HAND MADE CIGAR INDUSTRY ON CODE

York, Pa., July 13.—[Special.]—The closing of the fifty cigar factories, employing more than 4,000 persons, in York county, center of the country's hand made cigar industry, was blamed today on the "discriminatory nature" of the recently approved cigar manufacturing industry's code by C. M. Ehehalt, secretary of the York County Cigar Manufacturers' association.

"As it stands this code will wreck the hand made cigar industry, especially that section of it which produces the lower priced cigars," Ehehalt said. "Under the code, which was dictated by the manufacturers using automatic machines, the small, independent manufacturer will be forced out of business and the larger manufacturer will be compelled to install automatic machinery and to throw out of work thousands of persons in this section."

The York county factories closed their doors on July 2, the date the code went into effect. Some of them attempted to reopen this week and to employ only the "fast" workers who were able to earn the code minimum wage at the piecework scale in effect before the advent of the code. Unionized workers protested and all factories were closed again by agreement today.

POLITICS ALONE KEEPS NRA ALIVE, SAYS SEN. DAVIS

Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, one of the leaders of the Republican party, implied in a Chicago interview yesterday that the Roosevelt administration is clinging to the Blue Eagle in desperation.

"More than one keen observer," he remarked, "has suggested that the NRA would have been abandoned some months ago if the administration could have done so without public admission of failure.

"To abandon it would be to lose all, and therefore political considerations demanded that it be retained."

FARLEY VISIONS PARTY VICTORY IN G. O. P. STATES

Assails Sen. Robinson in Indianapolis Talk.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 13.—(AP)—Postmaster General Farley predicted in a speech here tonight that not only will Democratic majorities to the congress be reëlected in November but that the Republican strongholds of Pennsylvania, Maine, and probably Vermont will be battered down.

"I look for senate victory in New Jersey, Missouri, and Ohio, Maryland, and West Virginia—but why enumerate the particular states?" he said at a dinner given in his honor. "We concede no senate seats whatever. This goes even for such G. O. P. strongholds as Pennsylvania and Maine—yes and I am not even leaving Vermont out of the calculation."

First on Speaking Trip.

While expressing confidence that the house of representatives will be Democratic by a large majority Farley, who also is party national chairman, urged leaders not to let such a feeling slow their efforts in the coming election.

"This is no ordinary congressional compaign on which we are engaged," he said. "Our President has been challenged; his policies have been belittled and misrepresented, and our political adversaries are boldly proclaiming that their object is to elect a national legislature that will repudiate what this administration has offered as the solution of the problems that beset this nation."

Assails A. R. Robinson.

The speaker vigorously assailed United States Senator Arthur R. Robinson [Rep., Ind.], who last month was renominated as the opponent of Sherman Minton of New Albany, the Democratic candidate. He described Senator Robinson as "a man whose record during nine years in the United States senate is so sterile that his name is linked with not a single worth while piece of legislation."

Farley said Republican leaders, casting about for an issue for the 1934 campaign, "did not dare assail the President, for they knew that the country was behind him."

"So they cast about for somebody rash enough and foolish enough to jeopardize his own political future by doing the thing that they dare not do or were ashamed to do themselves, and the choice fell on your senior senator, perhaps on the theory that his political future was not worth worrying about in any case," Farley continued.

"Senator Appears Confused."

"So your senior senator launched a series of speeches and statements in which he declared that the Roosevelt administration had assumed complete dictatorship and censorship in the United States. The senator appears to be a trifle confused as to various theories of arbitrary government, for in one case he lists the federal administration as a Mussolini dictatorship, in another a czarist despotism, and in a third he likens it to the communism which is the direct opposite of the other two."

As evidence that the Roosevelt administration is accomplishing something, Farley said building contracts have increased and production of automobiles and steel is much greater than a year ago. Department store sales also reflect favorably on the administration, he added, and millions more men are working than when the reconstruction program began.

"The job is not done yet by a long sight," Farley added. "There still is an army of unemployed, much reduced but nevertheless a still formidable army, that must be put to work. There still is a multitude of people who must be fed and housed, for the President's promise that nobody in this country shall starve is still binding. It remains for the next congress to complete the work so well done by the congress that has just adjourned."

Farley referred to the factional fight within the Democratic party in Indiana, which involves R. Earl Peters, former state chairman, and Gov. Paul V. McNutt. Peters was ousted by the governor as state chairman late last year and was defeated by Minton, McNutt's choice for the senatorial nomination, last month. Farley expressed the opinion that factionalism would be forgotten in Indiana now that the ticket has been selected.

He said that Peters, Senator Fred Van Nuys, and Gov. McNutt and "all the others who struggled in the preliminary days now are behind the candidacy of Sherman Minton."

400 GROCERS UNITE AT ROCKFORD IN DEFY TO NRA ASSESSMENT

Rockford, Ill., July 13.—[Special.]—Four hundred Rockford grocers today defied prosecution under state NRA laws and refused to pay code assessments on the grounds that unfair competition is still being permitted in their trade.

Discrimination by manufacturers in selling to retailers so that some stores can sell more cheaply than others can buy wholesale was given as one of the principal reasons for their action.

"We intend to hold up payment until the NRA does something," Morris Rosenbloom, vice president of the Retail Food Dealers' association, declared. "The NRA will not amount to anything until the manufacturer is compelled to follow fairer methods."

Only five independent grocers have paid their $1 a year assessments. Edward Dietrich of Freeport, Ill., secretary of the district code authority, has asked action by State's Attorney Robert E. Nash.

FARLEY VISIT CREATES STIR

Plans for the Illinois visit today of Postmaster General Farley, who also retains his post of Democratic national chairman despite the announced Roosevelt ban ruling to the effect that partisan political capacities and governmental executive jobs must be separated, stirred up state politics yesterday.

Farley will motor into Springfield to speak at a noon luncheon of the Springfield Mid-Day club at the Leland hotel. From there he will go to the state fair grounds, where he will address a state-wide gathering of members of the party led by Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly.

Plans Fight for More Seats.

Advance announcements have said that Mr. Farley, the campaign manager who put Roosevelt across in the Chicago Democratic convention, not only will defend the present administration, but that he will champion it militantly with the idea of adding more Democratic seats to swell the party's majority in congress next fall.

But without waiting for the Democratic boss to cross the state line from Indiana, the Republican organization launched some bitter broadsides at the postmaster general and his dual rôle yesterday, the spokesman in this case being Justus L. Johnson of Aurora, chairman of the state committee.

"Mr. Farley's trip," said Johnson, "should serve to emphasize the cunning and duplicity now being practiced on the voters and taxpayers by the self-styled and self-serving 'New Dealers.' The presidential cabinet member comes to Illinois not to improve postal service but to supplement the Democratic party bosses of this state in their unscrupulous attacks upon the integrity of state civil service and to help them, through the use of taxpayers' money, federal jobs and appropriations, to strengthen and build up the present Democratic Tammany within the borders of our commonwealth.

Attacks "Jobs" Politics.

"It is notable that while the President is conveniently and conspicuously out of the country, apparently seeking to divert the attention of the voters from the waste and extravagance of this administration, his political party chairman, patronage distributor, and personally appointed postmaster general is actively engaged in trying to show his Democratic cohorts how to strengthen their political organization through partisan control of public relief funds and the distribution of a hundred thousands new jobs on a purely partisan basis."

NRA MAPS NEW COURT TO HEAR CODE PROTESTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—[Special.]—The NRA is preparing to set up its own court of appeals to which business will be invited to bring its protests against the codes and the Blue Eagle regimentation.

The new appeals board is conceived to replace the old national recovery review board, which under Clarence Darrow reviewed the work of the Recover, administration until its criticisms of the NRA became so pointed that the New Dealers forced the retirement of Darrow and his fellow members.

Both Prosecutor and Judge.

Under the new plan, however, the NRA will be both the prosecutor and the judge. The appeals board will be the creature of the NRA itself and will be appointed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, chief of the NRA.

Amos J. Peaslee, now head of the NRA's compliance or enforcement work, is expected to head the new NRA appeals board. There are to be two other members, who have been selected, but whose identity is not known. Both, however, probably will come from within the NRA staf itself.

Announcement of the new board's creation is expected from Gen. Johnson's office as soon as the two members who are to serve with Peaslee have accepted the appointments. This is expected to come within the next day or two.

Will Hear Protests.

The board will hear all protests which any business man under a code wishes to make against the NRA regime. Hundreds of complaints were pending for hearing before the Darrow review when that body, which was independent of the NRA, was killed.

There is some question here, however, over whether business will feel free to complain to an NRA board about the workings of the NRA itself. It is considered significant that the members of the new board will be indebted to Gen. Johnson for their positions. Moreover, the head of the board will be the man whose task has been to force industries into line with the codes.

The Darrow board was killed by President Roosevelt just before he sailed for his vacation. Its death made practically obligatory the creation of some new agency which would give the appearance that business still has a court to which to appeal from the NRA.

Reports Rap NRA.

Darrow and his colleagues were bitter in their denunciations of the NRA, provoking a series of retorts from Gen. Johnson and his aids which enlivened official Washington for weeks. The Darrow board declared that small business was being put at the mercy of monopolies by the NRA and rapped the dictatorial tactics of Johnson. He repeatedly called for its dismissal and, had it been under his power, as the new board will be, he would have dissolved it.

Johnson has explained, however, that he has no objections to a review board. He declared that the personnel and doctrines of the Darrow board were such as to render it useless.

Calls Economic Planning an "Unattainable Ideal"

Dean Ralph E. Heilman of the Northwestern university school of commerce yesterday analyzed economic planning as it is advocated by the "100 per cent planners" and called it an unattainable ideal, incompatible with democracy and technical progress and involving a greater surrender of individual freedom than the American people would ever consent to. He spoke before a luncheon of the Executives' club in the Hotel Sherman.

Dean Heilman prefaced his remarks with an explanation that he did not refer to the emergency legislation of the New Deal, but to the much discussed long range economic planning designed to "balance consumption with production, selling price with costs, purchasing power with output, credit expansion with the sound needs of industry and demand for labor with the supply of labor."

Can't Guarantee Stability.

He said that no economic plan sponsored by the United States could guarantee business stability because business fluctuations are frequently caused by foreign and world-wide conditions which no single government could control. These fluctuations occur in peace times, and the possibility of war makes it even more clear that there is no hope of removing economic cataclysms, Dean Heilman declared.

"And I may say that the prospects of war will be increased rather than diminished through nationalistic economic planning," he continued.

"Economic planning on a national basis [and obviously no other basis is possible in the present stage of civilization, since we cannot ignore national boundaries] is inevitably accompanied by 'intense nationalism,' militaristic fervor, trade restrictions and barriers, and by conjuring up foreign bogeys and external dangers, in order to hold the nation in line to support the plan. Contemporary events both in Italy and Germany illustrate the truth of this statement."

Wouldn't Harmonize Anyway.

Dean Heilman said that planned stability, even if it were attainable, would not harmonize with a society characterized by rapid change and technological improvement.

"Had a planning board, with complete control, existed in the early stages of the 'horseless buggy,'" he said, "it would have had two alternatives. It would have been compelled either to give this new infant industry a free hand for development, with the resultant dislocation of many other industries, including manufacturers of carriages, harness, bicycles, and growers of feed crops, or, on the other hand, it would have had to repress the development of the new industry.

"Economic planning means economic management, and it means management by some one other than those who now own, manage, or plan for a business. It means management by representatives of government.

"In brief, the proposal, when stripped down to its essentials, involves a greater surrender of individual freedom that we would be willing to acquiesce in—unless we are willing to abandon entirely our existing economic and governmental system."

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."

—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

GEN. JOHNSON CONFESSES A SICKNESS.

"I know the normal reaction of this [the Nazi terror] on NRA efforts. It is that if power of any kind can be seized there is no limit to its application." Gen Johnson made the statement in his Waterloo speech. He qualified it by saying that he, as a lawyer, was sure the constitutional guarantees could not be signed away. The qualification is not sound, but the rest of the statement is. It is the basis for the opposition to the New Deal. Its logic is imperative.

If any kind of power can be seized there is no limit to its application. Gen. Johnson is horrified by events in Germany. He says they made him sick. The Germans had as high a civilization and culture as the Americans. Unfortunately they had less political sense than Americans are supposed to have.

Russia can be explained by its semi-Asiatic barbarism. That explanation may satisfy people who reserve themselves from the possibility of going the way of the sovietized Russians. For Italy it could be said that the people historically had not had a long breathing spell from various tyrannies before Mussolini took them over, that the alternative was communism and that Mussolini avoided the extreme of bloody purges.

The Germans had been law givers and law observers. If they did not have democracy they had ordained law and order. They permitted an evil of military arrogance, but they respected the law and they were secure in it. They have lost every vestige of civilized rights. They are told that one man makes the law and that his personal court will administer it. That man proclaims himself a savior while he inflicts himself on the people as a curse. The historical prognosis is that he will fall as he arose, but the people meanwhile are being ruined, physically, morally, and intellectually.

They did not prevent the seizure of power. They cannot prevent the extension of it. When people depart from their safe and approved ways they lose the power to defend themselves. Their legislative bodies surrender their rights and responsibilities. Their courts weaken before the united front of dictatorial government. Their administrators embark upon enterprises which require illegal methods. Moderate men are succeeded by wild men. When lawlessness becomes official "there is no limit to its application."

The historical rule is that coercion with the gloved hand is followed by terror under the mailed fist. The bolshevists follow the menshevists. When Dr. Wirt reported that some Washington radicals referred to Mr. Roosevelt as Kerensky, all the New Dealers were in a welter because they recognized the historical verity. Their attack to discredit the educator was impelled by their appreciation of the credibility of the prophesied progression. The end result is Robespierre, Lenin, Hitler. When men have placed themselves above laws there is no stopping point at which their ambitions or intentions must be halted. If one administrator weakens a stouter and more resolute man will take his place. When plans begin to fail because of nonconformity, compliance will be forced if there are no laws to prevent it.

Gen. Johnson knows that Americans have lost constitutional rights already and he knows that the courts have weakened. A generation ago judges would have thrown the government attorneys out of their courts if they had made pleas now sustained. The New Deal legislation would have been declared beyond authority before an act could have been enforced.

Hitler establishes his own court. The New Deal has created scores of these special tribunals in which the defendant has lost his rights before he enters one of them. Hitler says that the people must obey. The New Dealers say disobedience of illegal command is shameful. If Mr. Johnson, whose job is to get industries into codes, says the codes do not abrogate constitutional guarantees, the attorney general, the legal authority of the administration, says that citizens do sign away their constitutional rights when they submit to them. They contract with the government to accept unconstitutional law and they cannot appeal from that to their rights.

Control, repression, and suppression are the essence of the New Deal. Congress is retained as a formality, but the people are told that it is unpatriotic to oppose one of these dumb rubber stamps in an election. If the New Dealers had their way they would keep a Hitler hand picked congress in Washington. Political opposition is now regarded as scandalous. Any one who supports the American system of free government and free people is held up as an example of moral turpitude.

Gen. Johnson may live to find himself sick because of something that has happened to the American people. They are living in the same day and age as the German people and their only superiority to the Germans is their political sense. If that fails them there is no difference.

THE LEOPARD'S SPOTS.

An ordinance fixing the closing hour for the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sunday mornings at 3 o'clock was passed Wednesday at the final summer meeting of the council. The present closing time is 2 o'clock. The new ordinance was shipped through without discussion among a miscellany of last minute matters and was not noted by the press, or, according to their own assertion, by members of the council, including the vice chairman of the license committee.

This incident is a reversion to the tactics which brought about prohibition. That there is any respectable reason for extending the hours during which liquor can be sold Sunday mornings we emphatically doubt, but there is no doubt that the extension should have been debated in the open and not slipped surreptitiously through as it was. It gives another warning, of which there have been many, that the liquor trafic has learned nothing by its experience with outraged decency and its suppression as a lawful industry.

The conscienceless greed which made the liquor trafic a festering sore in the social and political life of the nation for years and brought about the futile and mischievous experiment of federal prohibition is manipulating itself again and must be restrained by more effectual means. The trafic in alcoholic beverage is respectable in other countries, and must be compelled in the United States to regard the welfare of the nation. The public conscience will not submit to a restoration of the evils which THE TRIBUNE described accurately in the editorial we republish on this page today.

Is liquor trafic bent upon committing suicide? The alternative to the demoralization of federal prohibition is not the vicious license which brought it about. There is a sane middle ground consistent with temperance and social well-being. The liquor trafic can be placed upon that ground, and if reason influences its policy and conduct it will assist in that accomplishment. If it ignores its responsibility it will be treated to a discipline which it will not find pleasant or conducive to its profit.

WASHINGTON'S WATER BOYS.

Jim Ham Lewis tried to make something of a Democratic United States senator the other day, the same being himself, by issuing remarks on the state of the nation. It seemed a good time for a Democratic United States senator to try a comeback. The adjournment of congress had allowed all the important persons of government, the herders of the congressional herd, to get out of town and scatter for rest and recreation. Tugwell, Wallace, Johnson, Ezekiel, et al. had packed their suit cases. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt were gone traveling. The Hon. Mr. Lewis thought to steal into the cave of the winds and let loose a few blasts, a repressed and underprivileged statesman fooling around with the controls like a small boy in a power house.

It was no go. With the exception of Carter Glass, Democratic United States senators have accepted jobs as chore boys. The professors send them on errands. The pages make a more impressive assemblage when they hold a mock session of the senate. The Conscript Fathers of older days are now political conscripts but not national fathers. They are the professors' boys of all work.

[THE TRIBUNE, July 11, 1917.]

If the secret records of the brewing and distilling industry were ever brought to light they would tell a story of social and political corruption unequaled in the annals of our history. If the veritable narrative of the American saloon were ever written it would make the decadence of Rome look like an age of pristine purity in comparison.

Whisky, wine, and beer never caused half as much injury to society as the manufacturers and purveyors of these beverages. If these men have not made a practice of committing murder and arson it is because these crimes did not seem immediately profitable. The liquor business has been the faithful ally of every vicious element in American life; it has protected criminals, it has fostered the social evil, and it has bribed politicians, juries, and legislatures.

The inherent corruption has extended even to the so-called decent saloon. There are few that do not serve adulterated products and it is an unusual proprietor that is not more pleased when his patrons are getting drunk than when they keep sober. Philip Drunk stays longer and spends more money than Philip Sober. That is one reason why the saloon would rather sell ardent spirits than beer; they are more intoxicating.

We have been speaking of the "decent" saloon; the other variety is almost unspeakable. The smallest count in the indictment against the evil barroom is its persistent evasion of the law. We are not surprised to read that numerous Cook county roadhouses are operating without licenses, that they keep open on Sunday, or that they seem to exercise a mysterious control over public officials. Yet these are only minor offenses in the calendar of saloon iniquities.

The brewers have at times tried, or said they would try, to clean up the saloon business. The head of a great St. Louis brewery often told his confrères that it was the brewers' only salvation. The theory was accepted, but the practice was always to expand every energy to sell one more keg of beer, even if it had to be sold to bootleggers and resort keepers.

It is for these reasons that the prohibition movement has gained such strength. The demand for the abolition of the liquor trafic is the expression of a ripening conviction that it is conducted by nefarious means for nefarious ends.

"After us the deluge" seems to have been the philosophy of the liquor men—but now the deluge seems to be on the point of breaking.

In the days in France I remember a Virginia gentleman in the Red Cross outfit who used to burst forth now and then into this inspiring song:

And poke chops are certainly fine;
But gimme, oh gimme, oh how I wish you would,

OUR CITY COUNCIL is considering the vivisection of dogs not claimed at the city pound. We are a strange people; we shriek to high heaven at the very idea of permitting Spanish bull fights (Oh! the poor bulls!) and yet we turn little dogs over to medical students for a Roman holiday. We ought to have bulls for pets instead of Scotties and Airedales and Sealyhams (Thomas Atkins, please write). Then when the bulls strayed and got put in the bull pound and the medical schools grabbed 'em—well, a bull in a medical school could make things about as interesting as he is generally reputed to do in a china shop. And what he doesn't do to a china shop is certainly nobody's business.

The idea! Why, over in these United States traveling in an auto at sixty miles an hour on a public highway, either in failing light or the middle of the night, is just considered loafing along, and if there is somebody with you he is sure to pipe up with: "What the matter? And also his royal scepter and his ermine robes. And it wouldn't do to kick the caddy because the caddy wouldn't mind, but would join up immediately with a side show and get a hundred pounds a week for being exhibited as "The Caddy Who Was Kicked in the Pants by His Majesty Himself." No, if you're king there's no proper way of working off your feelings at golf.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

HYDROPHOBIA OR RABIES.

We should be cautious but not unduly alarmed about dog bites. Every year thousands of people are bitten by healthy dogs. All such wounds should be treated surgically in order to prevent infection.

On the other hand, bites from dogs that are sick must not be regarded lightly, because the dog, through no fault of his own, may be infected with rabies and thus become a serious menace to those about him. Whenever rabies is present in a community all dog bites must be viewed with suspicion, as it has been shown that the saliva of the infected dog may contain the virus several days before he shows symptoms of illness.

Hydrophobia has been known for centuries, and at different periods in the world's history has spread with great rapidity from lower animals to man. It was through the remarkable work of a great French scientist, Louis Pasteur, that a method was developed of preventing this dread disease.

Although many animals are susceptible, rabies is communicated to man usually through dog bites. The dog in turn can acquire the disease only when bitten by another animal that has it. There is a popular but erroneous belief that the disease may be brought on in dogs by great heat, excessive food, lack of water, excitement, etc.

The virus of rabies attacks the nervous system. Some twenty years ago Adelchi Negri, an Italian, discovered certain peculiar bodies in the nerve tissues of animals afflicted with hydrophobia. Since then finding "Negri bodies" in the brains of dogs has been accepted as positive evidence of the existence of the disease.

The dog afflicted with rabies as a rule shows increased excitability and restlessness and usually becomes cross and snappy. The disease, however, may take the form in which the dog, sensing that he is ill, seeks to hide. Whether the symptoms be of the restless, irritable type or the quiet, morose kind, the dog rarely lives more than a week or ten days after the onset.

Dog bite wounds should be allowed to bleed freely and should be promptly and thoroughly cauterized with concentrated nitric acid. The animal should not be killed, but quarantined and observed for any signs of illness. If the dog dies within two or three weeks the brain should be examined and if Negri bodies be found, all persons infected should be given the Pasteur treatment. This treatment has been firmly established for many years. If the bite be from a dog known to have hydrophobia, the Pasteur treatment should be instituted without delay. In untreated cases in human beings symptoms will usually appear in from three to eight weeks.

Prevention means safety. Many states, cities, and towns have dog quarantine laws that operate more or less efficiently during several months of the year. It is essential to muzzle dogs that are permitted to roam the streets. Stray dogs are dangerous and in most enlightened communities are caught and quarantined before being disposed of. A few years ago an outbreak occurred in Ontario. Many persons as well as large numbers of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine were bitten by diseased dogs. In spite of the strenuous efforts of the health authorities it required five years to bring the disease under control. Two minor outbreaks were traced to dogs shipped from the infected area.

Veterinary surgeons have been of great service in protecting the public from rabies by prompt recognition of the disease in animals and proper quarantine measures.

INTESTINAL CANCER.

V. I. R. writes:

1. How does intestinal cancer start?
2. Could it be detected by germs in the stools?
3. What disease would they indicate?
4. What causes amebic dysentery?
5. What are the symptoms?

REPLY.

1. Cancer of the intestine usually arises from some irritation of the mucous membrane lining.
2. No.
3. Stools of all normal persons contain countless millions of bacteria.
4. Entamoeba histolytica that may enter the digestive tract via contaminated water, uncooked food, or food infected by flies, or food handlers.
5. If the disease is acute there may be nausea, chilliness, abdominal pains, frequent stools. Later, the stools will contain mucus and blood. This will be followed by loss of weight and anemia.

IMPETIGO.

Mrs. W. L. writes: My 16 year old boy has had impetigo on his face for almost a year. I have tried different things, but it does not get better. Can you tell me what to do?

REPLY.

Impetigo is a stubborn skin disease. Gently wash the infected area with hot soapsuds and water, and then anoint with ammoniated mercury. Do this two or three times daily. Make sure that the ointment does not gain access to the mouth or the eyes. See that no other member of the family uses the same wash cloth, towels, etc.

SEVERAL WAYS.

G. K. writes: How could one get syphilis? I have had three blood tests and these tests said I have, but my doctor is not quite sure, and yet he wants me to take treatment. I have no marks on my body or mouth.

REPLY.

If your blood test has been made by a reliable laboratory and found to be positive you should take anti-syphilitic treatment.

The organism causing syphilis may gain entrance to the body through several avenues.

JUDGMENT.

Santa Fe, N. M., July 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am holding a judgment against a party who is married and is carrying a twenty-year life insurance policy about fifteen years old. He secured the policy when he was single. 1. Am I entitled to collect the judgment through the insurance company? 2. If so, how? How soon should I enter my claim? 3. What action can he take in protecting himself in case of my delay? 4. In case he wants to prevent collection by stopping payments, can I make the payments in order to protect my judgment? J. D.

1. In general, if the insured has the right to change the beneficiary then his creditors can reach the surrender value. Rights depend on the wording of the policy.
2. The first step would be to employ an attorney.
3. One possibility would be bankruptcy.
4. Undoubtedly the insurance company will accept the money regardless of the source from which it comes.

BROKER'S COMMISSION.

Joliet, Ill., July 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Some time ago I signed a contract with a real estate dealer. The contract has expired. I offered the land at $100 per acre. He was to make what he could for his work. His price to the prospective customer was $110 per acre, which he would not pay, but would pay $100 an acre. Now the prospective buyer comes to me and says he wants the farm and will pay my price of $100 per acre. Can the real estate agent collect in any way if I sell to the prospect? H. E. N.

Section 92 of the chapter on brokers, 9 C. J. 607, provides in part as follows: "In the absence of fraud the broker is not entitled to a commission on a subsequent sale by the owner, even though the sale is made to one with whom the broker was negotiating before the time expired. There are cases, however, holding that if the negotiations between the principal and the customer continue uninterruptedly after the expiration of the time allowed the broker, and a sale is made of which the broker is accordingly the procuring cause, he is entitled to a commission, although the sale is not consummated until after the expiration of the time limit, particularly where the contract so provides."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SECOND MORTGAGE.

Kenilworth, Ill., July 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please give me your opinion of the [1] legal worth of a second mortgage trust deed securing the payment of two promissory notes. The deed and notes are signed by a certain woman, but not by her husband. The deed is recorded. The title to the property is in the wife's name. 2. Some one has said that because the husband did not sign the trust deed it is not worth the paper it is written on. C. D. D.

1. In general, the value of a second mortgage depends upon the value of the pledged property and the amount of the first mortgage.
2. Without the husband's signature the title would be subject to his dower interest, which is one-third of the income for life if he survives his wife. The wife's signature would be sufficient to convey the title subject to this cloud.

ACTUAL CASH VALUE POLICY.

Chicago, June 28.—[Friend of the Insured.]—What is meant by an actual cash value automobile policy? How would it apply in the case of a loss? And what are the advantages and disadvantages? C. B. A.

The actual cash value policy is not only one of the oldest forms of automobile insurance, but it is still the most generally sold. It is issued for a definite amount stated in the policy which represents the maximum liability assumed by the insurance company. This amount usually represents from 80 per cent to 90 per cent of list or cost price, depending entirely upon whether the car is new or used. When the policy is renewed from year to year, the amount of insurance is naturally lessened due to the depreciation of the car. In case of a total loss the amount of insurance carried is given but little consideration; the company adjuster uses the principles of indemnity and bases the insured's loss on the actual cash value of the automobile at the time of loss, with deduction for depreciation. Should, however, the actual cash value exceed the amount of insurance carried, then the latter is only considered, in which case the amount of loss collectible is limited to the face value of the policy or the amount of insurance carried. The main advantage to the form is in case of total loss the company has a definite basis on which to figure the amount of loss, while the disadvantage, which often develops into a controversy between company and insured, is the latter's desire to carry more insurance than he can collect, in which case the insured is usually left dissatisfied.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

FROM COMMISSIONER LELAND.

Chicago, July 9.—I am writing to direct your attention to an editorial in THE TRIBUNE of July 3 entitled "In Effect an Income Tax," the opening words of which were as follows:

Assessors preparing the new personal property tax rolls under the inspiration of a brain trust professor on the state tax commission follow up the new idea that a street address is assessable by a fixed rule.

The editorial then condemns the "telephone book" method of assessing personal property in Cook county.

My purpose in writing you is to call your attention to the fact that the views attributed to me in this article I do not hold, nor do I approve of the methods of assessment complained of in your editorial. I am assuming, of course, that I am the "brain trust professor" referred to in the editorial, since I am the only professor on the tax commission.

Nothing could be further from the truth than the statement that the present method of assessing personal property is a result of inspiration either on the part of myself or my colleagues on the commission. Even hasty consultation of easily available facts would have shown the writer of that editorial paragraph the error—and unfairness—of such a statement. Not only have I not been the "inspiration," but the fact is I have consistently opposed the "telephone book" method.

The record will show that on May 1, 1932, more than six months before I was appointed to the tax commission, I submitted a memorandum to the county assessor on the assessment of personal property in which I strongly condemned the present system. I opposed the office assessment method, and informed the assessor of my belief that it is essential that personal property be assessed on the basis of personal inspection by competent field men, their findings to be checked by statistical information prepared in the office. My memorandum included this statement:

The personal property tax in this county is so thoroughly discredited that proper results by way of improved assessments cannot be expected either by mailing schedules to taxpayers and telling them how to list their property or by asking them to come to the assessor's office and make their assessment there. The personal contact of field assessors is needed at the present time, if never before, in order to assure taxpayers of fair treatment.

I referred to the present system as "doomage," derived, of course, from methods used in preparing the ancient "Doomsday Book," and informed the assessor that it ought not to be tolerated. I further stated that "a survey of the tax literature reveals the fact that experienced assessors, tax administrators and writers on assessment problems are almost unanimously of the opinion that personal visits of members of the assessor's staf are essential to satisfactory assessments of personal property." This was supported by numerous quotations from respectable authorities and tax administrators. Needless to add, the assessor has not taken my suggestion, and the result is the situation about which THE TRIBUNE complains.

Furthermore, the state tax commission, which THE TRIBUNE editorial criticizes in this respect, has taken a definite stand on this matter. Recently, as a means of improving the taxing machinery throughout the state, the commission issued a booklet entitled "Illinois Assessors' Manual" to serve as a guide for assessors. I refer you to page 47, on which the tax commission gives its suggestions for assessing personal property and warns against the system now used in Cook county.

From this you will perceive that on this matter my own position, the position of the tax commission, and the position of THE TRIBUNE are identical.

FINANCING CHARGES.

Chicago, July 6.—Recently I decided to make a loan of $400 on my car. In doing so I ran across a few hair-raising, blood-boiling facts. I was to repay the loan in monthly instalments, plus 2 per cent, or $8 per month, for financing, or a finance charge of $96 for one year on a $400 loan. Think of it! A charge of 24 per cent per year for a loan.

Also the charge of 2 per cent per month was on the original loan made for the whole year and not 2 per cent per month on the unpaid principal, i. e., the principal minus the previous month's payment, a difference of 12 per cent a year.

Can any kind reader tell me just how and why this is allowed under our laws? If this is perfectly legal, it seems to me these laws are maintained for the benefit of the financier and to the detriment of the general public. I can't understand how a bank can charge a maximum rate of 7 per cent interest with collateral and a finance company 24 per cent also with collateral covered by insurance of various types in the event the car is stolen, burned, etc.

THE ELEPHANT.

Along with the picture of the Republican elephant pulling us out of the civil war, out of European alliances, and the attempts to destroy the constitution, it seems to me there should have been another showing the same benign beast pulling this country out of the hard times of 1929-'33.

Society Sees Classic Today at Arlington

Many Luncheon Parties at Paddock Club.

BY JUDITH CASS.

ARLINGTON PARK will have one of the biggest days of its season today and the Post and Paddock is certain to be the scene of many smart luncheon parties preceding the races. Mrs. William H. Mitchell has planned a large party for Mrs. Dodge Sloane and there will be dozens of other smaller ones.

Miss Helen Hertz and John D. Hertz Jr. flew home from New York yesterday after a trip to Bermuda so that they could reach here in time to see the rich Classic run and they will be among the thousands who will watch the finest three year olds in the country race for the $35,000 stakes this afternoon in the mile and a quarter Classic. The Hertzes have no entry in the Classic this year but Chicago is represented by the Warren Wrights' Hadagal, and the Wrights will be there this afternoon to see him race, of course.

Young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt will come in for much attention this afternoon if he spends any time around the Post and Paddock, but being a very modest young man who likes to keep out of the limelight he probably will be down at the paddock with the horses instead of in the Post and Paddock with the debutantes and sub-debs who would like to have a chance to entertain this young gentleman from the east. His Discovery will be in the big race this afternoon. Mrs. Sloane has two entries in the race, Cavalcade, the Kentucky Derby winner, and Good Goods, and both are among the favorites.

About fifty of those who watch the racing this afternoon will move on to the Lake Villa estate of the Otto W. Lehmanns this evening to enjoy a buffet dinner, an annual party on Classic day.

"Syndicate" Golf Matches Today.

There will be at least twenty-five Lake Forest masculine residents who won't be driving west to Arlington this afternoon, for they have an engagement to play golf at the Shoreacres club. They are the Lake Forest members of "The Syndicate," and their partners this afternoon will be the eighteen St. Paul and Minneapolis members who are coming from the Twin Cities for the annual get-together of "The Syndicate."

No wives accompany the men on these expeditions, although there is talk of changing that next year, when the meeting will be held at the Twin Cities, and of letting the Lake Forest wives go along.

Miss McLennan to Be Bride Today.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock in the living room of her parents' home in Lake Forest Miss Margaret McLennan, second of the three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan, will become the bride of John B. Morse. The Rev. George Roberts of the First Presbyterian church of Lake Forest will read the service in the presence of relatives and intimate friends before the fireplace, banked with white lilies for the occasion.

The bride will be attended by her little niece, Nancy Ober, daughter of the former Jane McLennan and Woodbury S. Ober, and her sub-debutante sister, Miss Katherine McLennan. George A. Ranney Jr. will be best man.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception for the wedding guests and then the bride and bridegroom will leave for a western trip. When they return the first of September they will live in the Marshall Field Garden apartments in Chicago.

Several young men who were graduated last month from Yale with Mr. Morse and Mr. Ranney are here for the wedding, and Mrs. George Adams Richardson, the bridegroom's mother, will give a luncheon for them today at her residence in Lake Forest.

The Ralph Ishams and the W. Paul McBrides are giving a dinner tonight in the McBride home in Lake Forest for Miss Ruth Elting and Mahlon Ogden West, who are to be married next Wednesday. This is the last of a series of parties that have been given for this popular couple during the last month. Mr. West is having his bachelor dinner Monday night at the Onwentsia.

Tennis Matches at Knollwood

Miss Mary Reed and Miss Jean Schweppe have promised to play an exhibition tennis match at the Knollwood club at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Miss Reed and Miss Schweppe, who are the Onwentsia's best players, will play a singles match, and Charles S. Garland and William J. Croker, the Onwentsia tennis professional, will play an exhibition doubles match against George Crowley and Karel Kozeluh, the Knollwood professional.

The John de Koven Bowens are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son last Wednesday morning at St. Luke's hospital. The baby, who has been named John de Koven Bowen Jr., is Mrs. Joseph Tilton Bowen's great-grandchild.

Musical Benefits Children's Hospital.

Mrs. Dexter Cummings, whose Lake Forest home was the scene yesterday of a musical tea and "white elephant" shower for the benefit of the Children's Memorial hospital, reports a generous response to the clever little invitations. Over 100 people dropped in during the afternoon to enjoy the music and contribute by their gifts to the Rummage shop at 27 East Ohio street, which is operated by the wom-

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

In summer as well as in winter, a dry skin needs beauty aids that help the lubrication cause along. Here's a foundation lotion about to go into service, to be followed by a powder created especially for parched skin.

As we've said in these columns before, we're partial to liquid foundations in the summer time. We've been trying lots of them and almost by accident stumbled on one recently that is perfectly splendid for dry skins. It's made by an old and too little known house and when used in conjunction with their powders for dry faces is just the answer to the prayers of the woman with parched skin for a sure and suave makeup.

Neither it nor the powders are very expensive and both are marvelous.

The need of the dry skinned woman for cosmetics that don't drain her pores of their necessary natural oil is just as real in summer as in winter, although the need may not be so apparent. A great many of us are tempted to toss away our rich creams and the beautifying aids we know will help the lubricating cause along just because we feel they're a bit hefty for the summer months. It's not a good idea. Dry skin is dry skin in any weather and needs careful nurturing.

We like the idea of powders and foundations specially styled for the epidermis that has a crying need of lubrication. After all, every little bit helps.

This lotion is a great pet for winter and summer. The powders are the clinging kind that get you through a sunny day without looking as though you'd been doing setting up exercises. And the shades, sisters, are something to rave about. Be sure to look at those finely textured, delicately perfumed ones called "Evening" and "Nude." They're swell.

And while you're at it, look at one of the handiest little purse compacts you ever saw. Loose powder, a puff you can get a grip on, a mirror, and all of it small enough to be a welcome addition to the crowded pocketbook. They're being given away with the other products of this same line in certain stores. ELEANOR NANGLE.

Good Morning!

"A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men."

Truly spoken! And never are lightness and laughter more appreciated than on a midsummer's day when the blood runs warm and the lazy brain says: "O for pity's SAKE don't give me anything to REALLY think about!"

Seasonable, then, is the Palace's current feature, "We're Rich Again." It is a little nonsense, plus some more nonsense with a soupçon of nonsense added just for good measure. A nutty family film, this opus, concerned with the affairs of the Pages et al.

The scene opens with a view of Mr. and Mrs. Page dodging bill collectors and a process server on a day shortly before their daughter, Carolyn, is to marry the wealthy stock broker, Booky.

Their money is low—in fact there isn't any money! And the trick is to keep up appearances until Carolyn has firmly annexed her rich man.

The situation becomes complicated by the arrival of the bridegroom himself, a polo playing grandma and the youths she beats at polo, the descent of an eldest daughter, just graduated from college and an apparently speechless young man with appalling biceps whom she has annexed on the way home, and Country Cousin Arabella. The latter is just a sweet little thing who never stops talking, appropriates the bride-to-be's trousseau gowns and the bridegroom-to-be, and who sticks a determined finger in various domestic pies that are a-making. At first you're convinced that Bella is very, very dumb, but by the last reel you're leaning toward an entirely different opinion.

Sister Victoria, and what comes with her, wear bathing things from start to finish of the picture—a fact just offered for the titillating of your interest.

I shan't go into details, because I'd be crazier than the crazy folks in this crazy cinema were I to attempt to do so. But I do assure you that the players are clever, action is fast, and direction just the sort the scenario needed.

The piece is clean as a whistle.

To me "We're Rich Again" was complete and amusing relaxation.

Wishing you the same, I am—etc. . . .

Looking for the Big Bad Wolf

Every time Miss Veronese Beatty shoulders that great old ax and puts on that crumpled hat she just naturally starts looking around for the big bad wolf with which (or should we say whom in this case?) she has to cope in the Junior league's presentation of "Little Red Riding Hood" now showing at the Children's theater on the Enchanted island at the Fair. This picture of Miss Beatty was taken in the gardens of the Horticultural building. Her absent enemy (the wolf) is portrayed by Miss Helen Pope.

Togs for Dude Ranchers in One Collection.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Ready for outbound vacationists . . . especially the dude ranch visitors, is one of the best costumes for out-of-doors enthusiasts—of overalls and dizzy patterns as well as wild colored shirts just like the cowboys wear. Even bolder and brighter neckerchiefs are ready, too, and the feminine replicas of the famous ten gallon hats. Everything you need will be found in a certain collection just assembled for the shoppers who haven't experienced the thrill of assembling a reasonable and rational wardrobe for a dude ranch vacation.

Among these very different clothes will be found some suede lether jackets, made with zippers, that can be used for home base after the vacation days have slipped into memory books. Deep red, golden yellow, leaf green and tobacco brown are interesting colors, and you can buy neckerchiefs that match perfectly.

For all white sports clothes, try the daring new high colored hosiery. . . . Red, navy, maize, sapphire, turquoise and the new sheer black. This stuff should be used under firm control only with all white costumes, white footwear and costume accessories.

Powder Ranks First in the Makeup Field

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

When you think of makeup, which, in your mind, is more important, rouge or powder?

You're wrong if you answer rouge. Powder is vastly more influential in the effect of the face when done. If it weren't we'd see more perfectly made up faces. I'm not meaning to assert that we do not see many good hand made faces. But the powder negligence keeps the sum total down.

The powdering job has to be just right or the paint job is just so much ado about nothing. We ought to go back one step further before the powder and demand for the perfect, made-up face a beautifully, thoroughly cleaned skin. And here's something we women must stop doing. We must stop powdering when away from home, or at home either, a face that has not been cleaned. I see, and you must also see, women in wash rooms whose faces are really grimy but who are not deterred by that fact from slapping the powder down on the grime. One can take one of the towels, paper, or linen, and give the face a thorough wiping off if one hasn't access to cleansing cream, or if one is afraid to take advantage of the soap and water opportunities provided.

If you're going on a shopping expedition what's to prevent you from taking along a small tube of cleansing cream for just this emergency? Anyway, it's better to wash with the soap provided than to plaster powder over the soiled surface. If you suspect the soap you can always rinse the face well after using it in warm and then cold water.

There is another powder hint that should be more universally observed. Powder shades have their day, so to speak. The powder you used two or three years ago may look passé on you today. We have to change the shades with time's passing. Women haven't the same skin tone at 30 which they had at 20. Nor the same at 40 they had at 30. A warmer tone may be needed, a subtler tone to compromise with the passing years. I'm not talking about the vogue shade of the moment, but the flattering shade for you at your current age.

Front Views and Profiles

"Visekrek—Folk Note—Town Talk—Poets."

"Indiana," she said proudly, has more artists than any other state. Why in Brown county alone. . . ."

"Yes, I know," said her listener wearily, recalling the countless canvases of "Trees in Autumn" he had seen from that region, "the woods are full of them."

THE following incident is lugubrious, but it has such dramatic and psychological interest we offer it here, as told by Nathan Flaxman. One windy afternoon recently a man was seen to leap or fall into the north branch of the Chicago river just opposite Montgomery Ward & Co. A search was made immediately along the shores and the supports of the piers and docks for the body, but to no avail. Finally the apparatus for dragging the river bed was brought out, and while the dragging process was going on the Montgomery Ward workers began to gather in a large crowd on the east bank of the river and in the windows of the side facing the bank.

Finally the body was located, a pully was attached to the ropes, the beam swung out over the river, and the motor pulled the body off the river bed and up out of the water. The motor may have been working too fast, or something else may have occurred, but anyway, the body came out of the river very rapidly. As it reached the top of the beam and the beam began to swing into the shore the body began to sway back and forth in the breeze.

At this point an individual, apparently motivated by the pathos of the body swinging helplessly in the breeze, rather than by hilarity, began to sing.

"O, he floats through the air with the greatest of ease," he sang, and he intoned it in evangelical fashion, rather than raucously.

The interesting part of the tale, however, is that the singer was neither hissed nor booed, but the others joined in the song. The somber note of the original singer pertained throughout the singing, and when the body finally was taken down a real tribute appeared to have been paid to this unknown and unfortunate individual.

THE GOSSIP SHOP. A fashionable young Chicago matron's most becoming evening gown is really a Parisian nightgown, which she had an under slip made for, and wears with a sash in the Empress Eugénie manner. . . .

And then there was the ingenious Rockford college senior who went to her class banquet in her new fluttery blue and orchid flowered cotton negligee in reverse. . . . The Laura Cornell who has two paintings in the No-Jury art exhibit at 164 North Michigan avenue, is really Mrs. Stewart Harvey. . . . The girl in the black satin dress and silver foxes and tiny black hat who stood at the bar in the Joseph Urban room the other night was Agnes Ayres, who played with Rudolph Valentino in his last picture. . . . Musical minded folk may be interested to know about the new book just published in London, Constant Lambert's "Music Ho!" in which music is treated as a symbol of contemporary thought and fashionable reactions. Sibelius, Schonberg, Stravinsky, and Satie are examined in detail in the book. . . . Also Sacheverell Sitwell's "Liszt" is out. It tells the story of Liszt's brilliant childhood in Hungary, his musical career, his liaisons, and of the last phase of his life surrounded by his pupils.

HAROLD KERR, poet, line contributor and author of "Born of Rain," and Carl D. Bach have started a magazine of poetry and comment called "The Bridle." Mr. Kerr says that they have received some ten manuscripts having to do with the care and feeding of race horses, about four pleas for loans from indigent jockys, three offers of stallions for stud, and innumerable inquiries for people who want tips on the ponies.

"Now with virtually a choice thus offered between poetry and ponies, triolets and trotters, possibly we ought to change our editorial policies," Mr. Kerr comments.

Lutheran Conference Will Tighten Church Control of Hospitals

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Lutherans of the synodical conference yesterday tightened their grip on hospitals under their direction by forming a national hospital association. The synodical conference includes several large synods, including that of Missouri and Wisconsin. It was announced that trends during the last few years which lead toward secular control of hospitals and other agencies of helpfulness were leading reasons for the formation of the association.

The action was taken at the annual convention of the Associated Lutheran Charities in session this week at the Morrison hotel. The resolution which will bring the new association into being was voted at yesterday's sessions. It authorized the Rev. Enno Duemling, Milwaukee, president of the charities, to name a committee of five experts on hospital management to complete plans for the new organization.

When Cara returns home her father tells her of his failure and urges her to meet Harmer. It would mean much to him and he likes Harmer. Cara thinks she loves Jerry. She decides to go up northwest to Mulligan's camp for a month to think it over. Meanwhile no one is to get an inkling of their business troubles. Jerry follows and joins her on the way. Harmer hears of Cara's plans from her father. He flies to Mulligan's ahead of her and hires the place from Dan Mulligan for a month and the use of his name. He meets Cara and Jerry as Mulligan. After three days Jerry is fed up with camp life. He tricks Cara into leaving with him. They become lost in the wilds. Jerry's true character is revealed to Cara when she confesses her father's failure. Harmer comes to their rescue. He sends Jerry on his way back to Toronto. Harmer, as Mulligan, wins Cara's love. Cara is anxious to overtake Jerry for fear of harm to Follettes by what she has told him. Harmer starts on the return trip with her. Cara tells him she is going to marry for money. When they are about to part Cara discovers she can't leave the man she thinks is Mulligan.

INSTALMENT XLVIII.

REUNION.

"I haven't heard from that young man of Cara's," said Anny after a while. "Perhaps he really has gone to New York, and really got an audition with Ricardini without me."

"Perhaps."

"If so, I wonder what Cara will say when she comes home?"

"Ah, well," Benjamin said, "I've heard from Cara. Show you when we're alone."

"This came from Edmonton."

"When shall we open up the summer house, Benjy?"

"You've forgotten what I told you?"

"About money affairs. Business. O, no. But Cara is coming home to rescue us all."

"Anny, you have no scruples against asking that of your daughter?"

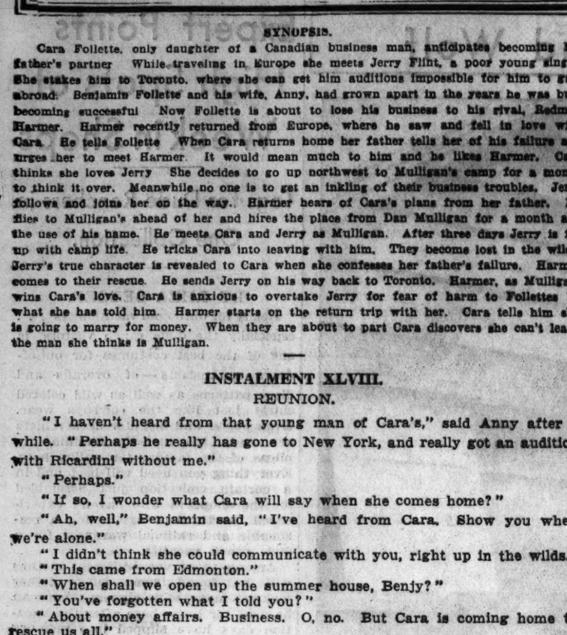
"My daughter doesn't need asking, Benjamin. I wish you'd believe that. I know her as well as you do. By now, she'll be only desperately sorry that she hesitated a moment over saving Follettes'. It's her god, as it is yours."

"You're wrong."

She thought his voice very queer, because in spite of the break in it there was a certain triumph. "You're wrong," he repeated, and fumbled at his breast pocket. His note case came out, and he produced Cara's telegram with shaky fingers. . . .

He managed to scare up a shaky laugh.

"Read that."



"Once more we'll be poor; you'll be mine."

Anny read it, handed it back. He folded it again into his case and patted that away again into his pocket. They were both very quiet.

Anny's eyes were black with grief and anger.

"How dare she!"

"How dare she?" he echoed. "O, she dares, Cara dares."

"You speak as if you're proud of her."

"I am always proud of our daughter, Anny."

"She marrying a hunter and a guide!"

"A prince of guides. Mighty good fellow."

"He's done it for the money!"

"A moment." He held up his hand. "I said men like him, that's a certain criterion. He's not a fellow to go stealing. He doesn't give a damn for money, either."

"Where'll she live?" Her voice came fast and breathless.

"With him."

His voice snapped firm on that. "If Mulligan takes a wife, he wants a wife. That it happens to be our only daughter——"

"Is just bad luck, I suppose you're going to say."

"It's more than that, Anny, isn't it?"

Anny felt herself quiver from head to foot.

"I could have dealt with the singing boy," she said. "I was prepared to. I'd have made love to him myself if necessary. Would you have minded that?"

His eyes blazed for a moment. "Yes, I could still mind that—if I saw it. I expect there's been a lot I haven't seen, Anny? Eh? Tell me now. Now's the moment."

"Is this the moment, Benjy? Why?"

"Because you're a beautiful woman—still young—women keep young when we can't. It's occurred to me that in the wreck that's coming you might save yourself."

"That has occurred to you, has it?"

"Just now, looking at you, it occurred. Well, my dear, begin to think, realize what's happened. The Harmer merger will never be made. I'm down and out. So are you except that a lovely woman is never down and out—or needn't be. That one thing I've just thought of cheers me." She leaned back in her chair, staring at him. "A quiet divorce, Anny, a quiet divorce. She made no reply at all, only sat looking at him quietly, immobile. "There'll be a little ready money—even your own banking account would carry you along for a time in dignity. Well, that would solve things for you—and for me. For all I've been thinking of is how I've let you down, failed you. Besides, there'll be more. When the crash comes, I've all the shareholders to face—it'll be a terrible inquiry. I've made judgments that seemed right at the time, but now, looking back in the light of current events, it doesn't look right at all. That's for me to face out. I'll stay here and do it, and the quicker the cat's out of the bag the better now. I don't want delay. If you, dear, would go tomorrow up to Georgian Bay, or—or better—even slip over to New York—or Paris, Anny. My secretary'll get your passage first thing in the morning and a boat sails at noon——"

"Go on, Benjy."

"If you'd do that—skip—get yourself safely out of the way, I'd tackle my job better . . . alone. It's a help to men if their women folk will keep clear."

"Is it?"

"I'm glad Cara won't see the newspapers the day after tomorrow."

"It's as close as that?"

"It's so close that I don't know how to stave it off another twelve hours—except by the way I've been doing the last two weeks, letting it be known quietly, where it matters most, that Ben Follette had a big card up his sleeve. The card was Harmer. And don't you blame Cara—."

"I don't. I won't. We must think she married the man she loved——"

"Yes."

"——Very suddenly. Love at first sight. Just like us." He looked up quickly to see Anny with the tears running down her face.

"I'm no more good to you than—what you said, Benjy?"

He was out of his chair in a moment, at the back of her chair, caressing her. "You're the dearest thing in the world to me, and that's why——"

"That's why I stay here and stand by the dearest thing in the world to me, however it comes out. That's why I'll cook and scrub and mend again, and——"

"Anny!"

"I'll be glad to do it. And we can sell my jewels—so many, Benjy, you've given me, and my furs and the house and everything. And once more we'll be poor and you'll be mine."

He knelt down. "You mean it?"

"O, do believe me, Benjy boy." He had not heard that silly name for years. "I mean it all, and more. I've been jealous of the great business that stole you from me. I've been jealous even of Cara. The fun was all when we were poor and she was little, and we all played and worked together. The fun is in the building, darling," cried Anny, "it's terrible to a woman to have a finished house." Then she began to cry and cry, so that he was unable to abandon her, unable to order her to save herself, unable to want her to go, unable to think of anything save that here was young Anny again. Young Anny, only more tender than before, more kind, more sweet, more courageous, and more wise. He had to keep her in his arms and hush her and pet her. And presently she was calm enough for them to get up from the table, and steal across the hall, into the drawing room, to huddle together in each other's arms, loving and comforting each other.

"We must never part," she kept whispering, and he whispered back: "Never! never!"

en's auxiliary of the hospital. Mrs. D. Mark Cummings assisted Mrs. Cummings as hostess, and Mrs. Charles W. Dempster and Mrs. Charles Foster presided over the tea table.

By the early part of next week, Harbor Point, Mich., where the Wheeler, Waller, and O'Brien families are spending the summer, will be the gayer for the arrival of Miss Virginia Waller, the William Wallers' daughter. She has been roughing it in Colorado for the last few weeks, where her cousin, Platt Rogers, is a mining engineer.

Miss Winifred Wheeler, whose engagement to Henry McIntyre of St. Louis was announced recently, left yesterday morning for the popular Michigan resort, and her mother, Mrs. Robert C. Wheeler, followed late last night. The entire O'Brien family is already established in their summer home at the Point, having rented their home in Winnetka for the summer.

Colemans Return Home Today.

The John Colemans and their daughter and son, Miss Beth Coleman and John Coleman III., are arriving in Chicago today from New Haven where they spent last winter. They will open their Lake Forest house for the summer but they have no plans for next winter. Mrs. Coleman's mother, Mrs. Charles S. Spalding, and her grandniece, Miss Louise Clarke, will spend the summer in town in their Ambassador East apartment.

A delightful vacation is in store for the Donald P. Welleses and the Hermon D. Smiths who are entraining tomorrow morning for New Mexico. Mr. Welles has a cabin on a ranch near Las Vegas, and the foursome will spend a fortnight there.

Mrs. Charles S. Williamson and her daughter, Mrs. John B. Hammond, and Mrs. Hammond's baby are leaving by motor this morning for a month at a camp on the Lac du Flambeau in northern Wisconsin.

Harry McLeods Arrive Tomorrow.

Mrs. Harry M. McIntosh's young nephew, Harry McIntosh McLeod, and his bride, the former Deborah Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Jackson of Brookline, Mass., are expected to arrive in Chicago tomorrow. They have been honeymooning in Bermuda. By the first of September Mr. and Mrs. McLeod will have taken up housekeeping in the guest cottage on the McIntosh estate in Lake Forest.

The Edgar Rowes, who have been vacationing in Brewster, Mass., with their daughter, Miss Ruth Rowe, are expected to return to Chicago today to spend the remainder of the summer in their town apartment.

George A. Bates will be missed at the Oakbrook Polo club for the next few Sundays because he has gone east for a visit. He is at the Briarcliff lodge on the Hudson river at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.

Roderick Webster, son of Mrs. Henry Kitchell Webster of Evanston, has gone east to enroll in the United States Naval academy at Annapolis.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Clayton Morrison's two daughters, Jane and Helen, are sailing July 27 for a month of travel in England. They are to be accompanied by Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the Thomas Wilsons of Chicago, who will return with Miss Helen Morrison the first of September in time for her to resume her studies at Oberlin college. Jane is going on to Italy for the winter to study art history in the lovely old city of Florence.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., July 13.—[Special.]—Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull and Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson will spend the week-end on the Sequoia, the President's yacht, cruising down the Potomac. They expect to return Sunday evening.

When Women Err Human Nature Is Never Forgiving

BY DORIS BLAKE.

When wives report that their husbands have been unfaithful, confess and beg for forgivness, wives are advised to forgive and forget.

When a husband reports that his wife has admitted unfaithfulness, although she may be just as repentant, just as earnest in her desire for forgiveness, there is not the same indulgence extended her sin. Why? Because men have sort of cornered the forgiveness market? Because they have established a reputation, as a sex, for polygamously inclined natures? Because infidelity in a wife is a greater crime?

The question comes up in Unhappy Mate's letter. The wife's affair has been going on a while. Accosted before of its seriousness, the woman denied any wrongdoing. Caught again recently, she admitted her sin in full. Friends press down on the husband against a reconciliation. Relatives urge that there can be no happiness again with a woman of that sort. The husband is wavering between a love that survives the woman's mistake and the primitive argument that a woman cannot come back as wife, woman, and mother after such experience.

There's no use bringing up the argument about what's sauce for the goose. No amount of theorizing will reduce to a common denominator the unfaithful husband and the unfaithful wife. The woman will always be the major "sinner." And by woman-vote, understand! Men, we believe, a trifle more lenient, so long, we must add, as it is not their own women.

In spite of this, however, there is no more reason to assume that a woman, wife and mother, cannot pick up the broken threads and make full amends than that a man, husband and father, cannot survive successfully a regretted mistake.

Son-Daughter Controversy May Hurt Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Are you horribly disappointed? Did you hope the new baby would be a girl? Or did you perhaps have your mind all made up for a boy?

If you are disappointed be extremely careful or you'll do serious harm to your child and store up trouble for yourself. And the worst of it will be that when things do go wrong, you won't know why. Accept your baby—boy or girl—and have no regrets.

"Johnny!" says one girl to another, "that's a boy's name—where did you get it?"

"Oh, my dad was disappointed because I wasn't a boy so he named me Joan, the nearest he could get to his own name—but he's always called me Johnny!"

We're all familiar with the father who tries to make his daughter take his son's place—who plans her life as nearly as possible as he would have planned a son's. Often a nice companionship grows out of this in spite of its unwisdom, and even in extreme cases of this sort a girl can usually take her place as a woman once she goes to college or out into the world.

Sometimes we see a mother who regrets that her son was not a girl and who tries to treat him and train him as she would a daughter. This is more dangerous ground, somehow, and has a more harmful psychological and emotional effect than the reverse procedure of trying to turn a girl into a boy.

But it was not so much this sort of thing I had in mind when I started today's talk. I was thinking rather of the parents who, not as extreme as either of these, still show from time to time in their talk and actions that they wish their little girl had been born a boy or their little boy a girl.

We know the age old plaints, "Boys aren't as much company as girls," or "When a daughter marries she grows closer but when a son marries you lose him"—but do you think it's good for a boy to hear those things? And the longing for a little girl to dress in "adorable" clothes is a common one among mothers of sons—and perfectly all right if you don't let it out, so that it makes your boy think you're disappointed to have him. Likewise we recognize the often-voiced deep regret that "we have no son to carry on the name," in reverse cases where daughters keep on coming.

Boy or girl—don't for an instant let yours feel that you were ever anything but overjoyed to have things just the way they are.

Sunshine.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Sunshine" is one of the highlights in the field of old quilts, a block as vivid as the body for which it was named. The alternate light and dark diamonds surrounding the large square create the appearance of sun rays. Carefully pieced in orange, white, and red, the completed quilt is strikingly beautiful. The completed block measures twelve inches square and the coverlet contains twenty-two pieced and twenty plain blocks.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress.

BY MARY MEADE.

Yesterday we hit the high points at least in a study of red fruits and vegetables, the reason for their ruddiness, and methods of cooking and preparation which will best retain their desirable color.

Today green vegetables and a few green fruits get the spotlight and need it, too. For much of our supply of health insuring vitamins and minerals comes from leafy green foods and if the kitchen manager does not understand the tricks of cooking them to give the most perfect results in color, even good flavor, and retention of all their nutriments will not inveigle many of us into enthusiastic nibbling.

The crux of the whole matter lies in an important substance or pigment called by the scientists "chlorophyll." This material is to be found in all green colored vegetables and fruits and is actually the cause of the greenness when treated correctly and also the cause of brownish off colors when mistreated.

Yesterday we said the red color brightened up in acids and soft water and faded out in the presence of alkalies or in hot water. With green foods it is just the opposite. In extremely alkaline water or water to which has been added a little sodium bicarbonate (baking soda), green vegetables retain a bright, intense color. In soft water or in the presence of acids this color turns to a dull olive-drab.

Heat also tends to destroy chlorophyll, especially if the heat is high and applied over a long period. The reason for this is that there are natural acids in all foods. In fresh vegetables these acids are kept separated from the green pigment, but in cooking they are released and so get a chance to spoil their own color. Theoretically then, it is well to cook these green vegetables in a considerable amount of hard water with the lid off. The salts in the water help to counteract the food acids and those acids that are released are carried off in steam. If the water is unusually hard or if a little soda is added the cover may be left on except for the first five minutes, during which time most of the acids are released. As a rule, however, avoid using soda, for it has a tendency to soften the food and much soda will leave a disagreeable, soapy flavor.

Green cabbage, which used to be so annoyingly overcooked when left on the back of the stove to stew for two and three hours, is now being cooked intelligently in fifteen minutes and a bright, clear, crisp product comes to the table instead of a drab one. For no matter how hard the water an hour's cooking will slaughter the original color.

Water in different districts varies a great deal in the amount of acid and salts it contains. Softened water, by the way, reacts in the same way that hard water does, so will be a help to the greens and a hindrance to the reds in vegetables and fruits.

Canned spinach, peas, beans, and asparagus have usually lost most of their bright green color and may range all the way from a clear pale green to a dull olive. This is because the cooking usually takes place in the sealed containers from which the acids have no way of escaping and so attack the green pigment. Home cooking of green foods in the pressure cooker or fireless cooker also is likely to produce off-color results for the same reason.

Cooking of cabbage, spinach, and brussels sprouts in milk will give us better color mainly because we are not so likely to overcook them, due to the weakness of milk for scorching. With certain sour vegetables—dock, sorrel, and sour grass, for instance—the brown color will develop, no matter what we do. Careful cooking, however, will keep them from becoming too altered in color.

A few sour green fruits—green grapes, green plums, and gooseberries, for instance—are likely to have a decided change for the worse unless cooked with extreme care.

In green vegetables like spinach or cabbage, which are to be served with vinegar, add the acid just before serving. This gives it less time to get disastrously chummy with the before mentioned green chlorophyll.

Hollywood

BY SIDNEY SKOLSKY.

Hollywood, July 13.—Joe E. Brown is the small town boy who made good in small towns.

He is the biggest, steadiest draw of all the Warner stars in the small towns, but he can't win that approval in big towns. They don't laugh at him the right way there.

Joe E. realizes this and there are moments when he feels bad. But he doesn't resent it bitterly. Instead he has adopted homespun mannerisms and has concentrated on being a big hit in the towns where he stands a chance of being a hit.

He plays his comedy as broad as his mouth is. He doesn't drink or smoke and he has refused to endorse cigarets and other products. He must be a good, clean example for the youngsters and country folks, who are his public. He knows what he wants his career to be and has guided it.

The small town that this small town hero hails from is Holgate, O. There on July 28, 1892, at 2:30 in the morning he was born. His full name is Joseph Evan Brown. There was a time, way back, when the name was spelled Braun.

He is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs 153 pounds. He has brown hair, blue eyes, and a spreading nose with wide nostrils. There is no use telling you about his mouth. It has become his trade mark.

For a while he became extra sensitive about his mouth. He asked that it not be publicized in stories and advertisments. He has gotten over that. His mouth is really not as large as it photographs. It is bigger than the average mouth, though. It is the shape of the upper lip and two natural lines protuding from the corners of his mouth that make it seem larger than it really is.

He left home when he was 9 to join a circus. He didn't run away from home as most stories have it. In relating this he says: "I didn't have to run away, they let me go. It meant they wouldn't have another mouth to feed—and you know my mouth."

He joined a troupe called "The Marvelous Ashtons" and they played circuses, carnivals, and honky-tonk vaudeville. Joe E. did one trick with his feet and if he didn't do it right Ashton would rap him on the ankles after the show. His ankles today are huge and very prominent from those beatings.

Then there's that part of his career in which he was the comic in Broadway shows such as "Jim Jam Jems," "Captain Jinks" and "Twinkle Twinkle." He was no sensation, but doing all right. . . . "I can show you some good notices from the dramatic critic," says Brown. "They liked me better than the movie critics do."

During his stage career he tried to get into the movies. He took fifteen screen tests. He couldn't get a job because he looked too much like Joe E. Brown.

It was after "Twinkle Twinkle" had played Los Angeles and he was taking a vacation here that Ralph Ince astonished him by offering him a leading rôle in the flicker, "Hit of the Show." He grabbed the chance. It chanced to be a hit picture.

He is married to Katharyn McGraw. She was formerly a nurse. The first time she saw him he was on the stage, part of the act of Prevost and Brown. She walked out on the act.

Later they met on a train going to California, the next Prevost and Brown booking. The romance started on the train. The next time Miss McGraw sat through the act. They were engaged to be married.

After the marriage he temporarily deserted the stage. He worked for an auto light company and also was a manager of a bowling alley. Then he went back to the footlights.

His big hobby is sports. He wanted to be a baseball player and did play second base, professionally, for the St. Paul team. He even got so far as sitting on the bench for the Yankees. Then he was traded to the Boston Red Sox, where he also sat on the bench.

He now collects sport trophies. The prize room of his large house is the room where he displays these prizes. He has 48 autographed baseballs, each ball autographed by the entire team.

He is a big eater and his favorite dish is filet of sole Florentine. He likes to wear loud ties. He likes to snap his fingers. He chews gum, he favors checkered suits. His favorite color is brown.

'World Moves On' Gets First Seal of Censor

Producers Grant Inspection to Independents.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 13.—[Special.]—The Fox film, "The World Moves On," is first to be decorated with the new certificate and seal stamped by the producers' association on all films that will be released from now on as a sign of their inoffensiveness. The producers' association is granting the rights of inspection for this certificate to all independently produced American films and all foreign pictures submitted in this country for exhibition, and the producers have agreed among themselves to permit no film without the certificate inside their studio in future, according to the new cleanup commissioner, Joe Breen.

The fourth and last title for Mae West's unreleased film is announced by her studio as "Belle of the '90s."

Ida Lupino, the 18 year old leading woman, has been released from quarantine for infantile paralysis. The first thing she did was to take a walk of several miles to be sure her legs were all right after two months' quarantine with the disease. The next thing waa to get her hair waved. She resumes picture work next week.

Loretta Young is spending several weeks at Arrowhead Springs recuperating from her recent operation. Still feeling a bit weak and unsteady, her condition is holding up the start of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Forsaking All Others." . . . Ann Sothern says she works out her own diets, and it is a mistake to eat pretzels with beer. The proper thing to eat, she says, is French fried or shoestring potatoes.

Ernst Lubitsch, the director, has spent thousands of dollars trying to clear up what physicians tell him is hay fever. A sympathetic friend was asking whether Lubitsch still had it. "He still has the hay fever, but not the $4,000," was the reply. That's why he likes to spend time in his home along the beach, where the breezes always are wet and landward and without pollen.

Helen Morgan and her husband, Maurice Maschke, son of a Cleveland politician, are living apart, but not due to marital discord; it's only business, she explains. Too many friends fell in on them while they rented Estelle Taylor's Los Feliz boulevard place, and she couldn't get any time to herself, or any sleep, as is necessary in Hollywood, where the actresses get 6 a. m. calls. So she moved to a Beverly Hills hotel so she could sleep nights, and Maschke took an individual apartment where he could write evenings.

Girls Anxious to See Zoo as Sally's Guests

I have read every letter that the boys and girls who are interested in the Brookfield zoo party have written, and it has been worlds of fun! If you don't believe that little girls are just as fascinated by wild animals as little boys are just read these two letters. Don't they prove it?

"Dear Sally Joy Brown:

"I have 43 animals and they are nice and stand up and they are papper. I make my forest in the living room rug and I put daddy's wirre wast papper basket over the taribal ones. I hunt like Frank Buck. I guess yours are feerser than mine and so I make believe. Please let me come. From your best friend,

"A. K.

"Dear Sally Joy Brown:

"I surely would love to go to that wonderful zoo at Brookfield with you to see the animals. I would like to see the animals roaming around out doors free from the cages. It would be very thrilling to think that the animals would jump over and get you, even though I know they can't. How interesting it would be seeing all those animals from all parts of the world. Oh, how I would love to go, but I can't think of the words to say it.

"Yours truly,

"H. D. Age 12."

The winners of invitations will be announced in tomorrow's TRIBUNE.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

RESPONDING WITH A MONSTROSITY.

Unusual hands sometimes need unusual treatment. If my partner bid a no-trump, and I had a suit of eight or more cards headed by the king-jack and also an ace in my hand, I would first ascertain in the usual manner whether we had any aces out against us or not. If so, and I had no void suit, I would resign myself to signing off at game in my own bidding. I would rebid my suit up to five; my partner could still slam if he had two aces and sufficient control of the other three suits to base slam hopes on my great suit length, which would be apparent to him from my continued rebidding of it in minimum terms despite my inability to show a second ace or bid any other suit. However, if I did have a void suit, I would be careful how I showed it. A hand such as

Sp. A Di. ——
Hts. K J x x x x x x Cl. x x x x would impel me to bid it abnormally.

Some Critics Might Call This a Psychic.

If the bidding went—one no-trump, three hearts, three no-trumps—what should I do next? An ace against us will not matter if it is in diamonds. I can not bid four spades; partner is almost sure to prefer spades to hearts and pass. I have no right to bid five hearts, having only one ace. I must make a bid which he is forbidden to pass and which may help the play if we get to slam. I would bid four clubs. Whatever his next bid, I would bid six hearts. The gamble is not remote by any means. I have undoubtedly headed off a club lead, and can start to get discards of some clubs on spades and diamonds. My partner's three primary tricks must give me two discards anyway—and I still have the squeeze to work with. I will expect to lose a trump trick only if my partner lacks the ace. Having only Q x x in hearts, he can hardly have had a no-trump opening bid without the two minor suit aces and king-queen of spades. This would give me all the club discards I need. Give him the least helpful opening hand:

Sp. K Q x Di. A Q x
Hts. Q 10 x Cl. K Q x x and I should be down one, though I could still make six if the opponent with the ace of clubs did not also hold the ace of hearts, and allowed me to sneak a club trick early in the play. If dummy put down

Sp. K Q x Di. K Q x
Hts. Q 10 x Cl. A J x x

I would need to get the ace of diamonds on my right in order to make my slam. If, as is most likely, my partner did have the ace of hearts, my chances must be distinctly better than even to escape with only one club loser, especially if my bid of that suit stops the enemy from leading it.

How a Grand Slam Might Be Reached.

Should my partner bid four no-trumps over my three hearts, showing three aces, I would bid six diamonds. Having that ace, he would know this to be a void. He also knows I hold the ace of spades, having the other three himself. With only three aces and a king, he should sign off at six hearts. But with four primary tricks in the hand he could and should bid six no-trumps—a stronger bid in this situation than six hearts. In that event I would bid seven hearts; presumably only a first round ruff of clubs, or Q 10 x of hearts on my left, would defeat the grand slam. Even if after all we only had twelve top tricks, I would expect the squeeze to produce the thirteenth trick for us, if an opening diamond lead had not already done so.

SHIPPERS FEAR U. S. LINES BOUND FOR MORE GRIEF

Report Foreign Interests Now in Control.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 13.—[Special.]—Another poignant chapter is about to be added to the sorrowful history of the United States line, according to reports in shipping circles. The new developments concerning the fleet, which was once hailed as the basis for a gigantic American merchant marine, are expected to follow the acquisition last week of control of the line by the International Merchant Marine company.

The I. M. M. has often been assailed in congress as being under the control of foreign interests, particularly the British. This has been denied by P. A. S. Franklin, president, whose denials were recently bolstered by the relinquishment by the company of the American agency for the White Star line, British controled, when the latter merged with the Cunard line. However, the I. M. M. still holds a 10 million dollar interest in the White Star line, it was pointed out, and also retains ownership of the British Red Star and Leyland lines.

Vincent Astor a Director.

Among the directors and large stockholders of the I. M. M. are Kermit Roosevelt, cousin of President Roosevelt, and Vincent Astor, on whose yacht the President frequently takes pleasure trips. Last May, the charge was made before the senate committee investigating ocean mail contracts that both Kermit and Astor had received messages about the I. M. M. while with the President on one of these pleasure trips and had talked to the President on matters affecting the Marine corporation. Both were summoned before the committee and made emphatic denials of the charge.

Franklin, the president, and his son, J. M. Franklin, a director and official, also testified and denied that the company was controled by British interests or was seeking to monopolize North Atlantic shipping at the expense of American interests.

What will be the fate of the United States line under control of the I. M. M. was what interested shipping interests after announcement was made July 5 that the Marine company had bought out the interests of the Dollar Steamship line for a reported price of $1,131,000. The Dollar interests held about 25 per cent of the United States line stock, and its acquisition by the I. M. M. gave the latter company about 60 per cent of the total.

Asserts Deal Part of Program.

Franklin, president of the I. M. M., asserted that the deal had been started before the I. M. M. lost the agency of the White Star line, and had had no connection with that development. He insisted that the sale marked another step in the program of the I. M. M. to strengthen its American-flag shipping operations.

The United States line was purchased in 1929 from the United States shipping board by Paul W. Chapman of New York, who promised to pay $16,300,000 for the fleet. But Chapman could not operate the line at a profit and could not fulfill his obligations to the government. The line was bought in 1931 by a newly organized company, formed by the I. M. M., headed by R. Stanley Dollar, Kenneth D. Dawson of Portland, Ore., and Herbert H. Fleishhacker, San Francisco banker.

The retirement of the Leviathan, flagship of the line, in 1933, was greeted with a storm of protest. Charges were made in congress that the Leviathan had been purposely retired in order to avoid competition with the British liner Majestic. Again, there were denials from Franklin, Roosevelt, and Astor. The Leviathan was put into commission again this year and made its first trip June 9.

J. P. Morgan Involved.

Other charges involving the I. M. M. made in the senate by Senator Hugo Black [Dem., Ala.] have involved the alleged domination of the I. M. M. by J. P. Morgan and the Chase National bank. The elder J. P. Morgan was the moving spirit behind the foundation of the company. His son resigned as a director in June, 1932, although popular report was that the Morgan house retained an important interest in the concern.

Evidence produced by Senator Black showed that the I. M. M. had nearly $20,000,000 invested in foreign lines while only $12,000,000 was invested in American ships, of which but $1,400,000 was invested in trans-Atlantic services. Franklin protested that the $20,000,000 figure wrongfully included the $10,000,000 interest in the White Star line, which he said had no effect on the company's policies.

A suit now pending in the New York Supreme court filed by stockholders in the United States line charges Franklin, Astor, Roosevelt, and other officials with a conspiracy to divert profits from the United States line to the I. M. M.

Shipping Bombshell Thrown.

In this connection, it was recalled that Joseph E. Sheedy, former executive vice president of the United States line, threw a bombshell into a meeting of shipping men recently with this challenge:

"The enemies of American shipping are in the industry itself. They are the men who obtain large mail contracts for their lines, then distribute hundreds of thousands among themselves in salaries and gifts. The entire structure of government aid to shipping is threatened by this small group. They are bleeding the government for all they can get."

Franklin admitted to the senatorial committee $464,323 in salaries and bonuses over a four year period. His son's salaries and bonuses over a similar period amounted to $93,555 and $68,644 in dividends. Kermit Roosevelt testified to receiving $93,660 in salaries and bonuses and $68,274 in dividends.

BRAVES DEFEAT CUBS, 7 TO 6; LEE IS ROUTED

Boston Makes Four Runs in Seventh.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., July 13.—Bill Lee, whose interest in exploring the stratosphere accounted for the Cubs' last two defeats prior to today, made another ascension this afternoon, again blowing a seemingly comfortable lead to give the Boston Braves a 7 to 6 victory in the final of the series.

About the only difference in Lee's blowup today as compared to his soaring behavior in St. Louis on July 4 and in Chicago on July 8, was that he took off in the seventh inning instead of the sixth as on previous occasions. A point of similarity was that Bud Tinning, who finished the game by holding the Pirates to five runs in Chicago last Sunday, was the same kind of a relief performer today. He helped out the cause by allowing a single, a double, a walk and another single to the first five batters who faced him in his valiant effort to save the game.

Cubs Make Two Homers.

With skilled pitching the Cubs might have won a triumph on homers. Woody English's No. 1 drove in two of the three runs with which the Cubs went ahead in the third inning and Babe Herman's No. 8 with one on in the fifth gave the Chicagoans a 5 to 2 lead. But Lee was possessed of little and was further embarrassed by the fact that Stanley Hack, who fielded sensationally the first day here, and Billy Herman, a standout yesterday, committed errors, Hack making two. Only one of these three miscues figured in the scoring, but they affected Lee's confidence, he being a very nervous young man when things do not go right behind him.

The Braves, aided by Hack's first error, grabbed a two run lead in the second inning. W. Lee walked H. Lee and Whitney singled past English, H. Lee stopping at second. Gyselman tapped to W. Lee and the bases were full when Hack dropped W. Lee's throw to third. McManus popped a fall fly back of first and it fell for a single when Grimm and Billy Herman collided. H. Lee scored and the bases remained loaded. Spohrer hit into a double play started by English, Whitney scoring, and English threw out Betts.

Hack Leads Rally.

The Braves' lead did not survive the first half of the third inning. With one down in the third, Hack became the first Chicagoan to get on base when he doubled to right. W. Lee popped to McManus, but Billy Herman doubled to right, scoring Hack. Billy came home when English knocked a homer into the left field stand. Cuyler was safe on Gyselman's overthrow, but McManus threw out Babe Herman.

With two down in the fifth Cuyler singled to center, his first hit of the current road trip, and trotted home when Babe Herman knocked his second homer of the series and his eighth of the season, a nice line shot into the bleachers in left center. Betts tossed out Stephenson.

The Braves became a bit troublesome in the fifth. Worthington batted for Betts and singled to center. He went to second while Thomas was bouncing out to Grimm, held on while Hack threw out Jordan and scored on Berger's Texas leaguer to left center. H. Lee singled to left, putting Berger on third and reached second on the throw in. Whitney walked, filling the bases. Then Gyselman fanned for the second time.

Lee Escapes Jinx Sixth.

There was tenseness as the Braves' sixth opened up, the lads recalling that Lee had been bumped for six runs in the sixth inning of his last game and for five runs in the sixth inning of his next to last start. McManus was safe on Billy Herman's fumble. Then everybody calmed and

PICK MEANWELL AS DIRECTOR OF BADGER SPORTS

Plans to Resign Place as Basketball Coach.

Madison, Wis., July 13.—[Special.]—The board of regents of the University of Wisconsin today selected Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, veteran basketball coach, for the position of director of athletics. Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, cast the deciding vote for Meanwell when eight regents named Meanwell as director and an equal number opposed his selection.

The appointment ends a two year period during which Wisconsin has had no director of its athletic department. Shortly after George Little resigned the position in 1932 to go to Rutgers the athletic council appointed Irwin Uteritz, former University of Michigan athlete, who still is a member of the Wisconsin sports staf. Uteritz resigned shortly afterward.

May Resign as Coach.

Some of the regents opposed the selection of Dr. Meanwell and also that of George Downer, veteran newspaperman who is publicity director for the university, the first choice of the university athletic board. The alumni members of the board of regents voted consistently for the appointment of Dr. Clarence Spears, who has been football coach for two years since the resignation of Glenn Thistlethwaite.

Tonight Dr. Meanwell was planning to resign as basketball coach. It is believed the job will be offered one of four of his former pupils, Rollie Williams, coach at Iowa; Marshall Diebold, coach at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn.; Gus Tebell, coach at Virginia; or Bill Chandler, Marquette basketball coach.

Reached by long distance telephone from Madison, both Chandler and Williams admitted they would be "interested" in the job.

Wins Eight Titles.

Born at Leeds, England, in 1884, Dr. Meanwell received his M. D. degree at Johns Hopkins university in 1909. He is married and has three children—Margaret, 8; Helen, 5, and Walter, 2.

Dr. Meanwell has led Wisconsin's basketball teams to eight conference championships. In 1917 Dr. Meanwell left Wisconsin to serve as athletic director and basketball coach at the University of Missouri, but he returned to Madison in 1920.

The Badgers won championships under Dr. Meanwell in 1912, 1913, 1914, 1916, 1921, 1923, 1924, and 1926. Twice the Badgers were second, and they finished third four times.

Mentioned for Place Before.

When George Little, then assistant director of athletics at Michigan, came to Wisconsin as director Dr. Meanwell had been mentioned prominently for the position. Little succeeded Tom Jon . who now is head track coach at Wisconsin. Little also served as football coach, but after two seasons he brought Glenn Thistlethwaite to Wisconsin from Northwestern. Both he and Thistlethwaite resign d in 1932 and the two year interim in the directorship followed.

MAX BAER CALLS BOXING RACKET; SEEKS MILLION

"The boxing cauliflower, you hear about," said the heavyweight champion, who arrived today to begin a theatrical engagement, "are not for me. I like that kind of a vegetable served up on a dish, not with boxing gloves. When I get through with the fight game, and I figure it will be in about a year, the only reminder I'm going to have is a nicely padded bank book.

"I've never liked fighting, and I don't now. It's not because I'm afraid. Why I can fall asleep a half hour before a fight. But I don't like the bloated, deadpan face a fighter develops. There will be no cauliflower ears or bloodshot eyes, or twisted, swollen kisser for little Maxey Baer.

"Boxing is a racket, a game of chiselers, but I'll bet I make a million dollars out of my title before I am through. I'm after the money, nothing else, and I have a flock of lawyers watching to see that no one gets it away from me. This stage business is just a warmup for a movie I'm going to do in October."

Trainer Bud Stotler (left) confers with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, owner of Discovery, about the colt's chances to whip Cavalcade. The biggest crowd of the season is expected at Arlington Park this afternoon to see the 3 year olds battle for the championship in 1 1-4 mile race.

Discovery (Jocky J. Bejshak up) has had the habit of chasing Cavalcade home in the big stakes this year, but his handlers say the parade will be reversed in the Classic.

Westland Is Defeated in Western Golf

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 13.—[Special.]—Jack Westland of Chicago, defending champion in the western amateur golf tournament, was defeated by Dave Goldman of Dallas, 3 and 2, in a 36 hole quarter-final match today.

Chick Evans, the only other Chicagoan who survived to the quarter-finals, was eliminated by Verne Stewart of Albuquerque, N. M. After finishing 36 holes all square Stewart won on the 37th green.

Eaton and Yates Win.

Zell Eaton of Oklahoma City, who won medalist honors in the qualifying round, and Charlie Yates of Georgia Tech, national intercollegiate champion, were the others to reach the semi-finals. Eaton defeated Walter Emery of Oklahoma City, 5 and 4, while Yates disposed of Paul Leslie of Jefferson City, Mo., 10 and 9.

In tomorrow's semi-final round Goldman will play Yates and Stewart will encounter Eaton.

A 41 on the outgoing nine of the afternoon was responsible for Westland's defeat, his opponent taking a par 35 on these holes. Westland had been one down at noon, but after 27 holes he was six down. He rallied brilliantly and cut Goldman's advantage to three holes going to the 33d, but the next two were halved, ending the match.

All Square at Noon.

Evans and Stewart were all square at noon, but the Chicagoan forged ahead on the outgoing nine of the afternoon, being two up at the 27th. But Stewart came back to square the match and won on the extra hole when his approach shot crashed through the branches of a tree and rolled to within three feet of the pin, leaving him in position for a birdie three.

Yates took a commanding lead in the early stages of his match with Leslie and was 9 up at the end of the morning round of eighteen holes. Leslie braced a bit as the afternoon's play began, but after 23 holes Yates was still far ahead, being 8 up. Yates then turned on more pressure and ran his advantage to 10 up at the end of the 27th hole, ending the match.

QUARTER-FINAL ROUND.

Verne Stewart, Albuquerque, N. M., beat Charles Evans Jr., Chicago, 1 up [37 holes].

TOMORROW'S PAIRINGS.

Dave Goldman vs. Charles Yates.
Zell Eaton vs. Verne Stewart.

She was one under men's par at the end of the first six holes, at which point she eased a bit reaching the turn in 38, one under women's par.

Horgan Describes Arlington Classic Over W-G-N Today

W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE radio station will broadcast the Arlington Classic this afternoon. THE TRIBUNE station in addition to broadcasting the feature race of the day also will describe the fifth race and the broadcast will start at 4:30 o'clock.

TEN CHALLENGE SLOANE COLT IN $35,000 STAKE

BY FRENCH LANE.

Cavalcade is going to run over the Arlington Park Jocky club race course this afternoon and challenging him will be ten of the most courageous horses of his time and age.

The occasion will be the sixth renewal of the $35,000 Arlington Classic stakes at a mile and a quarter. Without Cavalcade the Classic would be just another horse race. But because Cavalcade will run, the event is well named. Whether he wins or loses, this race will not be soon forgotten.

If he wins Cavalcade, from Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable, moves dangerously close to becoming another superhorse, a horse as great perhaps as Man o' War. He has won the Kentucky Derby, American Derby, Chesapeake Stakes, and Detroit Derby, all in the short span of three months, capturing each with a breath taking run in the stretch.

Fame Awaits Dark Horse.

If he loses it will be the greatest turf upset of the year, and some horse, scorned until this big moment arrives, will suddenly find himself the idol of a fickle, hero worshiping sports public.

These uncertainties, the prospect of seeing Cavalcade come with the electrifying rush or the thought of being on hand if Cavalcade should finally be beaten, will attract 30,000 or more to Arlington Park. A crowd of this size will be the largest race track gathering of the year in Chicago.

If the betting is a true barometer, Cavalcade is not going to lose, despite the presence of Discovery, his greatest rival, in the race. Last night the odds against Cavalcade were 1 to 2. There is little prospect that the odds will be any better at post time, unless thousands of two dollar players visit the track determined to shoot at the moon and attempt to pick a horse to beat Cavalcade.

Good Goods to Start.

Named in the overnight field with Cavalcade and Discovery were Good Goods, a stable mate of Cavalcade; Hadagal, the lone Chicago contender; Thomasville, owned by Hal Price Headley of Kentucky; Boy Valet and Bien Fait, which will represent the Corsicana stable of Texas; Growler, the property of H. W. Maxwell of New York; Riskulus, the California challenger owned by Norman W. Church of Los Angeles; and Howard and New Deal, the property of J. W. Parrish, a banker of Midway, Ky. The only doubtful starters last night were Boy Valet and New Deal.

The wrenched knee which Peace Chance, the Belmont Stakes winner, suffered early in the week, did not respond to treatment and he was declared out of the race early yesterday morning. He was shipped to Saratoga. Peace Chance may not be able to start again until late next month. Some horsemen were doubtful if he will be able to run again this season.

With an enormous amount of early speed in the race, the Classic appears to be made to order for a stout runner of Cavalcade's type. The early flyers are Hadagal, Discovery, Bien Fait, and Riskulus. Some of them and possibly all of them may run each other into exhaustion before the real battle in the stretch starts. Cavalcade also is possessed of a high turn of speed, but unlike a lot of swift horses he has shown an ability in all his earlier victories to turn it on at any stage of the race.

Discovery Group Confident.

Should the speed horses decide to slow up the early pace a bit it will be all the more to Cavalcade's advantage. It is a certainty that he will be going faster than the others in the stretch unless all the breaks go against him. In his other triumphs Cavalcade has made his own breaks.

While attachés of the Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt stable are confident Discovery will at last turn the tables on Cavalcade after five early season failures, the rank and file of horsemen who have watched the final drills of Classic candidates cling to the belief

Cavalcade! How Can He Be Beaten?

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Cavalcade, on what he has done this season and on what others opposing him have done, is a standout to win this afternoon's sixth Classic stakes at Arlington Park, according to all accepted turf tenets. The Brookmeade stable's brown son of Lancegaye-Hastily is likely to be 1 to 2, or even less, in the mutuel wagering.

It is Cavalcade against the field just as it was Rose of Sharon against the field in 1929, Gallant Fox in 1930, Twenty Grand in 1931, and Top Flight in 1932. Last year it was a wild scramble.

BUT the Classic stakes has proved a jinx for favorites. Only one public choice, Gallant Fox, has been successful in its five runnings. Rose of Sharon was 12th in a field of 14; Twenty Grand, 38 against 100 in the wagering, was third to Mate; Top Flight was fifth to Gusto; Sarada was sixth to Inlander last year.

The Question, Gentlemen.

What could defeat Cavalcade, not only an apparent champion but an outstanding champion on basis of performance to date? He might train off from his best form after his strenuous campaign. That seems unlikely because of his fine workout in his final prep and the known skill of his veteran trainer, R. A. [Bob] Smith. In fact, stable connections assert Cavalcade is better right now than in any previous engagement.

Others in the field might have improved. Well, which one?

Discovery has a habit of chasing Cavalcade home. In any other year this Vanderbilt colt probably would be a champion himself. Discovery is said to be at his best right now. C. J. Fitzgerald, steward representing the Illinois racing commission at Arlington Park, does not go so far as to say the persistent Vanderbilt colt will win, but he thinks he will do better than at any previous time. His reasoning is that "a horse beaten by another several times seems to lose courage when they hook up. Perhaps Discovery became that way. Now he has won two other races in which Cavalcade did not participate. That ought to bring him up to his best and cause him to run all the better."

Track Might Bring Upset.

For any of the others victory would be a decided upset, but there are possibilities among them all in the uncertain game of horse racing, else their owners would not pay the starting fee.

Track condition, too, might prove a factor. Cavalcade, like a true champion, is supposed to like any kind of

TRIBUNE SWIM OPENS TODAY AT SHERMAN PARK

350 Race in Preliminaries of Annual Meet.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Boys and girls from Chicago's south side and from the southern suburbs will meet this afternoon in the first preliminary contests of THE TRIBUNE'S fifth annual 100 yard swimming races. All contestants must report at 1 o'clock at Sherman park pool, 52d street and Racine avenue. They will be assigned to their heats and the first preliminary event will start promptly at 2 o'clock.

Tomorrow the swimming contests will be held at California park, 3901 North California avenue, and the trials will be concluded on the next weekend at Cermak polo, Lyons, Ill., and at Whealan pool, Milwaukee and Devon avenues. The qualifiers then will meet in the finals on Sunday, July 29, at the Lincoln park lagoon, when the championship events will be held in connection with a water carnival of crew races, the American Canoe association's western division title competition and exhibitions of high diving.

First Preliminary Meet.

All contestants in this afternoon's races who sent in their street addresses have been notified by mail. They have been given their racing numbers. Other groups, such as the South Side Boys' club, and several park teams may get this information at Sherman park at 1 o'clock.

The preliminary trials this year are an innovation. Not only do they permit the more diversified sports pageant on July 29, but the qualifiers at the four sections will be awarded gold medals, which was not possible under the former plan. As in other years, each swimmer in the 10 age classes—five for boys and five for girls—will receive a merit button.

All arrangements have been completed. Much of the detail has been handled by Herbert Reynolds of Sherman Park, and he reports that no matter the size of the field, the meet will be conducted efficiently. All swimmers may check their clothes. It is urged that none bring valuable articles of apparel.

Entries Reach 350.

The number competing in each race will be determined by the number of contestants reporting. More than 350 have registered for the swim. Post entries will not be accepted.

All contestants 16 years of age and over must also register with the Central association of the A. A. U., under whose sanction the swimming races will be held. Registration for one year costs 25 cents. No other fee is charged. Those who already hold A. A. U. cards must present their cards to the clerks when they report.

All swimmers must undergo a physical examination this afternoon before they will be permitted to compete.

Officials of The Tribune Athletic association, who assist in Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, Silver Skates Derbies, and other promotionals, will be in charge. The list of officials follows:

NELSON, MILOW TAKE RICKSHA RACE AT FAIR

George Nelson, track captain at Armour Tech, and Bob Milow, University of Chicago distance runner, yesterday won the second annual rickshaw race held at A Century of Progress. The victors covered the 1,500 meter course in 4:15.4. Miss Jane Fite was the occupant of the winning rickshaw.

Ten teams started, all of which were required to transport a girl passenger. Nelson and Milow each pulled for half of the distance, finishing with a margin of 60 yards over Paul Evans, former cross-country captain at the University of Illinois, and Dave Stone, track and boxing star at Ohio State. Each vehicle weighed 178 pounds, and passengers averaged about 115 pounds.

that Discovery never will beat the Brookmeade entry.

The two horses given a chance to upset calculations are Hadagal and Riskulus. As far as speed is concerned, Hadagal can go along with Cavalcade, Discovery, or any other horse. He has never been tested for distance, and of course the big question is, "How long can he maintain his speed?" His full sister, Pansy Walker, a star of a few seasons back, could run a route.

Riskulus Comes Along.

Riskulus, after sensational performances on the Pacific coast early last spring, has not raced brilliantly since moving east. A training injury kept him out of the Kentucky Derby. Then an attack of sickness halted later attempts to prove his greatness. He has scored one impressive victory at Arlington lately and appears to be the Riskulus of last spring, when no task appeared to be too great for him.

The others in the field have been slowly showing improvement and it may be that one or more of them finally will be able to make things interesting for Cavalcade. Inlander didn't appear to have a chance in last year's Classic, yet his nose was in front when the field reached the finish.

In the draw for post positions Cavalcade drew "lucky 7," while the No. 1 position went to Boy Valet. Discovery drew No. 5 position and his trainer, Bud Stotler, had nothing to complain about.

$31,325 to Winner.

Should eleven start, the gross value will be $41,850 and the winner's share will be $31,325. Cavalcade, with a money earning mark of $89,010, is already the high money winning horse of the year in America.

That most of the owners expect to see Cavalcade's downfall today was indicated by the eagerness with which they entered their colts yesterday morning. Entries for the Classic were complete at 9:30 o'clock, an hour and a half before the regular closing time.

Weights for the Classic are determined by the amount of money each starter has earned. As a result Cavalcade gives away weight to each of his rivals. But he has done that before and has spanked them soundly.

Meade Rides Dust Girl to Close Victory

Dust Girl, under a strong stretch ride by Jocky D. Meade, defeated the odds on favorite, Carbina, by three-quarters of a length in the Lake View purse at Arlington Park yesterday. She carried the white and green jacket of Dick and Pat Nash to victory.

Because there was a tremendous plunge on Cardina, from Audley Farm stable, Dust Girl paid $8.64. Fairsickle, from Joseph E. Widener's stable, finished third. Dust Girl galloped the six furlongs in 1:11 2-5.

Young Earl Dale Shaffer's 2 year old Tophorn galloped five furlongs in :59 2-5 to win the Crystal Lake purse in a canter from a band of fashionable 2 year olds. Blue Lillian tried to outrun Tophorn in the early stages, then gave the job up and was content to finish second. Brown Feathers, a Kentucky filly from the barn of Howard Oots, was a distant third. Tophorn was the shortest priced favorite of the day, paying $2.58.

Here's What Classic Eligibles Have Done in Other Races

Past performances of candidates for the $35,000 added Arlington Classic this afternoon follow:

Cavalcade, br. c., 3, by Lancegaye-Hastily, Brookmeade stable—Widely regarded as one of the best distance runners of recent years, Cavalcade has qualified as the outstanding favorite for the Classic by a succession of victories over the ranking 3 year olds this season. Beginning his campaign with a victory in the Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace, Cavalcade has moved steadily toward universal recognition as America's 3 year old champion by winning the Kentucky Derby, the American Derby, and the Detroit Derby.

His only defeat this season was in the Preakness stakes at Pimlico, when he was second by a short nose to his stablemate, High Quest. This defeat has been excused by most horsemen on the ground that the distance was too short—the Preakness is at a mile and three-sixteenths—and that Cavalcade likely would have won in a few more strides. Brought along carefully by the veteran trainer, Bob Smith, Cavalcade is in the finest condition of his career.

Discovery, ch. c., 3, by Display-Ariadne, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. A large and capable colt, qualifies as one of those unfortunate race horses that has come along in a year when there is a great horse such as Cavalcade to beat. In most of Cavalcade's stake victories this season Discovery has been right behind him at the finish. In the Chesapeake stakes Discovery was a close third; he was second in the Kentucky Derby; second in the American Derby, and, although racing poorly in the Detroit Derby, he did not seem to be adapted to the cuppy track which prevailed.

Since losing to Cavalcade in the Detroit Derby, Discovery won his last two starts at New York. One of these was the Brooklyn handicap, in which he defeated Dark Secret with ease. Dark Secret is the horse that beat Equipoise under equal weights last season.

Good Goods, b c, 3, by Neddie-Brocatelle, Brookmeade stable—A 3 year old of fair ability. Good Goods ranks, off his past performances, as likely to cause trouble in the Classic and does not figure to have the early speed required to set the pace. Not raced much this season, Good Goods has won twice at a mile at the present Arlington meeting—his only victories of the season.

Hadagal, b c, 3, by Sir Gallahad III.-Erne. Calumet farm—As well bred as American horses usually come, Hadagal indicated by a 2 year old record that included a victory in the Champagne stakes that he was a sprinter. He did not train well enough last spring to be sent out for the early 3 year old specials. In two races at the current Arlington Park meeting, however, Hadagal has indicated that the opinion which he has him tabbed strictly a sprinter may be wrong.

Hadagal's speed makes him one of the likely pacemakers in the Classic, and because he is bred well enough to run a mile and a quarter, there is a possibility he may get far enough in front to stay there.

Riskulus, ch c, 3, by Stimulus-Risky, Norman W. Church — After he had won the Agua Caliente Derby and had been beaten a nose by his older stablemate, Gallant Sir, in the Agua Caliente handicap Riskulus became the choice of the Pacific coast for the 3 year old championship, and was backed down to the position of co-favorite in the winter books on the Kentucky Derby.

Riskulus was not sent to the post for the Kentucky Derby, but since coming to Arlington has indicated that he has regained his winter form. He ranks as one of the comparatively untried horses that may be speedy enough to cause trouble. His early speed likewise qualifies him as one of the Classic pacemakers.

Bien Fait, ch c, 3, by Bubbling Over-Bon Voyage, Corsicana stable — A Bradley castoff acquired only this spring, Bien Fait for a time promised to be a dangerous 3 year old. The test of the 3 year old specials, however, has shown him to be a horse with considerable early speed, but without the stamina to stand off the challenges of the topnotch

New York Takes League Lead; Gehrig Ill.

Detroit, Mich., July 13.—(AP)—Babe Ruth today cracked out his 700th major league home run to lead the Yankees back into first place in the American league with a 4 to 2 victory over the Tigers. Lou Gehrig went out of action in the second inning as the result of a severe cold in his back.

Gehrig singled and then found it hard to breathe and almost impossible to stand erect. He made an effort to continue his iron man string, which reached 1,426 consecutive games with today's contest, but retired voluntarily before the end of the inning.

Lou and Rogers Hornsby are the only other players who have hit more than 300 home runs in their careers. Gehrig has hit 314 and Hornsby 301. Gehrig will have to survive ten more years of play, and then average about forty home runs a year to equal Ruth's record.

Dr. Edward Castle, Cleveland club physician, diagnosed the break as a Potts fracture and predicted Stone would be out all season.

Giants Fight Off Pirates, Triumph, 7 to 6

New York, July 13.—(AP)—The Giants increased their National league lead to two full games today when they fought off a ninth inning Pittsburgh Pirate attack to win, 7 to 6, in the series final. After taking a long lead through the hitting of Joe Moore, who made 4 hits, and Frank O'Doul, Freddy Fitzsimmons blew up in the ninth and the Pirates scored four runs on an error by Blondy Ryan and four hits. The tying run was on first when Al Smith retired the last Pittsburgh batter.

O'Doul drove out a homer with one on to climax a three run rally against Red Lucas in the first. Score:

BEE BEATS 16 STAR YACHTS IN NINE MILE RACE

Bee, George Dalseg's Star class sloop, scored its first victory in the Sheridan Shore Yacht club's race week series yesterday afternoon, by defeating 16 other Star yachts off Wilmette. The Commodore Max Hayford trophy went to the Bee's owner.

Bee is a former Lake Michigan champion. Sailed in yesterday's event by Haven Requa, Bee negotiated the nine nautical mile course in 1 hour 17 minutes and 22 seconds. Gordon Jones in Twinkle Ditto was next over the finish line. Three minutes astern of the victor Twinkle Ditto beat Gemini in by exactly one minute. The Pirie brothers on Gemini maintain their lead over the fleet with a total of 114 points toward the championships.

Jane II., with Fred Porter at the helm, placed fourth, followed by the Neo, Tom Waage's Star boat. Bottoms Up the Paw Paw lake [Mich.] Yacht club contestant, was sixth.

Yacht races will be held today on the courses of three clubs, in addition to the last day's racing at the Sheridan Shore Yacht club. The Star sailors will race at 2:15 this afternoon off Wilmette to decide the championship of the race week.

Regular events for windjammers are scheduled at the Belmont harbor course of the Chicago Yacht club, the downtown course of the Columbia Yacht club, and the south side Jackson Park Yacht club. The latter will start its annual race to Saugatuck at 7 p. m.

Harvard Nine Stops in City on Way to Orient

The Harvard baseball team, en route to Japan, arrived from the east yesterday and departed last night by way of Portland, Ore., for San Francisco. Under the direction of Herb Hunter, former big leaguer, they will sail from San Francisco Wednesday for Yokohama. They are scheduled for a series of games with university teams in Japan.

Talking It Over

[Copyright: 1934: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GUY BUSH doesn't believe any pitcher in baseball could last for nine innings against the array of hitters mustered by the National and American leagues for the all-star game. . . . He says a pitcher would not be able to let up as against ordinary hitters, and that the steady bearing down would sap his strength in five or six innings. . . . Whitey Wistert, who is running second among the tackles in the national poll to determine a college team to play the Chicago Bears at Soldiers' field Aug. 31, has a little brother enrolled at Michigan this summer who hopes to win as many honors as the former Wolverine star. . . . The youth is Alvin Wistert, 6 feet 4 inches tall, 18 years old, and weighing 206 pounds. . . . Alvin played end in high school, as did Whitey. . . . Jim Nichols, one-armed professional at a Los Angeles country club, drives 200 yards consistently. . . . William Harridge, president of the American league, spends lavishly for garters. . . . Chuck Fullis of the Cardinals worked in a Pennsylvania coal mine when a boy of 16. . . .

University of Southern California has cut the prices of tickets to the Notre Dame game in Los Angeles Dec. 8. . . . Seats will range from $1.65 to $3.30. . . . In previous years top price was $4.40. . . . William A. Brady, theatrical producer, who has a part interest in Steve Hamas, contender for Max Baer's title, once managed James J. Corbett. . . . His friend, Sam Harris, long associated with George Cohan, handled Terry McGovern a few years later. . . . Frenchy Bordagaray, who was with the White Sox in the early part of the season, is the only pinch hitter who has hit safely against Lefty Gomez of the Yankees this year. . . . After Stanley Hack had his great day in the Boston double header which opened the Cubs' current eastern trip, a Hub author wrote him up and mentioned that Stan used to work in a bank. . . . This made the Cub infielder very mad. . . . He naturally wants to be known as a ball player and let his banking past be forgotten. . . . No use prejudicing the public against him, Stan says. . . .

All the Scotch stories in the last ten years originally were told about ball players, but just the same Al Simmons had two pairs of flannel dude pants for which he paid $25 each. . . . Bob Reitsch, Illinois alumni secretary and assistant football coach, is convalescing after an appendectomy. . . . Lon Warneke was referred to on a national radio broadcast the other day as "the Cubs' great southpaw." . . . They used to think that Clyde Beattie, the animal trainer, was a sissy as a kid in his home town of Chillicothe, O. . . . Leo Rodak will celebrate his first anniversary as a professional boxer two days after his bout with Petey Hayes Wednesday night. . . . Rodak, one of the finest boxers the Golden Gloves tournament has developed, never has been defeated as a pro and lost only four decisions as an amateur. . . . Bob Zuppke shot a 79 on a Champaign course before leaving for Muskegon, Mich., to spend his vacation. . . . King Levinsky turned down $1,500 to fight Adolph Wiater. . . . Barney Ross' young sister remarked the other day she would like to take up horseback riding, and the next day a fine saddle horse was delivered to her, a gift from the champion. . . .

Jimmy Dykes says the greatest kick he has had in baseball was the tremendous vote he received from the fans in the first all-star game last summer. . . . It was almost duplicated this year. . . . "When the poll was announced I figured I might have had a chance to be chosen the American league's third baseman had I been five years younger." he said. . . . De Paul university is scheduled to meet both Purdue and Notre Dame in basketball next winter. . . . George Huff, Illinois athletic director, has almost recovered from a recent illness. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Sammy Mandell and Joe Azzarella arrived in Chicago to start training for their ten round bout at East Chicago. . . . Thirty-five thousand watched the Giants come from behind and beat the Cubs, 8 to 6, at Wrigley field. . . . The world decathlon record was broken by Harold Osborn of the Illinois Athletic club in the Olympic games. . . . France eliminated the Yankee water polo team. . . . Twenty-nine yachts were entered in the 19th annual Mackinac race.

Sox, Macks Rained Out; Play Today

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Rainfall came to the rescue of the White Sox yesterday by relieving them of the necessity of meeting the Athletics. Not that the Sox were afraid. It was in the nature of a rescue only because of the program immediately ahead of them.

The Sox have a single game scheduled with the Macks today, but tomorrow must meet them in a double header, and on Monday will have to contend with the bothersome Red Sox in two games. The washout of yesterday will make it simpler for Manager Jim Dykes to locate enough pitching for the double bills.

Hopkins Brings Problem.

Marty Hopkins, the new infielder from the St. Paul club, may report today and play, or he might report and not play, or might not report at all. Using him depends on whether Dykes thinks he'll help. His reporting is indefinite because the club, being up to the 23 player limit, can't take him on until one man has been released.

The purchase of Hopkins, while providing the Sox with an infielder who can pick up ground balls, furnishes Manager Dykes a problem. Hopkins is essentially a third baseman, although he can play short if necessary. Dykes himself plays third and doesn't care to move to second. Thus, if Dykes is determined to use Hopkins his only choice will be to place the newcomer at short and leave Luke Appling, supposedly a shortstop by choice, at second base.

Appling Tries Second.

Appling, after more than a month on the shelf with a sprained ankle, took a whack at the second base chores when he returned to active service Thursday. He handled himself with amazing ease in the several plays coming to his attention, so Dykes is not worried about letting the Georgian continue the experiment. Installing Hopkins at short would mean the benching of Bob Boken.

Milt Gaston probably will look after the Sox pitching this afternoon and may be opposed by Al Benton, who is a fellow picked up in the Western league by one of Connie Mack's scouts.

Smith Shoots 68 to Lead in St. Paul Open

St. Paul, Minn., July 13.—[Special.]—Horton Smith, professional at the Oak Park, Ill., Country club, shot a 68, four under par, today to take the lead in the first round of the annual St. Paul open golf tournament. One stroke behind Smith, winner of the Masters' tournament at Atlanta, Ga., several months ago, was Harry Cooper of the Glen Oak Country club, near Chicago.

Olin Dutra, national open champion, shot a 72. Smith, who suffered injuries while competing in the National open, had a 35 on the first nine and a 33 on the second. Cooper had a 35 on his first round and a 34 on the second.

Smith had six birdies. He made several brilliant putts and tee shots. Jim Foulis, the defending champion from Chicago, and Joe Kenneasly, Dubuque, Ia., each scored a 73.

The gallery which followed the golfers received a treat when they watched two aces on the same hole. The players who joined the Hole-in-One club were Sam Parks, Pittsburgh, and Harry Dodson, Springfield, Mo., who made them on the fourth hole, which is 130 yards long.

CASE HONORED AT PARTY OF 13 ON SUICIDE EVE

Pie Manufacturer Insisted 'It's 14,' Friend Says.

The evening before he shot and killed himself in the basement of the Case-Moody Pie corporation, of which he was president, Elmer Grant Case was one of thirteen persons at a party in his honor at the Old Heidelberg inn, 14 West Randolph street, it was learned last night. Mr. Case joked about the unlucky number present and insisted three times on counting them as fourteen, according to William Ehrlich, 3440 North Laramie avenue, a director of the pie company, who was present.

The executive, who was 69 years old, was found dead Thursday afternoon in the basement of his concern's offices, after he failed to attend a meeting of the board of directors. The board, it is understood, intended to replace him with a younger man.

Those who attended the dinner party Wednesday evening included officials of the Case-Moody corporation and their wives, with Mrs. Case and her daughter by a previous marriage, Marguerite.

"I am sure that even at the party Mr. Case was contemplating suicide," Mr. Ehrlich declared. "He kept joking about the number of persons present, and three times he insisted on counting them as fourteen."

Recounts Agreement to Fight On.

Mrs. Case, a comely woman of 34, appeared at the inquest with her daughter yesterday. She testified that her husband's financial difficulties began on the morning of their marriage in December of 1930, when Mr. Case signed a contract to buy the stock of the Pellar Baking company.

Instead of going out of business as agreed, the officials of the latter firm organized a new concern which entered into competition with the Case-Moody company, she said.

"We had lunch together at the Palmer house yesterday," wept Mrs. Case on the stand, "and we had agreed to fight things through no matter what happened. Two hours later he was dead."

Mr. Tomlinson at the inquest testified that no definite plan to compel Case's retirement had been contemplated although it had been suggested.

Funeral services will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel at 1820 South Michigan avenue. Burial will be at Forest Home cemetery.

John Nangle, for 55 Years a Resident Here, Is Dead

John Nangle of 69 East Division street, a resident of Chicago for 55 years, died suddenly early yesterday after an illness of almost a year. He was the father of Eleanor and Anna Nangle of THE TRIBUNE staff; Mrs. Quin Ryan, John T. Nangle and Rita Nangle. A brother, Michael Nangle, and a sister, Mrs. James Healy, also survive. He was born in Ross, County Sligo, Ireland, 77 years ago. Funeral will be held Monday at 9:30 o'clock from the chapel at 935 North Wells street to Holy Name cathedral, where a requiem high mass will be sung. Interment will be in St. Joseph cemetery.

EXTORTIONISTS THREATEN HOME OF STORE HEAD

Washington Residence Guarded by Police.

Washington, D. C., July 13.—[Special.]—A heavy detachment of police tonight stood guard over the palatial home of George N. Everett, local department store executive, guarding it against extortionists who threatened to blow it up unless Everett gave them $50,000.

Since Monday, it was revealed today, police have been engaged in a fruitless attempt to ensnare the blackmailers by carrying out the instructions which the would-be bombers gave Everett for getting in touch with them. The first threat against Everett was made late in June.

Letter Hardly Legible.

The first letter, scrawled in pencil and scarcely legible, said only that the writer would "blow up the joint" unless Everett paid over the money. The letter was mailed in Washington. It directed Everett to place in the personal columns of a local newspaper on June 29 the following message: "George, please come home. Dad needs you."

Believing the threat to be the work of a crank, the police advised Everett to follow the instructions. The message was to inform the blackmailers that Everett had received their demand.

Inserts Another Personal.

A few days after he had complied with the instructions Everett inserted in the personal column of the same paper the sentence, "George, all is ready." On Wednesday of this week he repeated the message he was originally instructed to print. Nothing has been heard in reply, as far as could be learned from the police, except a second threat which Everett received on Monday and which caused the police to establish their guard.

J. B. MALLERS JR. WILL PROBATED; SON GETS $60,000

The will of John B. Mallers Jr., leaving an estate estimated at $60,000 to his son, Charles E. Mallers, 2750 Sheridan road, Evanston, was admitted to probate yesterday by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge John F. O'Connell. Mr. Mallers, well known real estate man, died Tuesday in his apartment at 4358 Drexel boulevard. He was 60 years old.

Two other wills also were admitted to probate and filed with Clerk Mitchell C. Robin. They were:

CHARLES W. STIEFEL, died June 30. Estate of $25,000 to son and daughter. Charles Stiefel Jr., son, executor.

DENNIS DELANEY, died June 20. Estate $5,000 to two sons and daughter. Charles T. Myles, executor.

COOK COUNTY'S GAS TAX SHARE $244,871 IN JUNE

Springfield, Ill., July 13.—(AP)—Allotment to Illinois counties of $1,066,870.72 as their June share of motor fuel tax receipts was announced today by K. L. Ames Jr., finance director.

Of the total, $137,500 was deducted as a reserve for payment of the $20,000,000 relief bond issue. The deduction was largest in Cook county, being $126,991.70 of the gross allotment of $371,863.14. Ames said the June distribution was larger than usual because part of the May funds had not cleared through the banks before the Memorial day holiday.

MOTHERS THANK TRIBUNE CAMP FOR VACATIONS

Each in her own fashion, needy mothers thank their hostess at Camp Algonquin for the two weeks of happiness at the Fox river camp. Because TRIBUNE readers through their gifts make many of these vacations possible, Mrs. Astrid Save, camp superintendent, passed on to the camp reporter the following "thank you."

The message was written in pencil on a penny postcard by a mother who had returned to Chicago after a two weeks' vacation at the camp.

"How are you all out at the camp?" she began. "Are you having one good time after another? How I miss it all. I can hardly get used to home again.

"How we miss the good food, fresh air, boat rides and rest hours! Nothing but work here. Well, I do hope I can come again next year. Good-by and God bless you till then."

The friends she made, the good times she had, the quiet hours in the shady, comfortable, riverside haven will help this mother to face the summer's troubles. Gifts so other mothers and their children may have such vacations are needed as never before. They should be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower. Nine dollars will finance a two weeks' vacation.

An anonymous gift of $25 and $5 "In memory of Tilden Straus" yesterday brought the fund's grand total to $531.56.

JOLIET CONVICT STABS FOREMAN IN ESCAPE PLOT

Julius Gross, 50 years old, foreman in the tailor shop at the old Joliet penitentiary, was stabbed yesterday by two Chicago convicts in an attempt to escape. Capt. Edward Keegan and two other guards captured the pair as they fled toward the east gate. Gross, who is a civilian employé, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in a serious condition.

The convicts are Matthew Nowack, serving a life term for murder, and Chauncey Tuttle, serving 100 years for murder. They had fashioned rude knives out of two worn files and concealed themselves in the tailor shop. Gross discovered them there, and Tuttle stabbed him below the heart. Hearing the moans of the injured man, Frank Bruski, a guard, appeared in the doorway. Tuttle picked up an iron pipe, and the guard fled into the prison yard.

Nowack confessed to Edward G. Powers, investigator for the state's attorney of Will county, that he and Tuttle, whom he named as the originator of the plot, had planned to escape. They went to the tailor shop intending to make a bridge of 16 foot ironing boards from an upper window to the top of the outside wall. Tuttle remained silent. Both were placed in solitary confinement.

HUSBAND'S RICHES ARE ARGUED IN ALIMONY HEARING

Whether Howard D. Whitehouse, investment banker, is an impoverished man whose estranged wife is trying an "alimony racket" against him, or whether he is a wealthy man who has concealed his assets, was argued yesterday before Judge Joseph Sabath.

It was on the plea of Attorney Benjamin B. Davis, counsel for Mrs. Lucille Douglas Whitehouse, to secure temporary alimony pending disposition of her divorce suit against her husband, who lives at 70 East Walton place.

Attorney Lloyd Faxon, representing Whitehouse, said:

"The plaintiff is an able bodied young woman who has been married less than a year and has no children. She has assets, consisting of jewels, furs, and other things, far beyond those of the defendant. This is a flagrant example of the 'alimony racket.'"

Attorney Davis retorted Whitehouse has made a point of parading alleged business reverses since the filing of the divorce suit, whereas he really has lots of money.

BANKING HOUSE OFFICIAL WINS A PARDON; DIES

Madison, Wis., July 13.—(AP)—Seven and one-half hours after an absolute pardon once more made him a free man, Rudolph R. Kropf, 62, sentenced to state's prison on charges developing from the collapse of the Joseph M. Boyd company, Madison investment firm, died last night in a hospital here. Stricken with an intestinal ailment, the former secretary-treasurer of the company was rushed here from the prison hospital and was told of Gov. A. G. Schmedeman's clemency before he died. Kropf and Boyd entered Waupun prison March 11, 1934, under sentences of 10 to 11 years each.

Museum Shows Model of Great Serpent Mound

A model of the Great Serpent mound of Adams county, Ohio, which has interested archeologists and laymen since it was first described in 1848, will be placed on exhibition in the hall of North American archeology at the Field museum today. The original mound, 1,400 feet in length and from two to four feet in height, closely resembles the form of a serpent. The meaning of the mound is unknown, according to Dr. Paul S. Martin, assistant curator at the museum, but it is believed prehistoric Indians built it as part of religious ceremonies.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Another W-G-N show is slated to go network. Bob Becker's dramatized stories about dogs are scheduled for a Sunday afternoon position on the basic red network of the National Broadcasting company, beginning Sept. 30. Becker, outdoor editor of THE TRIBUNE, concluded this season's series last week. Bob plans to do some hunting and fishing, and he has a couple of books to turn out before returning to the air. W-G-N will continue to be the local outlet when the network series is launched.

Ted Weems' orchestra, heard over W-G-N nightly from the Palmer house, was auditioned yesterday at NBC for the auto company using the Indian head emblem. Others on the show included Alice Joy and the King's Jesters, with Don McNeill as master of ceremonies. The same prospective sponsor also listened to the American Beauty revue, an original musical show running a half hour.

The Friday the 13th jinx business means nothing to Amos 'n' Andy. They wound up their broadcast series last night and started on their two month vacation. Freeman Gosden [Amos] and Mrs. Gosden have determined on fishing in the grand manner. With William Dewey Jr., managing director of the Edgewater Beach hotel, and Mrs. Dewey they will start Monday for Alaskan waters, where they plan to do some whaling. They have chartered a yacht and will sail from Prince Rupert, B. C., transferring in northern waters to the whaler. Contract bridge and shooting bears will furnish diverting interludes. Charlie Correll [Andy] and Mrs. Correll will sail for Europe Tuesday.

Roxy [S. L. Lothafel], formerly head man at the NBC's Radio City, will make his bow over CBS on Sept. 15 in a new program sponsored by the concern that had Albert Spalding on the air the past season. Roxy will produce his new show and act as master of ceremonies on it. . . . Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians will be heard from the Chicago theater on its regular program over W-G-N when they appear at that showhouse, beginning Aug. 13. Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, radio comedy team, will also appear at the Chicago in August.

The Theater Guild is reported angling for Bing Crosby to play the lead in its first fall production. . . . Bob Crosby won't be back with Anson Weeks' orchestra when it returns to W-G-N schedules tonight from the Trianon. Bob is in New York to launch his own orchestra. . . . The Mills Brothers are singing in Holland. When they return to America in a fortnight they will vacation in their home town, Piqua, O., before returning to the airways.

Mary Pickford will make one of her infrequent radio appearances at 1:35 this afternoon over KYW. Maj. Chester L. Fordney, the stratosphere explorer, will interview her. . . . Richard Strauss, renowned composer-conductor, will be heard over CBS Saturday, July 28, in a broadcast from the Salzburg Musical festival in Austria.

YOUNG CATHOLIC GROUP WELCOMED BY BISHOP SHEIL

Bishop Bernard J. Sheil yesterday welcomed 1,000 delegates from 300 Catholic high schools who are assembled at the Palmer house to attend a three day session of the high school section of the Students' Spiritual Leadership convention of the Sodality of Our Lady.

Bishop Sheil urged the young people to carry the spirit of helpfulness to their unfortunate neighbors as their best field for "Catholic action."

The session convened after mass at Holy Name cathedral. Group meetings were held during the day to discuss various student problems.

Action on the motion picture question, in which it is expected they will express approval of the fight against indecent films, is to be taken today.

2,000 Acres of Lotus Bloom in Lake County

The lotus flowers at Grass lake in Lake county were in bloom yesterday. Last year the 2,000 acres of lotus beds, most of which are located on Blarney island, bloomed July 9. Jack O'Connor, who lives on the island, said the public is invited to see the flowers from the top of a tower 36 feet high.

HUGH FRAYNE, A. F. L. WORKER, IS DEAD AT 64

Active Fighter Against Radical Influence.

New York, July 13.—[Special.]—Hugh Frayne, 64, who for more than thirty years was prominently identified with the American Federation of Labor, died in the Wickersham hospital yesterday after an illness of several months.

His death was announced today at the New York office of the A. F. of L., of which he was in charge since 1910.

In Coal Mine When 8.

He was born in Scranton and when 8 years old began working as a breaker boy in a coal mine. Later he learned the sheet metal trade and became general vice president of the Sheet Metal Workers' union in 1901. Several years later he was appointed a general organizer for the American Federation of Labor.

During the war he served on the war industries board as chairman of the labor division. He also was identified with civic and welfare organizations and in 1920 the national commission on prisons and prison labor conferred on him its gold metal for prison reform work.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Cawley Frayne, and two sons, Joseph Frayne of New York and Hugh Frayne Jr. of Scranton.

Staunch Gompers Supporter.

During the war years until his death Mr. Frayne was a frequent speaker on labor matters before groups interested in civic and social conditions. He was a staunch supporter of the late Samuel Gompers and always was allied with the most conservative wing of labor.

During the war and after he spoke often against radicalism, warning members of the federation and all others that the hope of labor lay not in "in direct action," as advocated by the communist groups, but in the craft organization sponsored by the federation. He was strongly opposed to shop unions, regarding them as precursors of the sovietization of American industry.

He also was an opponent of the formation of a labor party in this country, similar to the British labor party.

BLIND WORKER GETS COURT EDICT OVER ALIMONY

Arthur Eick, a blind piano tuner employed by the board of education, has until Tuesday either to show why he shouldn't support his wife and child or go to jail, Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Circuit court ruled yesterday.

Attorney Max Dunn, representing Eick, who lives at 1111 East 62d street, pleaded his client could not pay the $140 in back alimony, ordered when his wife was given a separate maintenance decree, because he wasn't getting any salary from the school board.

However, Attorney Eugene P. Megan, representing Mrs. Eich, said the piano tuner had received a total of $991 in cash and tax warants since Nov. 1, and he had signed over a part of the $800 still owed him, to creditors. He added the child Virginia, 4 years old, has had to go without milk.

Judge Normoyle said he could see no reason why Eich shouldn't sign over part of his money to his wife, since he had signed some over to creditors. He also instructed Eich to appear Tuesday with an accounting of what he had done with the $991 he had received.

KAYE DON LAYS DEATH CRASH TO DEFECT IN AUTO

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man, July 13.—(AP)—Testifying in his own defense at his trial for manslaughter, Kaye Don, British motor and speedboat racer, told a jury today that he took his racing car out on the night of May 28 at the suggestion of his mechanic, Francis Tayler, who was killed in a practice run on a highway.

Tayler suggested another test of the steering gears and brakes, Don testified, because the car had a tendency to "wander." This fault manifested itself at the moment of the accident, he continued, as he was trying to negotiate a bend. The car failed to respond to the steering gear and the crash in which Tayler was killed resulted.

"I want every one to understand that I am not suggesting that Tayler insisted on the car going out," Don said. "It was my car. I felt he had worked hard and wanted it tested."

Find Woman Dead in Hotel; Start Investigation

Police yesterday were investigating the death of a woman, about 40 years old, whose body was found in a room at the Atlantic hotel, 316 South Clark street. The woman had registered at the hotel July 9 as Mrs. Margaret Ferry, 141 Adams street, Los Angeles. Police said she had been dead since Tuesday. Two empty bottles, which appeared to have contained veronal, were found in the room, but the police expressed the theory she might have been strangled because of the condition of the body. The coroner's inquest was continued until July 27.

MIDDLE WEST BANKERS TO GET 52% ON CLAIMS

Court Urged to Act Speedily on Plan.

All interested groups united yesterday for the first time in presenting to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson a plan for reorganization of Middle West Utilities company, giant Insull holding concern.

The program calls for a total issue of 3,000,000 shares of a single class of common stock, with 1,695,000 shares going to the bankers in full settlement of their secured claims. The banking creditors, however, agree to give the noteholders' committee an option to take over this holding at $6 a share, or an aggregate of $10,170,000. Boiled down to essentials, this means the bankers will take 52 cents on the dollar on the face of their claims.

Stockholders Given Chance.

Of major importance in the proposed plan is the fact that both common and preferred stockholders are to keep an interest in the reorganized company. This applies whether or not they supply any of the additional $10,000,000 needed to buy out the secured creditors.

In the event that the money is raised both noteholders and stockholders subscribing will be treated exactly alike. They will receive "a prior security for the money they put in plus an allotment of prior stock." Non-subscribing stockholders will receive a subordinate class of stock. The eventual plan, however, contemplates the single class of shares.

The program sets forth no plan for allotment to noteholders and common and preferred stockholders of the 1,290,000 shares of new stock not given to secured creditors. It does state, however, that the creditors intend to "cause some security to be issued to permit stockholders to participate on some basis" even if the required cash to pay off the bankers is not raised and plans are revamped.

Urge Court Act Quickly.

Haste was urged on Judge Wilkerson in granting the motion for reorganization so that noteholders and both common and preferred stockholders may have time to work together in raising the required money before the option expires on Oct. 1.

The reorganization would be effected under terms of Section 77B, recent amendment to the bankruptcy laws, which permits action on consent of two-thirds of each type of creditor involved.

The program was evolved in an all day conference Thursday, with the aid of Receiver Charles A. McCulloch, after a crisis had been precipitated Monday, when Robert N. Golding, attorney for the note holders, sharply criticised the bankers for failure to reach agreement.

Yesterday, however, all were in perfect harmony. Nevertheless, Judge Wilkerson declined to be rushed into approval of the reorganization or the appointment of a temporary trustee in bankruptcy while the program was being worked out.

Decision Within Week.

Remarking that the creditors had taken their time in coming to an agreement, Judge Wilkerson said he felt entitled to take some time to decide such an important matter. He indicated he will give a decision within a week.

The "happy family" aspect of the hearing was emphasized by the unanimous suggestion that Judge Wilkerson name Mr. McCulloch as temporary trustee. Or, they chorused, if Mr. McCulloch will not accept the place, choose Daniel C. Green, president of Middle West, as the temporary trustee.

"I'd like to settle it once and for all," Mr. McCulloch said in open court, "that I am not and will not be a candidate for the place. I have told everyone here, and I want to be relieved. If my recommendation is asked I shall suggest Mr. Green, and I shall be willing to remain for ninety days to help break in any one who is chosen."

Bank Representatives Silent.

For the most part, the bank representatives sat silently through the hearing. The plan was presented by Attorney Donald McPherson, representing 50 per cent of the $60,000,000 in preferred stock, and by Attorney Orville Taylor, representing one-third of the common. Attorney Golding, who said he represented 78 per cent of the $40,000,000 in unsecured notes, spoke at length for the plan and for selection of a trustee.

Then, as the hearing was nearly over, Judge Wilkerson shot a sharp query: "Is it the opinion of the creditors that there is a reasonable chance that this reorganization will go through?"

Edward Eagle Brown, president of the First National bank, led the chorus of convincing ayes. He was seconded by Abner J. Stilwell, vice president of the Continental Illinois National bank, and by representatives of the Central Republic company and the Bankers Trust company of New York. The latter is the largest of the secured creditors, with paper of more than $10,000,000 face value.

General Electric Gets Stock.

The General Electric company, the other secured creditor, is to receive 15,000 shares of stock but did not join the others in giving other creditors the $6 purchase option.

In refusing to be rushed into any decisions, Judge Wilkerson made it plain that he wishes first to consult with Judge Evan A. Evans of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, who ruled there was collusion in original Insull receivership selections, and with Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, who ruled the reverse after conducting his "town meeting" on charges brought by Attorney Samuel Ettleson.

Doubt as to the effect of the present receivership on admission of Middle West to bankruptcy reorganization also was expressed by Judge Wilkerson.

"Fed" Banks See Joker in New Loan Plan

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Delay by the federal reserve banks in making direct loans to industry under the new law enacted by congress last month, it was learned yesterday, has been due to the discovery of a "joker" injected into the program by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The practical effect of this "joker" is that the reserve banks, in making such loans, would have to match the funds advanced by the treasury dollar for dollar. In order to lend to industry the 139 millions congress has authorized the treasury to extend for this purpose the federal reserve banks would have to lend an equal amount of their own funds—an operation which would entirely exhaust their remaining surplus and tie it up in loans so slow and questionable that commercial banks decline to make them.

And, ironically enough, even the 139 millions which the government would advance once belonged to the federal reserve banks. It was taken from them last year when they were required to contribute half their surplus to the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation.

The effect of Secretary Morgenthau's scheme, La Salle street believes, will be that the amount of direct loans by the federal reserve banks will be insignificant. A few loans will be made so that the reserve banks can say that they have entered into the spirit of the administration's program, but nobody expects these loans to become an important addition to the credit picture.

None of the twelve reserve banks had made any direct loans up to Wednesday night, according to the weekly figures released Thursday. Directors of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago after their weekly meeting yesterday declined to make any statement concerning the amount of direct loans about to be granted. It was learned, however, that a few small loans are in process of being made.

The story behind the Morgenthau "joker" is something like this:

The "direct loans" law passed by congress and signed by the President last month authorized the secretary of the treasury to take 139 millions out of the profits reaped by the treasury from gold devaluation and to turn it over to the reserve banks to lend to industry for "working capital" purposes. In addition, the 12 reserve banks were authorized to make loans equal to their combined surplus as of July 1, 1934, which was approximately another 139 millions.

Inasmuch as the only loans that the reserve banks make under the new law would be to applicants whose credit is so poor that the ordinary commercial banks have turned them down, it was almost universally recognized in financial circles that the reserve banks would risk the treasury's money, if the treasury should insist, but would take no such long chances with their own remaining surplus.

When Secretary Morgenthau was here a week ago, however, he disclosed that the treasury would not push out its 139 millions first, but would insist on interlarding it with the reserve banks' own funds. That was the "joker." First, the 12 reserve banks are to be given 10 millions to lend for the treasury. Then they must lend 10 millions of their own before a second 10 millions of treasury funds is forthcoming. And so on until the entire 139 millions of treasury funds has been matched by an equal amount of the funds of the reserve banks themselves.

Disclosure of Secretary Morgenthau's scheme for forcing the reserve banks to risk their own funds in the same type of "political" loans on which the treasury would be willing to take chances has thrown a monkey wrench into the whole program.

The reserve banks take the stand that they would be willing to help the treasury dish out funds, if it insists, but, having already had half their surplus taken from them to subsidize the FDIC, they see no reason why they should tie up all of the rest in frozen loans made for the purpose of easing the New Dealers over the fall election hurdle.

Even on the 139 millions authorized by the treasury the federal reserve banks are called upon under the law to assume some risk. To secure each dollar advanced by the treasury a reserve bank must put up a dollar's worth of the class B stock of the FDIC. In other words, a reserve bank to compensate for the privilege of being permitted to lend a doubtful borrower a dollar which has been expropriated from its surplus by the government must pledge with the government the apparently worthless paper which the government gave in exchange for the dollar. It isn't much of a risk, however, because the class B stock of the FDIC is of so little value that the reserve banks two weeks ago wrote it off their asset columns.

This business of attempting to make political lending bodies out of the federal reserve banks contains other "jokers." There's one in the act itself which has received little or no publicity.

Section 4 provides that the 12 federal reserve banks may be assessed by the federal reserve board in Washington to pay for a new building to house the federal reserve board. The banks are privately owned institutions, their stock being held by the member banks. The reserve board is the politically appointed group in Washington which supervises the operations of the reserve banks and controls stock exchange credit.

Thus, the act in effect makes it possible for the reserve board to build itself the newest addition to Washington's mausoleum row and charge it to the nation's bank stockholders. No limitation on cost is set.

One thing that La Salle street cannot understand is why the reserve board at Washington thinks it needs a new building when the board itself is rapidly becoming merely an adjunct to the treasury.

Grain Board Seat Sells for $7,100, or $100 Lower

A seat on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday sold for $7,100, compared with the previous day's sale at $7,200.

WHEAT CLIMBS FOR FOURTH DAY AS MILLERS BUY

Up 3⅛ to 3⅜ Cents; Corn Also Gains.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Wheat prices scored their fourth consecutive daily advance yesterday with final quotations showing gains of more than 10 cents a bushel over the low prices prevailing earlier this week. Corn and other grains followed wheat and registered good gains over Thursday's prices. The important buying appeared suddenly about an hour before the close of the market, prior to which trading had been rather quiet with prices showing moderate strength.

The rise in prices here was preceded by a spurt in the Kansas City market, where millers were reported to be big buyers of both cash wheat and futures. Recent flour sales are forcing millers to increase their supplies of wheat and the short crop of spring wheat in the northwest is encouraging mills in that territory to accumulate grain.

Prices Rise Swiftly.

Evidence of the good buying stimulated purchases here and the prices of all deliveries moved up swiftly. In Minneapolis dollar wheat again became a reality with the December contract closing at $1.01.

The rise in futures here ranged from 3⅛ to 3⅜ cents a bushel with the September delivery closing at 97⅞ cents as compared with the low quotation last Monday of 87⅝ cents. December wheat sold at $1, but closed at 99⅝ cents. Corn's advance amounted to 1 to 1⅛ cents a bushel with September finishing at 60 cents.

Several factors contributed to the rise in prices. The foreign news, particularly from Canada, was of distinctly bullish character and helped to encourage buying.

Hedging Sales Smaller.

Hedging sales against purchases of grain in the country were smaller. Buying of cash wheat and corn for shipment to Chicago was fairly heavy but below the previous day's volume. Purchases of 400,000 bushels of wheat and 350,000 bushels of corn were reported by handlers here. During the preceding two days approximately 1,500,000 bushels of wheat and 1,250,000 bushels of corn were bought for shipment here. All this grain was hedged through selling in the futures market. Actual receipts of grain here yesterday included 297 cars of wheat and 124 cars of corn.

Covering of earlier short sales by professional traders contributed to the buying yesterday. Many shorts were unable to cover Wednesday, following the publication of the bullish government crop forecast and Thursday there was less incentive to buy in. With moderate outside buying yesterday these short sellers came scurrying in and helped swell the demand. Good commission house buying was reported.

Frost Hurts Canadian Wheat.

Crop news from Canada featured damage to wheat from frosts. From several quarters messages were received indicating that the recent frost in Saskatchewan injured wheat to a greater extent than was realized at the time.

Broomhall cut down the previous estimate on the Australian wheat crop by 10 million bushels, which makes it 45 million bushels less than last year. At the same time the Argentine wheat surplus, available for export, was reported at 116 million bushels, or 54 millions under the reserve at this time last year.

Trading yesterday was fairly heavy. Figures on Thursday's trade, issued yesterday, disclosed that over 49,000,000 bushels of wheat were sold, which marked the biggest volume since June 21. Total trade in all grains Wednesday was slightly in excess of 79,000,000 bushels.

FRANCE REDUCES WHEAT PRICE TO HALT CHEATING

PARIS, July 13.—By a decree of the ministry of agriculture to be published tomorrow the French government reduces the minimum price of wheat from 115 francs to 108 francs a quintal.

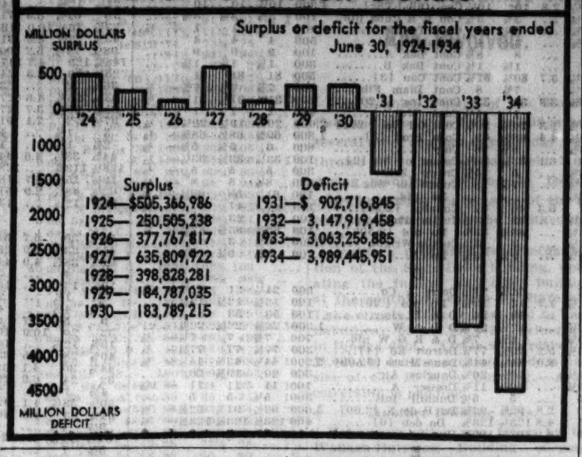
Testimony in French courts in recent trials of persons violating the wheat law indicates the official price has been widely disregarded and that farmers in many regions are selling secretly as low as 90 francs and sometimes for as low as 75 francs.

The infliction of heavy fines in test cases indicates the government intends to make a serious effort to maintain the official minimum price which is far above world prices.

U. S. Offerings 75 Million 182-Day Discount Bills

Washington, D. C., July 13.—(AP)—Acting Secretary Coolidge of the treasury today invited tenders on approximately $75,000,000 of 182-day discount bills to be dated July 18. Tenders will be received at the federal reserve banks and branches until 2 p. m., July 16.

Combined Deficits of the Government of Past Four Years Over 10 Billion Dollars



Home Repair Loan Grants Start Today

BY AL CHASE.

Authorization of money for repairs, modernization and remodeling residences of home owners eligible for Home Owners' Loan corporation loans will start this morning, Arthur Goodwillie, regional conditioning director for Illinois and Wisconsin, announced yesterday. His statement was issued after an all day meeting at the Congress hotel called by Donald H. McNeal, national director of the reconditioning division of the HOLC, and attended by seven regional directors, representing thirty-one states.

D. H. McNEAL.

Mr. McNeal, a Chicagoan who now has his headquarters in Washington, issued figures which show Illinois' home owners are slower than the residents of fifteen other states in asking federal cash to modernize and repair their homes. Illinois is sixteenth in the list of states in both number of applicants and amount of cash wanted.

Unable to Explain Delay.

Officials were unable to explain this delay on the part of Illinois home owners in making their application for money. Michigan stands at the top of the list with 44,400 applications, totaling $9,450,000. About 10,000 Illinois home owners have asked $1,150,000.

According to Mr. McNeal the $300,000,000 now available for home repairs will be given out on a "first come first served" basis. This means Illinois home owners, it was pointed out, will have to step lively if this state gets anywhere near its share of the total, figured on a population basis.

Following Michigan in the list of applicants is Ohio with 31,000 applications for $6,000,000. Wisconsin is ahead of Illinois with 12,764 applications asking $1,780,000. Indiana also leads Illinois by a small margin. It has 10,400 applications for $1,300,000.

Applications Total 288,031.

Mr. McNeal said that the total number of applications throughout the country is 288,031. These home owners have asked for $55,008,050. Thus, more than a sixth of the $300,000,000 already has been applied for. It is expected that with loan making getting under way today—though no cash will be paid out for some time—Illinois applications will come in at a faster rate.

The reconditioning division of the HOLC will employ approximately 1,500 men in the present 300 HOLC offices throughout the country, according to Mr. McNeal. He pointed out that the reconditioning program of the HOLC and that provided in the new federal housing act will work hand in hand. The HOLC loans will be for fifteen years; the housing act loans will be one to five years. The former will be mostly for distressed home owners; the housing act cash is for anyone who wishes to modernize his house.

SECURITY MART CZARS GAMBLE? SURE, FOR OFFICE

Washington, D. C., July 13.—(AP)—What this? Gambling in the stock exchange commission?

Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the control board got into a friendly argument yesterday with the federal trade commission. It was over office space in the Interstate Commerce building. They flipped a nickel.

"We won," Kennedy said, "and got the upper floors."

ILLINOIS BUILDING PERMITS SHOW SIX MONTH RISE OF 72%

Authorized new construction in Illinois for the first six months of this year was 72.3 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933, according to the monthly building review of the Illinois department of labor made public yesterday. Up to July 1 of this year building permits were issued for 5,199 projects, estimated to cost $9,534,761. Last year there were 4,981 projects costing $5,535,766 for the same period. In Chicago such expenditures increased 84.6 per cent during the same period.

During June, 1934, a total of 1,174 building projects, estimated to cost $1,679,072, was authorized by permits issued in sixty-five Illinois cities. These figures represent declines from May of 12.3 per cent in the number of building projects and 17.3 per cent in the total estimated expenditure. The estimated cost of permits was 5.6 per cent below the total authorized in June, 1933.

OIL FIRM ASKS U. S. WRIT TO BAR NRA CODE SUITS

In an argument before Federal Judge John P. Barnes yesterday on a motion for an injunction to restrain government New Deal agencies from proceeding with criminal or civil actions against 28 operators of Waggoner Greasing Palaces, Attorney Max M. Korshak charged that the government's "merciless prosecution" would ruin the operators.

Attorney Korshak said that his clients were threatened with prosecution for alleged violations of the code of fair competition for the petroleum industry. Judge Barnes refused to issue the injunction immediately, but ordered Assistant United States Attorneys Austin Hall and Leo J. Hasenauer to file an answer to the greasing operators' bill within two weeks and set the case for hearing on July 30.

The operators filed the bill for injunction as an intervening petition, joining in the suit of the United States versus the Suburban Motor Service corporation. Several months ago Judge Barnes denied the government's petition for an injunction to restrain the Suburban Motor Service corporation from violating the petroleum code by giving away free premiums with gasoline. Judge Barnes held that the code did not apply to the corporation as it was not engaged in interstate commerce.

U. S. BUSY PAYING FARMERS; OUTLAY NOW 359 MILLION

A total of $358,993,104 had been disbursed for all purposes in the agency's fifteen months career. Of the total disbursements to date $281,427,941 went for benefit and rental payments, an estimated $60,000,000 was devoted to removal of surpluses, and administrative costs were about $17,000,000. Meanwhile processing taxes on farm commodities had brought $359,589,313 into the treasury. However, officials of the organization said this happy condition would not continue for long, although it was their expectation when a final balance is struck receipts will just exceed payments.

In the next two or three months thousands of checks will be mailed out to the farmers who are due payments for having reduced their acreage. At the same time the processing tax will continue to yield the steady stream of collections, and after the peak of payments has been passed receipts will begin to catch up on payments again.

Gasoline Prices Advanced in Cities in Iowa, Illinois

Further indication of an early rise of 1 cent in Chicago gasoline prices was seen in yesterday's activity in Iowa and northwestern Illinois cities. Prices were raised to "normal" in Davenport, Dubuque, Muscatine, and eleven other points. This objective also was partially achieved in Moline and Rock Island, as well as Cedar Rapids and a dozen other nearby towns.

Wholesale Commodities Rally from Last Week Sag

The bureau of labor statistics wholesale commodity price index for the week ended July 7 declined to 74.7 from 74.8 the preceding week, but daily commodity indices, based on prices of actively traded staples, have returned to approximately the high points of the year as a result of the advance in grains and cotton mainly.

Loss of 19.2% More Than Seasonal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 13.—The American Railway association today reported that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended July 7 were 519,807 cars, a decrease of 124,765 under the preceding week and 23,703 under the corresponding week of 1933, but an increase of 103,879 above 1932.

This was the first week in 1934 to show a decline from the preceding year. The total was a decline of 19.2 per cent, compared with the preceding week, and the drop was more than the usual seasonal downturn. Between like weeks last year there was a drop of 15 per cent. The decline between weeks was partly the result in both years of the Fourth of July holiday.

Miscellaneous Freight Drops.

Miscellaneous freight loaded during the week totaled 197,568, a decrease of 53,336 under the preceding week, 4,399 under 1933, but 47,298 above 1932.

Grain and grain products were 37,132 cars, a decrease of 5,919 under the preceding week and 7,936 below 1933, but an increase of 6,839 above 1932. In the western district these products totaled 24,432 cars, a decrease of 6,994 below 1933.

FARM MORTGAGE LOANS EXCEED BILLION IN YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 13.—Farm mortgage loans aggregating more than 1 billion dollars have been made to farmer borrowers by the federal land banks and the land bank commissioner since the organization of the Farm Credit administration about a year ago, Albert S. Goss, land bank commissioner, announced today. About 400,000 loans were involved.

About 90 per cent of the loans were used to refinance existing indebtedness, which has saved many farm homes from foreclosures and tax sales in addition to reducing the borrower's annual interest charges on an average about 20 per cent, it was stated. In many instances the total amount of farmers' debt outstanding has been considerably reduced, with creditors agreeing to scale down their claims so that the farmers might be eligible for loans through the federal land banks.

The federal land banks, a statement said, are now loaning at the rate of about $6,000,000 a day in bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation, which are guaranteed by the federal government as to principal and interest.

COLUMBIA RIVER 29 MILLION DAM CONTRACT IS LET

Washington, D. C., July 13.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes today awarded the contract for construction of the Grand Coulee dam and power plant on the Columbia river in Washington to the Silas Mason company, New York City; the Atkinson-Kier company, San Francisco, and the Walsh Construction company, Davenport, Ia., which submitted a joint low bid of $29,339,301.

The reclamation bureau said work on the project must be started within 30 days after notice is given the contractors to proceed. This notice, they said, probably would be sent tomorrow from the bureau's Denver office.

Midland United Meeting to Await Court Order

Stockholders of Midland Utilities company yesterday were informed that no action will be taken July 19 at an adjourned stockholders meeting other than to adjourn the assembly again until further order of the United States District court of Delaware, which assumed jurisdiction of the property in proceedings for reorganization under the amended bankruptcy law. The notice was served by President John N. Shannahan and Hugh M. Morris, who were named trustees pending reorganization.

Rail Chiefs Move to Ask Rate Boosts

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlantic City, N. J., July 13.—Executives of the nation's leading railroads will seek an increase in service rates to care for an additional $359,000,000 annually in railway expenses, "which will be caused by recent acts of congress and other developments in connection with the national policy of stimulating upward trends of commodity price levels."

This was indicated in a statement issued at the close of the semi-annual meeting of the Association of Railway Executives today. Although the railroad heads refused to enlarge upon the typewritten statement, it is generally understood that the carriers will ask the Interstate commerce commission to grant an increase of 10 per cent in freight rates.

Would Equalize Expense.

At the present time the railroads have an annual revenue of approximately 4 billion dollars, of which about 3 billion is income from freight service and 1 billion from passenger service. Should a 10 per cent increase be granted by the interstate commerce commission it would nearly equalize the additional railway expense.

The carrier heads claim that the restoration of pay to employés will mean an additional $156,000,000 a year in operating costs; payments under the newly enacted pension bill will cost another $66,000,000, and increased cost of materials an additional $137,000,000 annually.

While the statement does not say that the roads will seek an increase in rates, it points out "the railroads have no sources of income other than money received from services performed for the public, and they are faced with the problem of finding a way to increase their revenues."

Study New Legislation.

Since it became evident that new legislation would cause additional operating costs, a number of committees have been looking into every phase of the developments. These committees submitted preliminary reports of their findings at the executive session here today. They will continue their investigations and will meet again in the near future with completed reports.

While the association is not scheduled to convene again until late fall, it is understood the completed reports will be ready within the next month or two. Therefore it would not be surprising if the member roads' meeting was held in late September or early October, in either New York or Chicago. It was stated no definite action regarding an increase in rates was taken today and it is believed doubtful that any move would be made before being brought up for a vote before the entire association.

May Contest Pension Bill.

The new pension bill, signed by President Roosevelt on June 27, is also giving the railway executives deep concern and it is possible the carriers will contest its validity in the courts. At present the pensions paid by the roads total approximately $35,000,000 annually and an additional expense of $66,000,000 would be imposed under the new law. The law committee of the association will consider the question further before any definite steps are taken.

"The Association of Railway Executives, composed of executives of practically all the important railroads of the United States," said the statement, "gave extended consideration to what means might be found to meet an increase of approximately $359,000,000 per year in railway expenses which will be caused by recent acts of congress and other developments in connection with the national policy of stimulating upward trends of commodity price levels. The problem of the executives is to fine means for gathering increased revenues to meet these increased costs in the making of which they have had little or no participation."

JUNE BUILDING IS 24 PER CENT ABOVE YEAR AGO

New York, July 13.—(AP)—The June total of construction contracts in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains amounted to $127,131,200, according to F. W. Dodge corporation. This is a gain of 24 per cent over the total for June, 1933, but a decline of 5 per cent when compared with the preceding month's total of $134,438,700.

It was shown that publicly financed projects constituted a larger percentage when compared with both the preceding month and June, last year. Of the total, $73,308,200 was financed from public funds, chiefly PWA. This was more than 57 per cent of the total as compared with 53 per cent in May and 28 per cent in June, 1933.

Chesapeake Corp., B. & O. Plan Issues.

Two large pieces of financing totaling about $110,000,000 and involving the public sale of notes and bonds for two big railroad systems are expected to be offered shortly. The two issues will mark the second important instalment of railroad offerings in many months, following a long suspension of financing because of unfavorable investment market conditions.

The first rail issue is that of $50,000,000 of five year 4½ per cent notes of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad which will be offered through Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co. In support of this issue the Reconstruction Finance corporation has agreed to buy any part of the issue that the bankers are unable to sell. In banking circles it is believed that the bonds will find a ready market and that the RFC will be called upon to accept few if any of them.

Gross Cost Is 4.70 Per Cent.

The bankers have agreed to take the notes at 99 per cent of face value, making a gross cost to the railroad of 4.70 per cent interest, including all commissions and expenses. These notes are secured by collateral with a market value of about 170 per cent of the loan.

The proceeds of the note issue will be used to pay debts due Aug. 10, including $25,500,000 owed the RFC. The road recently offered a loan of $25,000,000 to meet the Aug. 10 public note maturity, but bankers asked 5 per cent interest in addition to expenses.

The other issue in prospect is that of the Chesapeake corporation to provide some 55 or 60 million dollars to retire approximately 20 millions of bank loans and redeem the corporation's issue of convertible collateral trust 5 per cent bonds which mature May 15, 1947.

Subject to Redemption.

The convertible collateral 5s, outstanding in the amount of $36,749,000, are subject to redemption through sinking fund in amounts of not less than $2,500,000 at the option of the corporation on sixty days' notice at par and accrued interest. They are selling currently in the open market around 108.

A move to call the issue for redemption would, under the circumstances, naturally tend to prompt conversion into the stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway to avert the loss which would ensue if the bonds were surrendered under call at par.

The street discussed the possibility of a new issue of ten year 5 per cent notes convertible into Chesapeake and Ohio stock at $50 a share, as against the conversion level of $43.97 a share for the present issue.

New York Needs $70,000,000.

New York City is expected to reoffer shortly about $70,000,000 of bonds, bids on which were rejected early this week because bankers demanded an interest rate that city officials deemed too high. Reports had indicated that the city would ask the RFC to purchase the issue, but discussions of that kind were ended yesterday with an announcement from the controler that the city has no intention of so offering the bonds, and one from Jesse Jones, head of the RFC, that that governmental agency is "not interested."

Controler Joseph D. McGoldrick's statement said that the city officials were "well aware that the RFC does not have the authority" to purchase municipal obligations of the status of those which the city has for sale. Jones, as quoted by Dow, Jones & Co., said that the Reconstruction Finance corporation is "not interested in that type of securities" and that he was anxious to aid the city in finding some way out of the difficulties which arose when the bankers' bids were rejected because of their terms. He said he would be glad to offer his services as mediator.

It is rather widely felt in Wall street that the bankers may offer terms a point or two below the 4 per cent on which the city insists.

VAN SWERINGENS SILENT.

Cleveland, O., July 13.—(AP)—The Plain Dealer tonight says the offices of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen had "no comment to make" on reports that the Chesapeake corporation, Van Sweringen holding company, was about to enter a financing arrangement to retire bank loans and redeem convertible collateral trust 5 per cent bonds.

Financial quarters here were wondering what firm of investment bankers would handle the issue, since J. P. Morgan & Co., which in the past handled the major portion of the Van Sweringen banking, elected to drop the investment banking business.

STOCKS RALLY IN LATE TRADE ON GRAIN RISE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 13.—Soaring grain prices inspired the late trading today and partly atone for an early show of weakness with a number of net gains running from fractions to 3 points. However, at the close losses exceeded gains.

Activity picked up on the rebound, the sales total mounting to around 534,560 shares. This was about 50,000 in excess of yesterday's turnover, but brokers could not help comparing it with the big market of July 13 last year when approximately seven and a half million shares changed hands and price gains of $1 to $15 a share were chalked up.

Rally Late in Session.

The upturn in prices today did not get under way until well along toward quitting time. Throughout most of the trading the market had been wearied by heaviness in the railroad shares and by discouragement among traders over the performance of the list after its "inflation" flurry early in the week. Trading had been extremely dull and listless and prices in most departments had gradually sagged to lower levels. The spectacular rebound in wheat, however, caused a quick swing to the buying side and prices moved ahead almost steadily from then to the final gong.

All sections of the list responded to the "urge" of the commodity markets, most of the rails recovering their early losses and a few of them finishing the day with net gains. The fact that the roads are seeking a freight increase emphasizes the unfavorable factors in their problem of rising costs.

Metal Shares Strong.

Metal shares were conspicuously strong under the leadership of U. S. Smelting, which finished more than 3 points up.

Steel stocks moved up easily, United States Steel bettering its position by more than half a point and various other old line industrials did their part to make it look like a market. American Can closed at 101¼, up a point.

Du Pont was a favorite in the chemical group, leading Hercules Powder and Atlas into new high ground. Monsanto also hit a new high.

In the motors both General Motors and Chrysler met some demand in a quiet way and moved up a notch or so.

Cigaret price fixing boosted Phillip Morris a point or so on large volume, but the peak price was shaded somewhat in the last few minutes of trading. Oil and aviation issues continued to mark time.

BOETTCHER FIRM TAKES EASTMAN CHICAGO OFFICE

Boggs, George E. Haskins, J. Edward McMahon, William T. Jones, and Walter I. Schiff. The grain department will include George H. Tanner and Harvey S. Williams.

In a letter to its clients Eastman, Dillon & Co. has asked instructions on the transfer of more than 2,500 accounts.

TRADE VOLUME SWELLS, SAYS WEEKLY REVIEW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 13.—Industrial operations increased during the week, wholesale trading was brought to the best volume since the early part of April, and previous gains in retail sales were extended, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., declared today.

An impetus to continued business expansion, which frequently is overlooked, the review pointed out, is the mounting total of bank deposits. With more closed banks being reopened each week, the increase in government expenditures, new federal financing planned for late September, and the numerous loans in connection with the national housing act, bank deposits are expected to advance by more than a billion dollars over the current total before October.

Index Rises 2 Points.

"The business activity barometer," the review says, "regained 2 points of the 6 points lost in the week preceding, rising from 62 to 64.

"Whatever the effect of recent declining industrial operations and drouth devastation in farming districts may have on future purchasing power, consumers at present appear to be in the buying mood again, and some surprising gains in retail sales were reported from many sections of the country.

"Gains ranging from 5 to 15 per cent were reported from the previous week's total, while increases over the 1933 figures ranged from 10 per cent in the east to 40 per cent in the southwest.

Highest Since 1931.

The heavy influx of visitors brought activity in some of the western wholesale markets to the highest level in any comparative week since 1931, despite the heavy gain in evidence at this period a year ago. The majority of the buyers hold cheerful views regarding expansion in fall distribution, yet they are gauging their orders more closely to weekly sales records than at any time in more than a year.

"The outstanding changes in wholesale trade during the last few months have been the greater tendency to place advance commitments and the wider interest in the better qualities of merchandise.

"Industrial operations are at a higher rate than last week, with steel, motors, rubber goods, shoes, and electrical appliances and equipment making the largest contribution to the increased operations."

EXTRA COMMON DIVIDEND VOTED BY GLIDDEN CO.

The Glidden company yesterday declared an extra dividend of 15 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents a share on the common stock. The company also declared a regular quarterly disbursement of $1.75 a share on the prior preference stock. Both dividends are payable Oct. 1 to stock of record Sept. 14.

The Scotten Dillon company yesterday declared a dividend of 30 cents a share, payable Aug. 15 to stock of record Aug. 6. This compares with payments of 30 cents on May 15 and 40 cents on Feb. 15 and 10 cents on Nov. 15, 1933.

Lerner Stores corporation declared a dividend of $1.62½ on the 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock on account of accumulations. The dividend is payable Aug. 1.

S. Bayard Colgate, president of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet company, stated yesterday that the dividend of 12½ cents on the common stock declared Wednesday is to be considered as a regular quarterly payment.

Chicago Market Will List Stock of National Gypsum

The governing committee of the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday approved the application of the National Gypsum company to list 130,464 shares $5 par value class A common stock, to be admitted to trading immediately. The committee also approved the application of Armour & Co. of Illinois to list 3,433,878 additional shares of common stock $5 par value, to be issued and admitted to trading upon the conversion of the company's $6 cumulative convertible prior preferred stock.

Cuban Cabinet Annuls 10% Tax on Exports of Money

HAVANA, July 13.—(AP)—The Cuban cabinet tonight annulled a decree which imposed a 10 per cent tax on money sent out of the country. Enforcement of the decree was opposed by commercial interests. The government made a concession by issuing permits to exempt from the tax money sent to the United States to pay for goods purchased there. For a time American banks refused to handle foreign money transactions. The decree never was authoritatively interpreted.

Montgomery Ward Plans Another Store for East

Montgomery Ward & Co. yesterday announced completion of plans for a new $65,000 store building in New Kensington, Pa. A long term lease has been taken on the property. The present building will be razed and replaced with a standard Ward department store unit consisting of three floors, mezzanine and basement. The store will be opened in November, and will carry complete department store stocks.

BEG YOUR PARDON

It was stated in an article yesterday that O. P. Decker was elected a director of American National Bank and Trust company. This kas an error. Mr. Decker was elected vice president.

On July 7 it was stated that accumulated back dividends on Maytag company $3 preference stock were paid off on May 1. The accumulated dividends on the $6 preferred were cleared up last May, but those of the $3 preference stock are still in arrears.

SPANISH VILLAGE FILES PETITION TO REORGANIZE

Two Loop Buildings Also Are Involved.

The Spanish Village of the World's Fair and two large loop buildings and several other companies yesterday were thrown into the wholesale debt laundering machinery set up in federal court here since the passage of the recent amendment to the bankruptcy laws.

Creditors petitioned for reorganization of the State-Lake building, operating the theater and office building at the southwest corner of State and Lake streets. It is represented to have liabilities of $2,202,679, principally in funded debt. Assets were placed at $1,000,000 in the petition, said to consist of the 12 story building. A receivership is pending.

Another Building Acts.

Voluntary action was taken by the Wabash-Harrison Building corporation, which operates the Harrison hotel and garage building. The property is the main asset, its present value being undetermined. Debts are put at $2,300,000.

Espana Touristica, Inc., which owns and operates the Spanish Village as its main asset, filed a voluntary action. The firm declared gate receipts are assigned in escrow to the City National Bank and Trust company for construction costs of $180,652 for the Starrett Building company. The village also owes an unpaid balance of $49,000 for buildings bought from International Bazaars, Inc.

It also has outstanding a loan of $30,000 and other obligations of $22,500. The only stated asset is $19,000 due from concessionaires who have not paid because of poor business. The restaurant, it was stated, is separate from the village.

Standard Club Named.

The Standard club also asked reorganization. The principal asset is the 10 story building at 320 Plymouth court, erected at a cost of $2,960,000. Debts are placed at more than $2,000,000, including a first mortgage of $782,000 and a second mortgage of $1,000,000.

Others named in petitions were: Great Lakes Supply company, assets [book value], $650,000, and liabilities, $497,500; James G. Heggie & Sons, assets [aside from real estate], $68,000, and liabilities, $423,000; Rushcourt Building corporation, assets [real estate], $325,000, and liabilities, $173,581; Berson Building corporation, assets, $400,000, and liabilities, $216,499; Botschen Furniture company, assets, $30,300, and liabilities, $40,300.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson named Gilbert H. Scribner temporary trustee of the Hotel Sherman company pending reorganization.

Objections, alleging bad faith, were filed yesterday by the Chicago Title and Trust company as trustee for the Bower Building corporation, whose reorganization is sought. The title firm said it can see no benefit in proceedings under section 77B since banks holding enough bonds to block reorganization are opposed to any action but foreclosure.

NEW YORK STATE OBTAINS LOAN AT 3/8 OF 1 PER CENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 13.—New York state borrowed $30,000,000 today for seven months at the record low annual rate of three-eighths of 1 per cent. Controler Morris T. Tremaine allotted $15,000,000 of the loan to the Chase National bank and a like amount to the Bank of the Manhattan company. The transaction took the form of the sale of notes dated July 16, 1934, and due on Feb. 15, 1935, at par.

The nearest approach to the current low rate of three-eighths of 1 per cent was on May 10 last, when the state borrowed $15,000,000 for ten months at the annual rate of 0.45 per cent. Before that the record was one-half of 1 per cent, when the state sold $5,000,000 of three month notes on March 2.

10 govt. issues	110.67	110.60	110.14	101.72

New York, July 13.—Bond prices eased slightly on the stock exchange today as trading slowed up perceptibly. Transfers approximated $9,764,000 par value, compared with $14,466,000 yesterday. The turnover in government issues aggregated about $1,200,000, against $5,370,000 the day before.

United States government bonds finished generally lower, down 5-32ds point to up the same fraction. The first Liberty 4¼s enjoyed the distinction of being the only issue of the group to attain a new high for the year. Domestic corporation bonds were irregularly lower and foreign loans were slightly higher on the average.

Financing Plans Aid Rails.

With new financing in prospect for the Baltimore and Ohio and for the Van Sweringen rail interests, the bonds of these groups were generally higher on the day. Most of the high grade rail issues held their gains of the last few days, in some cases scoring modest gains. Speculative rail issues were generally lower. Utility bonds showed a better degree of firmness than did the industrials.

New tops for the year or longer were reached by Santa Fe general 4s, Buffalo General Electric 4¼s, Consolidated Gas 4½s, Louisville Gas 5s, Cleveland Union Terminal 5s, National Steel 5s, Lackawanna and Western 4s, Pacific Telephone first 5s, American Telephone 4s, Pure Oil 5½s, Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s, and Union Pacific first 4s.

—German Bonds Irregular.

On the eve of formal protests to the German government on behalf of American holders of the Dawes and Young plan loans for a continuance of the debt service, these issues were only lightly traded. The Dawes Plan 7s closed up ⅜ and the Young Plan 5½s down ¼. Other German loans showed minor irregularities. French, British, and Scandinavian loans were firm. Argentine government bonds showed the principal weakness in the Latin American group.

Both domestic and foreign bonds on the curb exchange were steady to firm in fairly active dealings.

Universal Leaf Tobacco.

Investors' Guide: Please give a review of Universal Leaf Tobacco common. What is its rating?—H. G. H.

Answer: Universal Leaf Tobbaco Company, Inc., occupies a leading position in the buying, processing and storing of tobacco. Its business is international, about 60 per cent of sales being made abroad, mostly in England and the far east.

Operations in the year ended June 30, 1933, were helped by the credit of $389,000 from the inventory reserve. Volume was 41 per cent higher than in the preceding year and earnings hit a new peak. A news report dated May 2, 1934, said that both volume and profits showed a slight recession for the first nine months, but with an improvement in conditions could easily equal the previous year's earnings.

1933	$17,362,000	$1,631,000	$7.77
1932	12,310,000	562,000	2.51
1931	14,182,000	1,228,000	5.07
1930	14,466 000	1,067,000	3.92

Current position on June 30, 1933, was strong. There was no funded debt. Capitalization consists of 63,750 shares of 8 per cent $100 par preferred and 145,241 shares of no par common. The common pays regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents a quarter. Extras to date this year aggregate $1 a share. In 1933 an extra of $1 was paid.

Both the preferred and common are high grade.

More Information Needed.

Investors' Guide: I ask you very kindly for what advice you could give me with regard to my holding of five real estate bonds. I bought them of Straus Brothers, Chicago, for $500 each.—Miss B. F. O.

Answer: Without having the names of the issues which you hold we cannot furnish you with any information on their standing. If you will give us the title of your bonds we shall be glad to furnish you with information on them if data are available.

Florida Power.

Investors' Guide: I am holding a thousand dollar Florida Power first 5½ per cent bond due 1979. Is it still controlled by Penn-Southern Power corporation?—H. D.

Answer: Yes, Florida Power corporation is still a subsidiary of Penn-Southern Power corporation. The latter was formed to take over several former Middle West Utilities holdings when Middle West went into receivership.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 13.—(AP)—Cotton goods markets were stronger today in moderate trading. Rayon yarn sales continued spotty. Silk throwsters have called a meeting to consider plans for curtailment of production. Silk goods were in moderate demand, with larger preparations being made for production of silk underwear cloths. Wool goods were quiet. Burlaps held about steady, with trading light.
